PERMISSION TO RETIRE OF BOMBAY CIVILIANS.

With reference to para. 2 of Government Resolution No. 2,287, dated Aug. 8 last, H.E. the Hon. the Governor in Council is pleased to publish the following despatch from her Majesty's Secretary of State for India in Council, dated 7th ultimo, to his Excellency the Hon. the Governor in Council, Bombay:—

"The despatch of your Excellency in Council dated Jan. 14, suggesting that the concession of permission to retire offered in 1877 to civilians of twenty years' standing, may be extended to civilians of 1858, has been considered by me in Council. I understand your Excellency in Council to state, that in consequence of the famine it was impossible for civilians of 1857 to avail themselves of the concession offered, and that on this account civilians of 1858, should be permitted to take advantage of the favour granted in 1877. I cannot accede to this application, but I will allow civilians of 1857 to retire this year on the terms offered in 1877."

Official Papers.

THE PRESENTATION OF MEMORIALS.

An important Notification in the Home Department has been issued by the Government of India. It is as follows:—

Fort William, March 29.—The following rules* for the submission, receipt, and transmission of memorials and other papers of the same class, addressed to Her Majesty the Queen, Empress of India, or to the Right Honourable the Secretary of State for India, by private persons or by officers of all civil departments, are published for general information; and the rules published under Home Department Notifications No. 3,742, dated 21st August, 1867, and No. 461, dated 31st July, 1877, are cancelled:

I.—No memorial will be received or attended to unless forwarded as hereinafter prescribed.

II.—Every memorial should be accompanied by a letter requesting its transmission to the authority to which it is addressed.

III.—Every memorial addressed to her Majesty or to the Secretary of State for India should be forwarded through the Local Government under which the writer is residing or is employed.

IV.—Memorials to Her Majesty or to the Secretary of State from persons in the Madras and Bombay Presidencies should be forwarded direct by the Local Government, with a full statement of facts and an expression of opinion, except in the case of memorials which relate to any rule or standing order of the Government of India, or which, if granted, would cause expenditure for which the Imperial and not the Local Government would be primarily responsible, or which relate to any legislative proceeding of the Governor-General in Council. Such memorials should be forwarded with a covering letter, containing a full statement of facts and an expression of opinion to the Government of India in the Department having cognisance of the subject-matter of such memorial, by which department the memorials will be transmitted to the Secretary of State.

V.—Memorials to her Majesty or to the Secretary of State from persons in Bengal, the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, or the Punjab, should be forwarded by the Local Government, with a full statement of facts and an expression of opinion, to the Government of India in the proper department for transmission to the authority addressed.*

VI.—Memorials to her Majesty or to the Secretary of State from persons in the minor administrations—the Central Provinces, British Burmah, Berar, Mysore, Coorg, and Assam—should be forwarded with a full statement of facts and an expression of opinion by the Chief Commissioner, or other officer charged with the administration of the province, to the Government of India in the proper department for transmission to the authority addressed.†

VII.—No limit is fixed to the time within which an appeal from an order of the Governments in India must be preferred to the Home Department, except in case of appeals from a judicial decision in which the Judge is a political officer, and in which the appeal ordinarily lies to Government in the Political Department. Such appeals‡ must be preferred within a period of twelve months from the date of communication to the persons concerned of the order to which objection is taken.

VIII.—Memorials may be transmitted either in manuscript or in print, but must, with all accompanying documents, be properly authenticated by the signature of the memorialist on each sheet.

IX.—Memorials, together with their accompanying documents, should be in English. If the accompanying documents must necessarily be forwarded in the vernacular, an English translation should be appended, which should be attested by the signature of the memorialist.

N.B.—It will be well for the transmitting office to examine such translations, and if they are found to be incorrect or faulty, to notice the fact in sending on the memorial.

X.—It is not necessary that memorials should be forwarded in duplicate or triplicate. The originals will invariably be transmitted to England, a copy being made and retained by the Government of India, if necessary, for record.

XI.—As a general rule, the transmission to England of a memorial duly forwarded through the proper channel will not be delayed by the transmitting Government in India beyond a month after the receipt of such memorial.

XII.—Governments and Administrations in India are vested with discretionary power to withhold the transmission of memorials addressed to her Majesty or to the Secretary of State in the following cases:—

- 1.—When a memorial is illegible or unintelligible.
- 2.—When a memorial contains disrespectful or improper language.
- 3.—When a second memorial is presented after a decision has already been given by the authority to which it is addressed, and when no new facts or circumstances are adduced which afford grounds for a reconsideration of the case. A memorial addressed to her Majesty by a person whose appeal to the Secretary of State has already been rejected, shall be held to be a second memorial to the same authority, and shall not be transmitted.

4.—When a memorial is a mere application for pecuniary assistance by a person manifestly possessing no claim.

5.—When a memorial is an application for employment under one of the Governments in India from a person not belonging to the covenanted service.

6.—When a memorial is a mere appeal from a judicial decision.

7.—When a memorial is addressed by an officer still in the public service and has reference to his prospective claim to pension.

XIII.—The Government of India may withhold the transmission of a memorial addressed to her Majesty or to the Secretary of State, unless the memorialist has previously memorialised the Government of India and the Local Government concerned on the same subject.

XIV.—A list of memorials withheld under the discretionary power conferred by Rule XII. will be forwarded quarterly to the Government of India in the case of memorials withheld by the Local Government under the same discretionary power, and by the Government of India in the Department concerned, to the Secretary of State.

* Appeals by private persons from the orders of Lieutenant-Governors lie, in the first instance, to the Governor-General in Council. An appeal to the Secretary of State will be only in event of an appeal to the Governor-General in Council having been rejected.

† In these minor administrations also, appeals by individuals from the orders of the Chief Commissioners, &c., lie, in the first instance to the Governor-General in Council, and thereafter to the Secretary of State.

‡ When a judicial decision of the nature referred to has been communicated to the party or parties concerned before the 31st July, 1877, he or they may appeal from such decision within eighteen months from that date.

THE INDIAN SECTION OF THE PARIS EXHIBITION.

We take the following interesting account from the Times of the 1st May. It appears in the Paris correspondent's communication of the day previous, and will gratify those who desire that India should not be thrust out of her proper place through want of competent exponents :—

As of the Exhibition generally, it is especially true of the British Indian section that it is the most complete and best arranged exposition of the natural products, arts, and manufactures of India that has ever been made either in London or Paris. In sumptuousness it exceeds even the Indian contributions to the great Exhibition of 1851, while its more thoroughly scientific and artistic arrangement is its distinguishing characteristic. The Indian section in general effect has always been an eyesore in every International Exhibition, whereas the present Indian Court is one of the most beautiful and striking features in the Paris Exhibition. It was the inspiration of real genius which suggested to Mr. C. Purdon Clarke the building of the central case occupied by commercial exhibitors in the form of pavilions connected by an arcade and gallery; and when wandering by it—for it is about 150ft. long and 30ft. high—among the exquisite contributions from the Maharajah of Cashmere, and the superb collections of carpets exhibited by Messrs. Vincent, Robinson, and Co. and Messrs. Watson and Bontor, and other exhibitors, one feels completely shut out of Europe and lost in some veritable Oriental bazaar. The presents made to the Prince of Wales are arranged round the central case in ordinary South Kensington Museum cases; while at the entrance of the court has been placed a model of the equestrian statue of the Prince by the eminent sculptor Boehm, presented by Sir Albert Sassoon to the town of Bombay in commemoration of his Royal Highness's visit to India in 1875-76. The general view can, therefore, be easily imagined to be most effective. The most gratifying thing of all is the economy with which so admirable an effect has been produced. The waste of resources in connection with the previous appearance of India at International Exhibitions has been something incredible, and the expenditure at Vienna on account of the Indian section fairly exhausted the patience of the Government. On the present occasion, therefore, the Secretary of State in Council simply handed over £3,000 to her Majesty's Commission for the Paris Exhibition to cover the cost of the carriage of his Royal Highness's collection from London to Paris, the custody thereof, and the incidental expenses, and it is thoroughly understood that the cost on account of it, at least as chargeable to Indian revenues, will not go beyond that sum. Of course, the Prince of Wales's presents exceed in value anything ever expended by the Indian Government on former Exhibitions; but the success of the present Indian Court is entirely due to the effective way in which these presents have been arranged, and to the unique coup d'œil presented by the court itself; and when it is considered how limited are the funds placed at the disposal of the Executive Commissioners the result cannot but reflect the highest praise on the officers of the British Commission, and particularly on Mr. C. Purdon Clarke. Another feature which contributes to the success of the Indian Court is the handbook to it, which has been written by Dr. George Birdwood, c.s.i., special assistant in the Department of Commerce and Statistics of the India-office, London. For the first time in the experience of International Exhibitions we are now furnished with a general exposition of the art and manufactures of India, written in a popular and graphic style, which will certainly go a long way towards exciting an interest in things Indian generally. Writers on Indian subjects, as a rule, only weary; but here is a book which, whatever else it may effect, at least succeeds in interesting. From the first page to the last it rivets the reader's attention, and seems to enhance infinitely the educational value of the splendid examples of the sumptuary arts of India, for the exhibition of which the gratitude of Europe is pre-eminently due to the Prince of Wales. A work so important, which is not a simple handbook, but a practical and philosophical treatise on the history and development of the industrial arts and commerce of India, on which the author has obviously bestowed the greatest labour and the most solid research, will certainly find its way into general circulation, and it is sure to be received as a technical work quite independently of its connection with the Exhibition. Besides giving a special description of the principal objects of art in the Prince's collection and of the finest of the carpets exhibited by Messrs. Vincent Robinson and Co., and Messrs. Watson and Bontor, Dr. Birdwood, in his introduction, points out how the commerce between Europe and India first originated along the southern shores of Europe and Asia, or Litus Ariarum, as he calls it, and how the course of that commerce through the Euphrates Valley and Egypt influenced the destiny of the nations of Western Asia and the Mediterranean through all time. Separate notices are given of the articles of Indian and Eastern commerce which illustrate its historical development. In the concluding chapter of his work on the knot and flower pattern, Dr. Birdwood traces the Indian cone pattern through all its diversities of form to the lotus bed and bunches of the date palm fruits, and the flower pattern to the lotus flower and frowns of the date palm and soma flowers. He traces these forms through all their variations, as the honeysuckle and palmette of Greek and Roman decoration, the shell ornament of the Renaissance, and the forms observed in Persian, Indian, and Chinese art. Dr. Birdwood connects the ornamentation of Oriental carpets with the veils of ancient temples, which were embroidered by women with the emblems of the deity worshipped, the chief emblem being the date palm as the tree of life, with the knot and flower pattern derived from it, and the lotus and soma plant—all emblems of the fulness and pleasures of life. Dr. Birdwood holds that all Indian art has been profoundly influenced by Assyrian, Persian, and Greek art through 3,000 years of intimate commercial intercourse through the Euphrates Valley, and by Vasco de Gama down to the discovery of the way to India by the Cape of Good Hope."

Miscellaneous.

INDIA OFFICE, APRIL 30.—The Queen has been graciously pleased to nominate and appoint Sir John Strachey, K.C.S.I., Member of the Council of the Governor-General of India, to be an Extra Knight Grand Commander of the Most Exalted Order of the Star of India. —Gazette.

EXPORT OF SPECIE.—The Peninsular and Oriental steamer Peshawar has left with £176,834, £45,000 in gold (£35,000 bars and £10,000 coin) being for Bombay, and £60,000 in bar silver for Calcutta. Nothing but dollars are consigned to Hong Kong and Shanghai, and the respective value is £22,240 and £49,250. There is also £344 in bar gold for Alexandria.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The tenders for £500,000 in bills on India were received on May 1 at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were—To Calcutta, £461,500, at an average rate of 1s. 8½d.; and to Bombay, £38,500, at an average rate of 1s. 8½d. Tenders on both Presidencies at 1s. 8½d. will receive about 14 per cent.; above that price in full. Although the amounts tendered for have been practically allotted to Calcutta, the Council have had to submit to a reduction of fully ¼d.

COAL-FIELDS IN CHINA.—It is worthy of a note that the Chinese are themselves about to work a coal-field. The superstitions which have up to the present time prevented the exploration of one of the largest coal-producing countries in the world have been overcome. A mandarin has permission to form a company to work for coal at about 120 miles west of Cheefoo, and to introduce all modern scientific appliances, and to make a tramway to the sea.

INDIAN FINANCE.—A Parliamentary return just issued shows that the total loans in England chargeable on the revenues of India at the close of the half-year ending March 31 last were £59,677,033, and the other debts and liabilities, £1,771,050. The amount of interest payable during the half-year was £1,253,522, and the amount of debt incurred in the same period £4,184,000. Of this last total £3,000,000 was raised in India Four per Cent. Debentures, and £1,180,000 in India Four per Cent. Stock; £4,236,016 was raised towards meeting the expenditure incurred in the relief of the famine in Madras and Bombay.

BOMBAY GAS COMPANY (LIMITED).—During the half-year ended with Dec. 31 the receipts of the Bombay Gas Company (Limited) were £23,880, and the gas and meter rental at £19,750 was £1,136 higher than in the corresponding period, while the cost of working showed a slight reduction. After adding the balance brought forward, there was a credit balance of £11,022, from which it is proposed to take £250 for the reserve fund and to write off £273 from the same. The debenture interest being provided for, the directors recommend a dividend of 4 per cent., making 7½ per cent. for the year, which, absorbing £9,600, will leave £825 to be subsequently dealt with.

ORDER OF THE CROWN OF INDIA.—On April 29 her Majesty the Queen held an Investiture of the Imperial Order of the Crown of India, when the following ladies were introduced to her Majesty's presence, and were invested with the badge of the Order by the Queen :—Georgina Caroline, Marchioness of Salisbury; Henrietta Anne Theodosia, Marchioness of Ripon; Mary Louisa, Countess Dowager of Elgin; Blanche Julia, Countess of Mayo; Mary Catherine, Lady Hobart; Lady Jane Emma Baring; Anne Jane Charlotte, Baroness Napier of Ettrick; Harriette Katherine, Baroness Lawrence; Cecilia Francis, Lady Northcote; Mary Augusta, Lady Temple; Caroline Lucy, Lady Denison; Mrs. Gathorne Hardy. Each lady kissed hands on being presented.

SIR F. GOLDSMID, BART., M.P.—A fatal accident occurred to this gentleman on Thursday last. On the arrival of a train at Waterloo Station he stepped from a carriage while it was in motion, and falling between the train and the platform received serious injuries. He was at once removed to St. Thomas's Hospital, where he expired soon afterwards. Sir Francis was in his seventy-first year. He was eldest son of Sir Isaac Lyon Goldsmid, by the second daughter of Mr. Abraham Goldsmid, of Morden, Surrey. He married in 1839 the daughter of Mr. Moses Asher Goldsmid, of Gloucester-place, and succeeded his father in 1859. Sir Francis is succeeded by his nephew, Mr. Julian Goldsmid, M.P. for Rochester.

SURVEY REPORTS.—The General "Report" on the operation of the Great Trigonometrical Survey of India during 1876-77, by Colonel J. T. Walker, C.B., which has just reached this country, furnishes an account of much valuable work which has been done by the Mullah in his explorations on the unsurveyed portion of the River Indus and in and around the plateau known to the people of the country as the Kohistan, which contains the sources of the Swat and Panjkora rivers. Colonel Walker states that "the explorations of the Mullah have added much to our knowledge of the interesting region lying beyond our northern Trans-Indus frontier," though a good deal still remains to be done. A sketch map is given, which has been constructed to illustrate the Mullah's operations, and which also shows the localities where more information is wanted. The results of a recent reconnaissance of the Karambar and the Nagar Valleys by Captain Biddulph are also given on this map.

TROOPS FROM INDIA.—The Junna, Indian troopship, Captain Parsons, which left Bombay on March 28, Suez on April 11, and Malta on the 18th, arrived at Portsmouth on the 28th ult. She brings 478 invalids, 15 time-expired men, 26 men to join depots, 138 women, 345 children, and the following officers:—

HIBBERT LECTURES.—On Thursday Max Müller delivered the second of these lectures in the Chapter House of Westminster Abbey, his subject being, "Is Fetishism a Primitive Form of Religion?" There was again a large attendance. He showed that it was only during the last hundred years that the word "fetish" had come to be used as representing the lowest form of religion. An unwarrantable liberty had been taken in extending the meaning of the term, and nothing could justify the conclusion that in former times the African tribes worshipped stocks and stones and nothing else. Some of these savages had a religion and philosophy of life which would bear comparison with that of civilised nations. He did not dispute that fetish worship was widely prevalent in Africa, but what he contended for was that there was hardly any religion without something which we called fetish worship in it; that there was no religion which consisted entirely of fetish worship; that fetishism was a corruption of religion; that the men were capable of a higher religion than the mere worship of stocks and stones; and that they entertained very true sentiments of the Deity. Fetishism was far from being a primitive form of faith; on the contrary, it was a secondary or tertiary corruption of an earlier, simpler, and truer religion.

GLOOMY PICTURE OF INDIA.—The Times, in reviewing a reprint from Fraser's Magazine, published under the title of "Resources of Modern Countries," by Messrs. Longmans and Co., says that nothing can be more sweeping than the statement in the book of the alleged stationary condition of India; the absence of almost all genuine material progress; the inelasticity of the revenue; the diminishing excess of exports over imports in recent years and the non-increase in this foreign trade itself; the burdensomeness of the constant additions to the Indian Debt for famines and reproductive works. According to the author, "Our financing in India has become a monstrous danger, which weak words cannot conceal." And as to trade he writes:—"Our exports to India have been inflated by the money we have lent her, to the extent of many millions, and her exports to us have been strained by the rapidity with which English sojourners in her, for them, uncongenial climate, have wanted to make their fortunes, and by the incessant requirements of a most expensive Government, by far the most steadily expensive that India ever had." The reviewer believes that should we improve our Indian policy, there would be some improvement in the condition of India; but that the present artificial stimulus to trade would be removed and its volume would diminish. In any case he thinks that our exports to India will be diminished by the manufactures now being set up there under a protectionist tariff.

LAND MORTGAGE BANK OF INDIA (LIMITED).—A special general meeting of the shareholders of the Land Mortgage Bank of India (Crédit Foncier Indien) (Limited) was held in the Board-room at the Offices, East India Avenue, on April 29, under the presidency of Mr. J. R. Boyson. The Chairman explained that that was the fourth meeting which had been held for the purpose of making such alterations in the articles of association and memorandum as would enable the bank to write off such an amount of the capital of the bank as was not represented by assets, or had been irretrievably lost. At the previous meeting the proposal was approved. There were present in person and by proxy shareholders representing 64,223 shares, and of that number there was only one dissentient shareholder, who, he thought, could not thoroughly understand the effect of the resolution. It was not really reducing the capital of the bank, but simply looking a fact in the face, and meeting a loss incurred some years ago in a manly manner by writing it off. He concluded by reading the special resolution passed at a former meeting—"That the sum of £232,693, part of the paid-up capital of the Land Mortgage Bank of India (Crédit Foncier Indien) (Limited), having been lost or being unrepresented by available assets, be and the same is hereby cancelled; and that the conditions contained in the memorandum of association of the company be so far modified that the capital of the company be reduced from £2,000,000 divided into 100,000 shares of £20 each, with £5 paid thereon, to the sum of £1,697,326, divided into 95,624 shares of £17. 15s. each, with £2. 15s. per share paid thereon and £15 per share uncalled," and moved that this resolution be confirmed. Mr. R. P. Harrison briefly seconded the motion, which was agreed to.

ORIENTAL BANK CORPORATION.—At the annual general meeting of the Oriental Bank Corporation, Mr. George Arbuthnot (the chairman) presiding, the Chairman, in moving the adoption of the report and balance-sheet, after declaring a dividend of £1. 5s. per share, in addition to a similar interim dividend, expressed the very deep regret which the Board felt that they should be so disappointing; but perhaps he might be allowed to express the strong confidence they entertained that they would be found to be exceptional. The increase under the head of deposits bearing interest had been about £286,000, while the falling off in the deposits not bearing interest was about £127,000. With regard to their losses, over three-fourths of the sum taken from the reserve fund was attributable to their losses in Ceylon and Port Elizabeth. In Ceylon large accounts, which had for a long time attracted the notice of the Board, were viewed over sanguinely by their local manager, whose expectations, expressed repeatedly to the Board, had been very sadly negated by results. After a lengthened examination by one of their inspectors, they considered it right to press for a settlement of this matter, and the death of one of the principal obligants occurring at the same time revealed to them that they had been the victims of systematic fraud to a most serious extent, and they found the realisation of assets to be deplorably different from what they had been led to expect. At Port Elizabeth they had suffered heavily from the unexpected insolvency of one of their largest constituents. In neither of these cases could they acquit the managers of serious blame, and at both places the management had been changed. The Board did not wish to screen themselves from any responsibility attaching to them, and they admitted that it would have been better had they taken prompt action earlier in this matter. They had now organised a very greatly improved system of accounts. In making provision for these unfortunate losses and others spread over their numerous branches and agencies, it was a matter of very serious consideration whether they should draw on the reserve fund to the extent they did or reduce the dividend; but, considering that the dividend, although a fair one, had been brought down to the lowest rate they had ever paid, and feeling that the reserve fund was properly available for making provision for their losses, and also looking to the position of the bank, they thought there was no necessity to inflict serious inconvenience, if nothing worse, on the shareholders, by reducing the dividend further, and they only hoped that what they had done would be approved by the shareholders. So much for the past. With regard to the future, they still had a very substantial reserve—£325,000; their business was in no way imperilled, and they would profit by their past experience. They had appointed a fourth travelling inspector to their branches, which was a measure to which they attached considerable importance. Barring unforeseen contingencies, they really did think they were warranted in throwing out the expectation in their report that they would be able before very long to replace the amount taken from the reserve fund, and give a reasonable dividend, such as at present. The motion having been seconded, considerable discussion followed, in the course of which the chairman was asked whether a "clean breast" had been made as to the losses—were they at the bottom of them? Mr. Dickenson said that in former reports they had been told that "ample provision had been made for bad and doubtful debts," and asked whether this was a correct statement. The Chairman, in reply, said the item of landed or other property of the Corporation had been written down to a point below which it was considered unnecessary to go. He believed, on a very competent valuation, it was worth about £120,000 more than the amount at which it stood, £261,369, without reckoning any furniture at their various establishments. This year the directors had written off more than their managers considered necessary to meet losses, and they hoped some of the amount written off would be recovered. They certainly believed they were at the bottom of their losses. As to the rate of interest allowed, they received money at 4 per cent., fixed for one year, while other Indian banks were quite ready to give 5 per cent.; and the average rate they gave for money deposited was 3½ per cent. The motion was adopted nem. con., and the usual complimentary votes terminated the proceedings.

A SPECIMEN OF THE NATIVE PRESS.—The new Vernacular Press Bill has been described by the Poona Sunbeam, a paper which prints about one-third of its articles in English, as "The Dawn of the Reign of Terror in India," and condemned as unnecessary and unwarranted by the utterances of the native papers. But litera scripta manet. So recently as on the 10th inst. the Sunbeam itself, after a general denunciation of Anglo-Indians all round, said that "England governs India, not by the State Secretary and provincial governors alone, but associates those men with a large regiment of persons who, though leading the life of swindlers and loafers in the streets of London, become in India transformed into the rulers, not only of the common people, but of the destinies of our princes and of the upper ten of our society." The sentence occurs in one of a series of articles defending the existence of the large armies kept up by Native States. On the whole it will probably be thought that the Sunbeam argues practically for the Bill more effectively than in theory against it.—Pioneer.

EXPLOSIONS.—The party of engineers who lately arrived in Calcutta to blow up the wrecks in the river, have lost no time in commencing operations. The Englishman writes: "Our office is situated upwards of one hundred yards from the river, but it was violently shaken twice on the afternoon of the 14th April, on the second occasion more than in the fatal accident at the end of Hare-street two years ago. We trust that Government or the Port Commissioners are prepared to pay for any damage that may be caused by their blasting operations."—Pioneer.

ORIENTAL CONGRESS AT FLORENCE.—The fourth Oriental Congress will be held at Florence next September, from the 12th to the 18th of the month, in the Palazzo Riccardi, lent for the purpose by the Provincial Council. An exhibition of various objects illustrative of the East, such as books, manuscripts, coins, maps, idols and the like, will be on view in the Hall of Luca Giordano and the adjoining rooms, and contributions to the Exhibition are requested. Tickets of admission to the Congress cost f.12, but the delegates are allowed to grant them only to scholars and other qualified persons. The Congress will hold eight sessions on North Egyptian, on the Semitic languages, including Assyrian, on Iranian, including Armenian, on Indian, on Indo-European generally, on Chinese Indo-Chinese, and Tibetan, on Ural-Altaic, and on Polynesian. The following is a list of the foreign delegates:—London, Professor Th. Chénery; Robert Cust; Edinburgh, John Muir; Oxford, Professor James Legge, Professor A. H. Sayce; Cambridge, Professor W. NOTES ON MUHAMMADANISM

REV. T. P. HUGHES, M.R.A.S.,

C. M. S., Missionary to the Afghans, Peshawar.

Opinions of the Press on the First Edition.

"Altogether an admirable little book. It combines two excellent qualities, abundance of facts and lack of theories. . . . On every one of the numerous heads (over fifty) into which the book is divided Mr. Hughes furnishes a large amount of very valuable information, which it would be exceedingly difficult to collect from even a large library of works on the subject. The book might well be called a 'Dictionary of Muhammadan Theology,' for we know of no English work which combines a methodical arrangement (and consequently facility of reference), with fulness of information in so high a degree as the little volume before us."—The Academy.

"It contains multum in parvo, and is about the best outlines of the tenets of the Muslim faith which we have seen. It has, moreover, the rare merit of being accurate; and although it contains a few passages which we would gladly see expunged, it cannot fail to be useful to all Government employes who have to deal with Muhammadans, whilst to Missionaries it will be invaluable."—The Times of India.

"This small book is the most luminous, most convenient, and, we think, the most accurate, outline of the tenets and practices of Islamism that we have met with. It seems exactly the sort of comprehensive and trustworthy book in small compass, on this subject, that we and many more have often looked for in vain. . . . The author has evidently studied his subject in a faithful, laborious, and scholarly manner, and has not only studied but mastered it. The work is of great value for general students, and for men whose work lies among the Mussulman population, such as Civil Servants and Missionaries, it seems to be the very work that is wanted."—The Friend of India.

"In brief compass it contains a large amount of reliable information. Instead of theories and fancies, facts are placed before us. Muhammadanism is represented as it really is, not as it is supposed that it might possibly be. Instead of retailing the speculations current in literary society at home, Mr. Hughes furnishes us with brief but incisive statements, which, so far as they go, leave nothing to be desired."—The Church Missionary Intelligencer.

COMMENTARIES ON THE PUNJAB CAMPAIGN, 1848-49.

By Captain J. H. LAURENCE-ARCHER, Author of "The Orders of Chivalry."

The maxim that perfect accuracy in contemporaneous history is impossible applies with more force to the history of military operations than to any other; to the history of the second Sikh war more than to the history of any other military operation. The despatches of Lord Gough were so notoriously inaccurate that the Indian press of the day did not hesitate to compare them in that respect to the bulletins of Napoleon. They certainly resembled those famous documents in no other respect, but in that one they rivalled them. Somewhat later, indeed, there appeared in successive numbers of the Calcutta Review two articles on the subject. These, it is believed, were from the accomplished pen of the late Sir Henry Durand, and they were, in many respects, wholesome correctives to the official despatches. As giving a general view of the political and military operations they were admirable. But into the military details they did not profess to enter. Up to the present day, in fact, those details have remained a sealed book to the outer world. The instincts of the public did, indeed, at the time, detect beneath the gloss and exaggeration of Lord Gough's despatches the fact that we had gained only a Pyrrhic victory at Chillianwalla; stories, too, were current at the time that Gijrat had only been gained by persuading the Commander-in-Chief to ascend a granary by means of a ladder which was then at once removed. But the details which alone would enable the military student to examine the campaign in all its bearings were conspicuous by their absence.

That want has now been supplied in a graphic and artistic manner by Captain Laurence-Archer. In a plain and manly style the incidents of the campaign are given to the public as they actually occurred. The mistakes committed prior to and at Chillianwalla are described with accurate minuteness. And this, in no spirit of hostility to the Commander-in-Chief and his advisers. So far as the army, native and European, is concerned, its component parts appear to greater advantage in this simple and unstudied narrative than in Lord Gough's pretentious bulletins. As a faithful record of the achievement of soldiers badly led against a brave enemy it is a most important contribution to military literature. It will be welcomed by the survivors of the campaign which added the Punjab to our Indian Empire. To the future historian of Lord Dalhousie's Governor-Generalship it will be invaluable.

RED BOOK FOR SERGEANTS.

By W. BRIGHT, Colour-Sergeant, 37th Middlesex R.V.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"Under this title, Colour-Sergeant Bright, of the 37th Middlesex R.V., has prepared an elaborate series of 'Test Questions' in all the matters in which a Sergeant of Volunteer Infantry has to be examined for his Certificate. The questions are very well framed, and very complete. Except in a very few instances, the answers are not given, but each question is followed by a reference to the Field Exercise, or the Rifle Exercises, from which the student will gain the information necessary to frame the answer. The book is interleaved with blank paper, so that the answers, when discovered, may be written out. Altogether the scheme is a very ingenious one, and we commend the new 'Red Book' to all Sergeants and intending Sergeants. We should add that the book contains a useful Appendix on certain points of military etiquette with which all Volunteers ought to be acquainted."—Volunteer Service Gazette, March 2, 1878.

"The object of this work is to enable a candidate for promotion to the rank of Sergeant in the Volunteer Infantry to acquire by heart a thorough knowledge of the subjects of his examination. . . . The questions are clearly framed, and . . . a very good method has been adopted for impressing the subject on the memory. A simple, handy book of the sort was much wanted, and the want has been supplied."—Broad Arrow, March 2, 1878.

"In this useful little manual of fifty-eight pages Mr. Bright has succeeded in making a 'royal road' for those members of the Volunteer Force who may desire to qualify themselves for the rank of Sergeant. . . . The 'Red Book for Sergeants' is a concise and practical guide, and should be in the hands of every Volunteer in the Kingdom."—Weekly Dispatch, March 10, 1878.

"The work is very carefully compiled and neatly got up, and seems well adapted for the end in view. This 'Red Book' takes a comprehensive view of what all Volunteers, commissioned or non-commissioned, should know, and cannot fail to be of great value to all ranks of the Service. Some very useful information is given in an Appendix."—Military Record and Volunteer News, March 13, 1878.

"A compact shilling 'Red Book for Sergeants' appears very opportunely, as Volunteers are turning their thoughts to active service. . . . A most useful guide for Volunteers."—Lloyd's Weekly Newspaper, March 24, 1878.

OPINIONS OF VOLUNTEER OFFICERS.

The following is a copy of a letter received from Lieutenant-Colonel C. E. HOWARD VINCENT, Commanding Central London Rifle Rangers (4th Middlesex), President of the Volunteer Conference, and late of the 23rd Royal Welsh Fusiliers:—

"Lieutenant-Colonel Howard Vincent has read with great interest the 'Red Book for Sergeants,' compiled by Colour-Sergeant Bright, of the 37th Middlesex. The questions have been very carefully framed, and there can be no doubt that writing out the answers to them will impress the duties of Sergeants more on their memories than any other system. The publication of this book affords additional evidence of the successful zeal with which the Non-commissioned Officers of Volunteers apply themselves to their military duties—to the great gain of the entire Force.—Feb. 21, 1878."

One Officer (a Major) writes:—

"I have no hesitation in expressing my opinion that it should be in the hands of every Non-Commissioned Officer in the Service."

Another (a Captain) writes:—

"It is likely to be of service not only to Non-Commissioned, but all ranks in the Volunteer Service."

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered. CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma. CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague. CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery. CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms. CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the inventor of CHLORODYNE: that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words, "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each bottle.

Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London.

In fact, the marvellous effects produced upon the mind and body of an Arab Sheikh, who was impervious to all native medicines, when I administered to him five

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are, from Bombay, April 21; Allahabad and Madras, April 20; Calcutta, April 19.

The Indian papers now contain for the first time the intimation that orders had been received to despatch troops to Malta. In the Bombay Times it is stated:—“Great activity prevails at the dockyard, where the employes are working day and night to fit up the transports for Malta. Ten large steamers and fourteen sailing vessels have already been taken up, and are being supplied with the necessary fittings for the cavalry, &c. H.E. Sir Richard Temple, Governor of Bombay, visits the Dockyard daily, and on Saturday spent several hours in inspecting the transports lying off the dockyard and Apollo Bunder. The vessels have been secured for four months.”

THE Pioneer, remarking that all doubts were removed as to the despatch of a native contingent for foreign service, thinks it might well be said that a new era had now begun for our Indian army. “Even should the force only go to Malta and back, the movement would still show that in future European difficulties the importance of our Indian Army as a military factor would be fully recognised on all sides; and a prospect is thus offered to the army here such as the men of anti-Mutiny days never dreamt of. By the present constitution of the force, all classes of the native soldier are represented; and one might say, without boasting, that never since the English Empire in the East has been established have there been better specimens.”

It will be remembered that, according to the telegrams for which we are indebted to the Times, two divisions were to leave Bombay, on the 20th ult., consisting of two batteries, one of the Royal Artillery, and the 13th N.I. Regiment from Agra, the 31st from Cawnpore, the 2nd Goorkhas from Saharunpore, and two companies of Sappers and Miners. The second division would embark as soon after the 29th as possible, and would consist of the 9th Bengal Cavalry, the 1st Bombay Lancers from Poona, the 9th and 26th Regiments of Bombay Native Infantry, and two companies of Madras Sappers and Miners. Shipping would be sent from Bombay on the 23rd to Cannanore for the conveyance of one Madras regiment. Snider carbines had been served out to the 9th Bengal Cavalry, and revolvers to non-commissioned officers. On the 30th April we learned that the first detachment of the native force had sailed with stores for five months; and on the 2nd May the second detachment had followed. On the latter date also the arrival was notified of Assistant Quartermaster-General Adams and Assistant Commissary-General Keays at Malta.

To the information contained in the Times telegrams of the 22nd April, and repeated in our issue of the 27th idem, we are now enabled to add that the 9th Bengal Cavalry is commanded by Colonel H. L. Campbell; the 13th N.I. by Colonel King; and the 31st by Colonel Langmore. The former of these two Infantry Regiments consists of Brahmans, Rajputs, Hindustanis, Mussalmans, Jats, and Hindus of other castes; the latter of Sikhs, Panjabis, Pathans and Dogras, beside other Hindus or Mussalmans generally. The Madras 25th N.I. raised in 1794, and given its present number in 1834, is commanded by Colonel W. A. Gib.

THE Bombay Times understands it is not likely that Government will allow the wives of officers of the force proceeding to Malta the benefit of a free passage to England. It appears that when a concession to this effect was made at the time of the China Expedition, the precedent was strongly objected to by the Secretary of State; and it is thought improbable that the War Office will pass such a charge in the case of an Expedition debitable to the Imperial revenues. There have been so many China Expeditions that we can only surmise the last to be intended.

“Distress in Maisur appears to be on the increase,” is the remark made by the Friend of India, of the 19th April; but the Madras Times of the 20th idem says: “The Famine in Maisur is practically at an end.” We hope that the Madras paper is right; but we are perplexed to reconcile the two statements. The Friend adds that the relief caused by the harvest in the North-West is merely temporary, and that prices there show a tendency to rise rather than fall.

GENERAL STRACHEY, President of the Famine Commission, is associated in his important work with the following members:—Mr. Caird, the Honourable Justice Cunningham, Messrs. Ballard, Batten and Peile, Mr. Rangacharlu and the Karbari of Kolhapur. Mr. C. A. Elliot is Secretary.

It may be accepted as a healthy sign that less is said of the famine than usual, in the papers we have just received from India; yet the reason for closing the routes to Kashmir is assigned to the scarcity in the Punjab. Indeed, all the border districts, except Jhelum, are suffering from scarcity, owing to the great influx of immigrants from Kashmir. It was this circumstance which necessitated measures of protection being taken for the distressed tracts, and caused the routes to be closed. To prove that such is the true reason for the action of Government, it is affirmed that the one route left open, the Pir Panjab, leads directly from the Jhelum district.

MR. G. THORNHILL, of the Madras Civil Service, late first member of the Revenue Board in that Presidency and on the Executive Committee of the Famine Relief Fund, has just retired, after an official career of thirty-five years. He has done good work in his time, and carried home with him the regard of a large circle of friends. The complimentary dinner given to him at the Madras Club before his departure was not needed to assure him of the good wishes of Madrassis; but it is a custom which may be sufficiently honoured in the observance, to make it a happy mode of leave-taking in cases like that of Mr. Thornhill.

PUBLIC MEETINGS of natives in Calcutta are becoming frequent, and seem to gain in numbers. We observe that one was held on April 18, to protest against the Vernacular Press Bill Act; and it is stated that about 5,000 natives and only three or four Europeans were present. The Resolutions passed condemned the Act as retrogressive; and finally it was resolved to petition Parliament against the Act, and to entrust the petition to Mr. Gladstone.

THE publication of the Administration Report of the Telegraph Department in India for 1875-76 and 1876-77, has afforded satisfaction. But the remarkable improvement effected in working the lines during the last ten years must have been evident to the public, who have shown their appreciation by sending more than three times the number of paid messages in 1877 than they did in 1867. The average time occupied in the disposal of telegrams in the main routes, connecting Calcutta, Bombay, Madras, and Karachi, has, we are told, been reduced from twelve hours and forty-three minutes in 1867-68 to one hour and five minutes in 1876-77. Moreover, the "current expenditure in India and Ceylon during the last-mentioned year was Rs. 27,72,453 and the income was Rs. 27,72,052, leaving a net deficit of Rs. 401 only, as compared with Rs. 4,39,783 in the previous year; while, if Ceylon be excluded, the transactions would show a net balance of Rs. 19,995 in favour of the Department, as compared with a net loss of Rs. 4,09,242."

THE favourable result here reported is attributed partly to reduction of expenditure and partly to increased receipts; the figures under the first head being Rs. 65,486, and under the second, Rs. 3,25,981. We republish the following few statistics for 1876-77:—

The total number of messages transmitted during the year was 1,166,833, of which 57,797 were free, as against 958,408, of which 51,039 were free, in 1875-76. The number of inland private messages increased from 707,136, valued at Rs. 11,172,13 in 1875-76, to 874,348, valued at Rs. 13,61,172 in 1876-77, while the number of foreign private messages increased from 111,122 to 135,635, and their value from Rs. 6,38,951 to Rs. 6,83,940. The revenue from the former class of messages thus increased by 21·84 per cent., or more than four times the average ratio of increase in previous years, while that from the latter class increased by 7·05 per cent. The increase in inland messages was largely due to excitement in the grain trade caused by the famine. . . . The number and value of press messages since 1873-74 shows a steady growth from Rs. 2,375, valued at Rs. 11,536, to 5,707, valued at Rs. 22,905; for though the latter figures show a slight diminution, as compared with those for 1875-76, this is explained by the extraordinary increase of despatches caused by the visit of the Prince of Wales in that year.

THE DUKE OF CAMBRIDGE, in speaking at the Royal Academy banquet on Saturday last, thus referred to the condition of the Indian Army:—"I have not been personally connected with the Indian Service, but I am in daily correspondence with the officers of the Indian Army; and I rejoice to be enabled to state that our Indian Army is in the highest state of efficiency and discipline. You may take it anywhere, and it will be prepared to do all you require of it. It is my firm conviction, from the enthusiastic feeling which I know prevails in the Indian Army, that it would be able to hold its place with her Majesty's British Army in every portion of the globe."

THE Pioneer states that the returns of the Indian Customs Department for the first nine months of 1877-78 show a considerable falling-off in revenue compared with the figures for the previous year; the net receipts amounting to Rs. 99,24,562, against Rs. 1,05,09,394 in 1876-77. As a set-off to this decrease of nearly 6 per cent. the Commissioner of Inland Customs points out that both the gross and net realisations, though they compare badly with the previous year's returns, are still above the average of the five years preceding 1876-77. Our

Indian contemporary does not accept the statement as consolatory; we quote from its remarks on the subject:—

The scarcity in these provinces has had something to do with it. In the Punjab the salt traffic of the mines was impeded by unseasonable weather, and interruptions to the bridge-of-boats at Pind Dadun Khan. Rumours of coming changes in the customs line, which had been foreshadowed in the Finance Minister's budget, have made merchants hang back from large investments, and checked speculation. Now that Sir John Strachey's policy has been declared and the duty lowered, there is every reason to expect a large increase in the amount of salt imported, if not in the net yield of the tax. It need hardly be said that the quantity of salt consumed by the people on this side of the customs' line cannot be estimated from the returns of the Inland Customs Department.

SIR RICHARD TEMPLE, in his address at the annual meeting of the Indo-British Institute in Bombay on the 9th April spoke of the lot of Indo-Britons as becoming harder and harder every year, in consequence of the keenness of competition in the labour market; and urged them to imitate the self-dependence of the Anglo-Saxon. He also warned them against habits of false pride and extravagance, avoidance of which would be likely to conduce to their peace of mind and happiness in life, and much more in the same strain. In Madras there is a loyal movement of warlike tendency on the part of Eurasians, to judge from a letter in the local Times of the 13th April, in which the writer hints at a movement of the Volunteer Guards in coming forward and offering their services to fight "side by side either with their brethren in arms from the West before the walls of Constantinople, or to fill the place of those who may be withdrawn from India."

WAS Sir George Campbell quoting rightly, or was he indifferent to verbal accuracy, when he charged the Times Correspondent with saying that the Hindus looked upon the despatch of Indian troops to Malta as "throwing lustre on their race?" The words were these:—"The proposed employment of the Native Army in Europe has given to the Indian Military Service a lustre in the eyes of the Hindus which"—we presume the lustre, not the employment, or other antecedent—"may in future render it one of the finest military forces in the world, and will"—the employment, we opine, though it should be positive, not proposed—"doubtless prove of great benefit to India in various ways." With regard to the reported enthusiasm, whether it were exaggerated or not it does not much matter; and we do not see why the telegram should be found faulty on this score. After all, enthusiasm is not supposed to last; so that, moderate or excessive, we can afford to dispense with its display. As to its substantial worth, why should not the shouts of an excited army of Sipahis about to embark on a voyage to the Mediterranean, give as much cause of congratulation to the British spectator as the not more genuine peace or war cry of a Hyde-park agitator? In one case he will feel something of national pride irrespective of politics; in the other he will regulate his feelings and their display by his own party or prejudices.

AN idea which very naturally prevails among writers for the Press in India is that a sense of exceptional political necessity has been found and accepted by the Press in England to be the real cause of justification for passing the new Vernacular Press Act. But such cannot well be the case with any who have thoroughly studied or mastered the subject, or watched the action of the native papers from the period of the mutinies until now. It is rather the consciousness of incongruity, almost of absurdity, unavoidably arising from a contemplation of the circumstances presented, which should guide us to the true opinion. We have made a concession of the unintelligible to our Indian subjects, which now declares itself for the first time in its actuality. This is no more a political consideration than the discovery that extra pocket-money to a school-boy has resulted in indigestion and incipient demoralisation; and the parent's or guardian's remedy is as clear and sure as that of the Government.

AN interesting letter in the Times, dated Shanghai, March 21, gives a terrible account of the famine now visiting the northern provinces of China. The worst distress is said to be in Shansi; and the Rev. Mr. Richard had lately sent down for publication a description of a tour through the central and southern portion of the province, by which it appeared that all along the roadside were corpses of those who had died of starvation, and all along the roads were staggering many scores in the last stage of decrepitude and want. One paragraph, which we extract, was an entry in the writer's diary for Feb. 7 last:—We had ocular proof that men were eating stone cakes—that is cakes of stone similar to that of which soft pencils are made, pounded to dust, mixed with millet husks, and then baked. We saw dead bodies strewn the road; there were on them evidences of murder and robbery as of starvation; and the dogs prowled savagely about them. There was dearth of fuel as well as of food, and houses were pulled down to supply the want. When Mr. Richard asked the reason of coal rising in price, he was told that none ventured to go singly to the coal pits to fetch it, for they would be stripped and their beasts of burden seized and eaten. In answer to the inquiries he made regarding the extent of the mortality, he was assured that in one district a third were dead already, in another six out of every ten.

THE same correspondent repeats a statement before made, that Government were doing their best to meet the emergency, but their resources were miserably inadequate, and the difficulty was immensely aggravated by the distances grain had to be transported and the badness of communications. Mr. Richard had heard from the highest authority that in the southern part of the province some who had money in their hands were dying, because there was no grain to be bought. Grain had been bought in abundance at Tientsin and elsewhere by the Governor's agents, but all the beasts of burden in Shansi and the adjoining provinces were not sufficient to carry it. In the neighbourhood of the capital, where Mr. Richard was himself stationed, the case did not seem so extreme, as he expressed himself able to use all the money that could be supplied him. But the roads were so unsafe that it was difficult to send large sums of money into the interior, and it was not known how the Sub-Committee of the Famine Relief Fund at Tientsin purposed transmitting the sums last remitted. Money had been liberally subscribed by the foreign residents in China and Japan; and telegraphic remittances of several thousand pounds had been received through the Agra Bank from London. It is added, and we are glad to give currency to the statement—that every penny subscribed can be utilised, and it is hoped that people in Europe can appreciate the intensity and the immensity of the disaster. A population of several millions is affected in Shansi alone, "but it must be remembered that Chili, Shensi, Shantung, and Honan are also affected more or less severely, and these five provinces may be taken to cover roughly 800,000 square miles—an area greater than the whole of Germany and Austria. It is to be feared, too, that even if the crops turn out well, an inadequate quantity of grain has been sown; and in any case the impoverishment will have been so terrible that relief is needed beyond the immediate distribution of food to save life. In the meantime, however, that is the urgent want, and Mr. Richard estimates that, at the best, one half the population of a great portion of Shansi will have died before the end of the famine."

FROM a notification in the Gazette we observe that Major Mockler's Grammar will be adopted, instead of Mr. Gladstone's older work, as the text-book in Baluchi, for such officers as desire to pass in the Mekrani dialect of that language. This grammar is considered by the Athenæum to be "a highly creditable attempt to define and make more generally known the language common to a large section of the inhabitants of a country the geographical position of which renders it politically interesting to British India."

WE learn from the Geographical Magazine that an Austrian Expedition has started for the East; and that Count Bela Szechenyi and two young savans, Messrs. G. Balinth and L. Loczy, propose to visit Bombay and Calcutta, Indo-China, Ceylon, the Sunda Island, Japan, and China. On arrival at Peking, they purpose to procure attendants, camels, and horses, and to journey into the interior of Central Asia, principally with the object of studying the Kuen-Lun range. The expedition expects to be away two or three years.

A NEW and recent instance of the risk attached to the culture of the oleander (nerium oleander) has been afforded in the death of six cows owned by a Sydney milk dealer. The Planters' Gazette of April 30 relates that these animals had partaken of a load of grass mixed with leaves of the plant mentioned; hence the catastrophe. Wild oleander abounds west of Karachi, on the Makran coast, and is known to the natives as Jaur. A beautiful specimen is to be found on the margin of the fish-containing pool near the entrance to the abode of the Maha Mai or Nani at Hinglaj. Thirty years ago, Dr. Stocks, of the Bombay Medical Establishment, than whom, perhaps, there has been no better authority on botany in Sind, recorded the fact that the camels in that country eat the nerium odorum, much to the inconvenience of troops during the march, for in nearly every case the food proved fatal, owing to the remarkably poisonous character of the plant.

A MADRAS correspondent of the Englishman speaks of the preparations lately made in Madras for producing Handel's magnificent oratorio of the "Messiah." The Philharmonic Society was busy on the occasion, but the weather was considered too hot for giving due effect to the performance. According to the writer, Anglo-Indians of the present day are not so active or so energetic as their ancestors; the "Messiah," when produced on the 11th May, 1786, had been pronounced "a most delicious treat to the lovers of music;" while, as regards the higher drama, it had, "under Lord Cornwallis, flourished uncommonly well," and the preference was given to Shakspearian plays. The Madras correspondent adds:—"Our ancestors, too, were more wealthy than we are, and one reads with surprise of a 'gold mohur being paid for the boxes and sixteen shillings to the pit!' Times are indeed changed, and a concert given in May with tickets fixed at eight rupees a head would speedily fall to the ground."

THE Dean of Westminster is always interesting in the chair, wherever presiding, but it is impossible to say whether his discourses are always accurately reported. If we accept the report in the Times of the speeches made at the Literary Fund Dinner on Wednesday last, the learned Chairman divided Literature into two classes—"first, real works of genius; and secondly, literature which he would venture to call no literature, in which he included dictionaries, works of antiquarian research, and, perhaps, some books of travels." Later on, Dean Stanley, if we rightly apprehend his meaning, defined real literature as composed of works of real genius, "poetry, history, or fiction—the essence of which consisted in their polish and finish." Surely it is not intended to throw out the "Life of Dr. Arnold" from the list: or will it be admissible as a chapter of English history, to the clear understanding of which it should prove an admirable adjunct? As regards writers on India, we are glad to believe that Kaye's "War in Afghanistan" will be entitled to a place in the honoured category; though we are not so certain about our Oriental travellers generally, whose name is Legion.

A PROSPECTUS of the British Empire Horse Supply Association has been issued, showing the object of the members and subscribers to be to remedy the scarcity of good sound horses in the United Kingdom. It is purposed to have recourse to America and Canada, where the supplies are held to be unlimited; and to establish a line of large and fast ocean steamers "especially fitted to the trade, calculated to make the passage from the ports of Quebec, Montreal, New York, Boston and Norfolk (Virginia) to Southampton in twelve days." In a table of probable results from running one steamer chartered on the present form, it is calculated that there would be a yearly profit of £28,668 on a capital of £15,222. That is to say, the cost of transport, keep, &c., for 400 horses would be £15,222; the sale would realise £20,000; and the operation might be repeated so as to have six trips per annum.

ONE or two mails ago it was stated that two Muhammadans, by name Jan Muhammad and Imamu-d-Din had proceeded by the steamer Sumatra to Paris, to exhibit before the Parisians the process of weaving Kashmir shawls. This arrangement is opposed to that of some fifteen or twenty years back, when forty young Persians were sent to Paris for the acquirement of scientific and mechanical knowledge. Experience of results has possibly taught the propriety of reversing the system before adopted. We have some recollection that two of the forty students, supposed to have been educated in the art of pottery, returned from Paris to Kashan or Nain, there to impart the newly-acquired skill to their less fortunate fellows. The native potters were, however, more than a match for their instructors; the result being that the pupils had to become teachers in the more elementary as well as advanced stages of the clay-moulding process. Pottery is, probably, not among the most attractive studies to be pursued by strangers in Paris.

Odds and Ends.

COLONEL WALTON, Military Storekeeper at Calcutta, has been appointed officiating Superintendent of the Army Clothing Department, vice Colonel Couper.

THE DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM AND CHANDOS has left Madras for Ootacamund.

THE HON. RIVERS THOMPSON, C.S.I., has taken his seat as a member of the Viceroy's Legislative Council.

MR. W. FURNIVALL, C.E., has been appointed Joint Secretary in the Railway Department to the Government of these Provinces.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL TWEEDE succeeds Colonel Watson as Political Agent at Gwalior.

LIEUTENANT COLONEL CHAMPAIN has been appointed Director General of Indian Telegraphs.

MR. A. C. MANGLES is confirmed in his officiating appointment as Commissioner of Chutia Nagpur.

MR. A. A. MACDONELL, of Corpus Christi College, was the successful competitor for the Boden Sanskrit scholarship this year.

It is reported that, in consequence of the death of the Jalpigi Raja without heirs, his estate will fall to the Maharaja of Kuch Behar.

M. M. JOUBERT and La Barbe, the commissioners appointed by the French Government to inquire into the general administration of the French possessions in India, have arrived at Pondicheri and commenced their inquiries.

THE GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S Agent in Baluchistan reports that large quantities of provisions and fodder are pouring into Quetta.

DURING the Viceroy's recent visit to Nahun the Rajah offered the British Government a site for a military cantonment within his territory. The hill in question is about twelve miles from Dugshaia, with plenty of wood and water, and room enough, it is thought, a quarter a regiment on.

THE SERVICES of one Bengal Civilian, Mr. J. P. Goodridge, and of eight military officers lately employed on special famine duty in the Madras Presidency, have been replaced at the disposal of their respective Governments.

WE hear that all furlough has been stopped for members of the Civil Service.

A MONSTER meeting was held at Calcutta on the 17th April at the Town Hall, to petition Parliament against the Vernacular Press Act. There were nearly five thousand people present. The petition is to be entrusted to Mr. Gladstone.

THE DISTRESS in Kashmir is becoming more serious than was expected. It is said that thousands of starving men, women, and children have flocked into the N.W. Provinces for food.

THE OUTTURN of the harvest in most parts of the Central Provinces will be considerably below the average, and prices continue high. Large exports are still going on towards the North-Western Provinces.

TEA manufacture began in some of the earlier gardens in Kumaon in the last week in March, but will not be general till the middle of April.

THE COTTON harvest in the Berars is now finished, and the damage done to the crop by the unusual rain towards the end of last year is estimated at three-sixteenths totally destroyed, and about one-fourth depreciated in quality.

IN the month of February last the quantity of cotton exported from British Birmah was 16,712 cwts., valued at Rs. 3,11,035.

A SCHEME is said to be in preparation for the entire reorganisation and an increase of the strength of the Madras irrigation branch of the Public Works Department.

TYPHOID FEVER has broken out at Singapur owing, it is said, to the bad quality of the water supplied by the water-works.

THE CHIEF Commissioner of Burma, in his remarks on the working of the Rangoon Municipality for last year, hints that the rapid increase of the trade of the port, and the growing exigencies of its shipping, will soon necessitate the formation of a Port Trust.

AT the suggestion of Mr. Clements Markham, some specimens of the Calisaya de Santa Fe, from Buonaventura, a quinine-yielding plant, are to be sent to Madras for trial in the Nilgiri plantations.

A REUTER'S telegram dated Bombay, May 6, says:—"The Times of India of to-day states that the expeditionary force of native troops which has left India is destined for Suez and Port Said."

IN the month of March last the number of total abstainers among the British troops in India amounted to 11,413.

THE thanks of the Bengal Government have been given in the Calcutta Gazette to Babu Nafar Chandra Pal Chaudri, of Latudaha for having made over to Government the sum of Rs. 30,000 in four per cent. paper for the establishment and endowment of a charitable dispensary at Latudaha.

THE operation of Act XV. of 1877, the Indian Limitation Act, has been postponed in the Haidarabad Assigned Districts till further orders.

THE Dhond and Munmar Railway was opened on the 17th April, by Sir Richard Temple.

THE head-quarters of the Punjab Government will not be moved to Simla till about the middle of May.

MIDLE. OLGA-DUBOIN.—Middle Olga-Duboin, whose intention of quitting India has been frequently announced during the last six months, is still in the country. She appears to be a most enthusiastic traveller, as she has now seen something of nearly every important Native State. Recently she has been in Central India. In Bhopal she received a hearty welcome from the Begum, and much hospitality from Colonel and Mrs. Kincaid. The former is the Political Resident, and the lady the author of a book upon "Mandoo." From Bhopal the pianiste made her way to Nagpore and Kamptee, where she gave entertainments, at which everybody of consequence in the locality was present. In Nagpore the Public Hall was ornamented with flowers and banners by the ladies and gentlemen, many of whom are intensely musical. Her performances of selections from Chopin and Beethoven is described to us as "electrifying." In a short time she will arrive in Bombay to give her farewell concert, and on this occasion she is determined to give it whether the weather is hot or the majority of the residents have fled to Matheran or Mahabaleshwar. From Bombay she will go to Australia, and if she explores that colony as effectually as she has examined India, she will be about as perfect in geographical experience as she is already in music.—Indian Daily News.

ALLEGED SILK ROBBERY.—We learn that a curious case lately occurred in Poona city. A weaver laid an information before the police that he had been robbed of property, consisting of raw silk, of the value of Rs. 250. A large hole was made in the wall at the back of the house, by means of which it was stated that the thieves succeeded in unfastening the inner chain of the back door, and thus effected an entrance. It is reported that during the police inquiry it was discovered that no theft had been committed, and that the complaint was utterly false. The raw silk appears to have been handed over to the weaver by two or three persons in the city, for the purpose of being cleaned. The weaver evidently thought that by making it appear that he was robbed, he could appropriate the property to himself, but the police were too much for him. They have succeeded in recovering the whole of the property alleged to have been stolen, which, we learn, was mortgaged by the weaver to several persons in the city, and money obtained thereon. We cannot but help believing that many such false complaints are made to the police by evil-disposed persons.—Deccan Herald.

TELEGRAPHIC COMMUNICATION WITH INDIA.

ON the 3rd inst., in the Indian Section of the Society of Arts, Major Bateman-Champain, R.E., read an interesting paper on the Telegraph Routes to India; dwelling especially upon the two now generally used, the Indo-European or chiefly Overland Line, and the Eastern Telegraph, or, for the most part, Submarine Line. He showed how the first of these two lines was a Government undertaking for the Persian and Persian Gulf Sections; and that, of all the links passing through Europe and Western Asia to meet those sections, the only one on which dependence could be placed throughout was that supplied by Mr. Charles Siemens and the Indo-European Telegraph Company. The second was a private company possessed of money and influence, with two Red Sea cables and many Mediterranean links. As regards the success of either line, no further proofs can be necessary than the uses daily made of each; but that the way to that success was worked out under very different conditions is a fact better known to the few immediately concerned than the general public, who look to results only. We have not a word to say on qualities common to servants of Governments and servants of Companies; on the skill, energy, and perseverance required and given to conquer obstacles in actual construction and maintenance. Comparisons would, in this case, prove odious, as they usually are. The conditions, however, are those of two ships making for the same port; one accompanied by a fair breeze of popular favour, the other contending against a mistral of disapproval.

At the same time, the greater the obstacles, the greater the triumph, when the goal or harbour is reached; and Major Champain may be congratulated on having now in hand a means of constant communication with India not inferior to the Eastern Company's cable, and second to no line in the world, of similar extent and stretched over similar diversities of tracts, terrestrial and submarine. But with a double cable, or alternative cable and land line of telegraph in the Persian Gulf, we should not disregard the old original point of junction at Fao or Fava, at the mouth of the Shattu-l-Arab. Hence to Constantinople, is a line which might, with a little alteration, be made as efficient as the line through Persia; for the old objection about "Arabs, Turks and barbarians," once urged by the opponents of the present telegraph, will no longer hold good in the light of past experience; and hence to the Mediterranean, if we have not a line at present, there is perhaps no valid reason why we should not have one. This brings us to a consideration sufficiently serious for comment.

Set aside the present political complication, or let us suppose that the Russo-Persian division of the Indo-European Telegraph is politically safe, and respected in war as well as peace. The occurrences of the past two years should have made many an English student of maps regret that there was visible, in Asiatic Turkey, no indication of electrical wire or railroad from the Mediterranean to the Persian Gulf; nothing to secure us our Indian communications, apart from the Indo-European line through Russia and the cables of the Eastern Company. Mr. Andrew proposed, and more than once repeated his proposal for a railway; and a railway would have been desirable: the project was in the main a sound one, and we believed in its wisdom and feasibility. But we do not agree in every respect with the energetic Chairman of the Sind, Panjab, and Dehli Company. It is not clear to us that the appearance of a locomotive running from Alexandretta to Baghdad, and vice versa, would, as his 1873 pamphlet expresses it, "resuscitate in modern shape" either Babylon or Nineveh, or "re-awaken Ctesiphons and Baghdads of old." In fact, Baghdad is perhaps as wide awake now as it ever was. Nor do we think that, in practice, an estimate of 920 miles would cover the whole distance from Alexandretta to Kowait. But these are not vital points in the question: it is unfortunate that we have not broken ground somewhere in the direction suggested—if not for the construction of the Euphrates Valley Railway or for a railway at all, at least for a subsidiary line of telegraph.

On the other hand, if we contemplate the present political complications and possible results; and, glancing at the maps of European and Asiatic Turkey, take note of what is foreshadowed in them by new and very comprehensive frontiers; the importance of our argument becomes greatly enhanced.

Something was said about these things at the rooms of the Society of Arts the other evening, at the close of Major Champain's paper, and before the Chairman broke up the meeting. But it so happens that the ventilation of an idea at this Institution, as at other like worthy institutions, does not always serve to advance it, however good. One week it forms the subject of discussion; the next, its memory is effaced by another important paper; and the next, another follows. Like wave succeeding wave of the land-reaching sea, each one breaks and is lost in the surf upon the shore. Rarely do the waters deposit upon the beach anything that can be called solid or substantial. Before taking leave of our subject at the present time, it may be useful to note what we know of the actual lengths of those lines which it is so easy to measure in inches and to draw across the map. The Baghdad-Bairut line was, and may be now, that of the British Consul and Resident's monthly post between Baghdad and Europe. We are also told that Baghdad and Damascus were once main points in an old high road from Tangiers to the borders of China.

The distance from Baghdad to Bairut, as the crow flies, is little more than 500 miles; but the route taken by travellers is of course longer. Thielmann, who passed through Hillah, the ruins of Babylon and Karbala, makes it more than 800 miles. He is one of our latest and most intelligent authorities for this particular road, which occupied him twenty-four days, inclusive of sight seeing. With the exception of a change to horseback between Iskenderji and Hillah, between Hillah and Babylon, and, again, prior to entering Damascus, with mail-coach posting for the seventy miles between Damascus and Bairut, the whole journey was performed on a camel. Thielmann reckons the wide desert, or from the oasis Al-chidr to Palmyra, at 640 versts, or about 424 miles; a distance which looks formidable over so blank a region, but which is perhaps not sadder or drearier to traverse than many sections of the twelve or thirteen hundred miles from Baghdad to Tehran and Bushahr: and it is along this road that telegraph posts and wires was set up under the superintendence of British officers about twelve years ago.

A Descriptive and Historical Account of the Godavery District in the Presidency of Madras. By Henry Morris, formerly of the Madras Civil Service. Trübner and Co.

Amongst the more important Provinces of the Presidency of Madras are the Northern Circars, one of which is called the "Godavery District," taking its name from the noble river which flows through its midst. A fertile and flourishing region inhabited by a peaceable and quiet people, it presents but few features of prominent interest. Ruled in turn by the native Rajahs and Reddis, by the Brahminical priesthood, by the conquering Rajahs of Orissa, by the violent and tyrannical Muhammadans, and more recently, for a brief period, by the French, who ultimately gave place to the English, the inhabitants have passed unchanged through many and varied changes, and, save as regards general prosperity, the condition of the peasant of to-day differs but little from that of his ancestors, and were the course of time rolled back a century or two, his present quiet routine life would need but little modification to harmonise with the more stirring times which ushered in the commencement of British Rule in the East. Yet the Godavery District has afforded considerable scope for British energy and enterprize. "At the commencement of our rule it constituted a portion of a neglected province, and at one time it was from various causes brought into a state of extreme impoverishment and distress. It was desolated by famine, and misgoverned by the numerous land-owners and their advisers. Since the introduction, however, of the admirable system of irrigation it has brightened and revived. Famine is unknown. The people are prosperous and contented. It is the garden of the great Northern Province." Such is the panegyric passed upon this tract by Mr. Morris, whose proclivities may be gathered from this and several other similar passages in his "Historical Account of the Godavery District." Apparently a disciple of Sir Arthur Cotton, it may readily be supposed that he has no difficulty in finding a panacea for "all the ills that India is heir to." If only Government could be induced to undertake, on an extensive scale, works of irrigation, famine would be a thing unknown in the land, except as legend-lore amongst the old prattlers of the villages, who, in time to come, would amuse and astonish their hearers with wild and incredible tales of the effects in former days of these sad visitations of Providence. That the Godavery district does owe its prosperity to the Great Annicut which irrigates over 1,000,000 acres of land, and is "perhaps the noblest feat of engineering skill which has yet been accomplished in India," cannot well be questioned; but it must not be overlooked that the configuration of the country, intersected as that region is by the numerous branches of the Godavery, presented a rare opportunity for bringing into cultivation desolate waste deltas, alternately swamped by excessive floods, or left arid and dry, owing to the failure of the up-country rains. None the less the benefits of irrigation are, in this instance, undoubted; and Mr. Morris is rightly entitled, on that account, to claim for his compilation a special interest at the present time, when the memory lingers upon the heart-rending and touching scenes which have been so vividly impressed upon the national mind by the fearful famine which has recently desolated so many of the fair villages of the East. Invariably careful and reliable in all he undertakes, Mr. Morris on this occasion well sustains his reputation; he has evidently spent considerable pains to collect all the information available in regard to the district, and has recorded the minutest detail in connection with his subject;—to such an extent, indeed, as perhaps to pass the limits of necessity, and to tend to make a compilation, in itself unavoidably somewhat dry, still more unreadable for the general public. As a work of reference the book is beyond compare.

"The first factory established by the English on the Eastern Coast of India was at Masulipatam." The chapter giving an account of this and other early English settlements is interesting, as throwing light upon the infancy of the East India Company. It will bring a blush to the cheeks of our modern censors to read that in "the good old days of yore," a worshipful Agent of Government, after being entertained by a Native of high rank at a "plentiful supper," presented his distinguished host with a bribe, and recorded the transaction in the following quaint terms: "Being a person rising in favour at Court, two hundred and fifty pagodas ready money is given to Aga Telloil privately, which will be much more acceptable than a greater summe publicly." Amongst the regulations for ordering the Company's affairs is one indicating that even so far back as the end of the seventeenth century the temperance movement had its advocates; "a public table is to be kept, at which all single persons of the factory are to diet themselves, and no diet-money is to be allowed to single persons, but only to those that are married and wish to diet apart. No candle or bottle to be allowed, such as has hitherto been allowed under the name of 'Settlement Charges.' Candles are to be allowed only to the chiefs, and those of Council, to the chaplain, and to the surgeon. Lamps are to be allowed to every chamber. No house servants are to be removed or entertained without an Order of Council;" the reason should commend itself to the authorities at the present time, "it being observed to be of bad consequence to turn off old servants." The Dutch settlers seem to have been permitted more licence, and their manner of living, amongst the "vulgar sort" at any rate, is described as "none of the best;" but as regards the "upper ten," we are told that "brandy and other strong liquors are not much used by the wiser sort in the morning, unless it be a spoonful just before dinner, and a little at night before they go to bed." But, it is added, "tea has got a mighty ascendant over the Hollanders of late years."

As regards the administration of the district there is much that will be read with pride; but some pages can be perused only with feelings of regret, seeing that in former years the efforts of the British Government not only resulted in some instances in failure, but absolutely were productive of misery and ruin to the district over which the Company's servants were placed in charge. However, finis coronat opus; and Mr. Morris, with a justifiable pride which he does not endeavour to conceal, sums up the result of the administration in the following glowing terms:—"The revenue of the Godavery District, instead of being reduced, as it once was, to the verge of bankruptcy, is more elastic than it has ever been; its population has more than doubled; the material prosperity of its inhabitants is proved by their being better fed, better clothed, and better educated than formerly; its commerce has flourished, and its trade has developed to a marvellous degree; and it may confidently be asserted that it is in as peaceful, happy, and prosperous condition as any part of Her Imperial Majesty's dominions."

Commentaries on the Punjab Campaign 1848-49; including some Additions to the History of the Second Sikh War from Original Sources. By Captain J. H. Laurence-Archer, Author of "The Orders of Chivalry."

The maxim that perfect accuracy in contemporaneous history is impossible applies with more force to the history of military operations than to any other; to the history of the Second Sikh War more than to the history of any other military operation. The despatches of Lord Gough were so notoriously inaccurate that the Indian press of the day did not hesitate to compare them in that respect to the bulletins of Napoleon. They certainly resembled those famous documents in no other respect, but in that one they rivalled them. Somewhat later, indeed, there appeared in successive numbers of the Calcutta Review two articles on the subject. These, it is believed, were from the accomplished pen of the late Sir Henry Durand, and they were, in many respects, wholesome correctives to the official despatches. As giving a general view of the political and military operations they were admirable. But into the military details they did not profess to enter. Up to the present day, in fact, those details have remained a sealed book to the outer world. The instincts of the public did, indeed, at the time, detect beneath the gloss and exaggeration of Lord Gough's despatches the fact that we had gained only a Pyrrhœan victory at Chillianwalla; stories, too, were current at the time that Gujrat had only been gained by persuading the Commander-in-Chief to ascend a granary by means of a ladder, which was then at once removed. But the details which alone would enable the military student to examine the campaign in all its bearings were conspicuous by their absence.

That want has now been supplied in a graphic and artistic manner by Captain Laurence-Archer. In a plain and manly style the incidents of the campaign are given to the public as they actually occurred. The mistakes committed prior to and at Chillianwalla are described with accurate minuteness; and this in no spirit of hostility to the Commander-in-Chief and his advisers. So far as the army, native and European, is concerned, its component parts appear to greater advantage in this simple and unstudied narrative than in Lord Gough's pretentious bulletins. As a faithful record of the achievement of soldiers badly led against a brave enemy it is a most important contribution to military literature. It will be welcomed by the survivors of the campaign which added the Punjab to our Indian Empire. To the future historian of Lord Dalhousie's Governor-Generalship it will be invaluable.

COOLIE EMIGRATION.

The recent discussion between the Secretary of State and the Government of India about the encouragement of emigration from India to the British colonies has shown the unimportance of the question as regards the general well-being of India. The colonies at the most do not need more than 20,000 emigrants annually, and this would have absolutely no effect on the increase of a population of 260 millions, adding to itself between two and three millions a year. But from the standpoint of the individual emigrant, the subject has many points of interest. The dull and cheerless life of the unskilled labourer or the small cultivator here is too well known to us. His lot is infinitely harder than that of the English peasant, although it has attracted far less sympathy and public interest. The impossibility of materially improving the condition of the labouring population of this country becomes the more apparent the more intimately the question is studied. But what the best-intentioned measures are unable to effect in India is attained in the majority of cases by those from among our poorer classes who emigrate as coolies to Trinidad or Natal. It is pleasant to hear of emigrants returning to their native land with large sums of money in the bank, or rolls of gold and silver coin tied up in their clothes. Such are not uncommon instances. Only the other day mention was made of a quondam coolie who, having tried his fortune in Trinidad, had so prospered there that he was able to keep race-horses, and even to win races. To persons with somewhat rigid notions of life the position attained by this labourer would hardly represent a fitting object of ambition. But his village in Bengal would, no doubt, consider him a man that had considerably bettered himself by a change of country. If the advantages of emigration are as great as all accounts make them out to be, how comes it that the colonies find it hard to get the right class of men, or even as many of the worst class as they want? The papers published by the Government partially explain this. The several colonies hold out very different prospects to an intending emigrant. In some he can hardly expect to be better off than he is in his own country. In others he may reasonably hope in a few years to be master of a comfortable farm of a few acres, and thrive as he could never dream of doing at home. But the would-be emigrant is not in a position to estimate the relative values of the offers made to him by the competing colonies. All he knows is, that he is a hard-beset, broken-down man in his own country, and must leave it if he wants to avoid the grip of the bannia, or being laid by the heels in prison. He falls into the clutches of an emigration recruiter, and is probably shipped off to a bad, unhealthy colony before he has time for further reflection. If his friends ever hear of him, they learn that he is not doing well. Very possibly they never hear of him again. In either case their previous prejudice against emigration is strengthened. The rustic of India has a horror of leaving his home, and his peepul tree, and the ancient groves and shrines of his village. The dislike to traverse the black water is intensified when some one whom he has known has departed, and has never again been heard of. He looks upon the recruiting agent as a sort of decoy-bird, whom it is unwise to follow. It is clear that the present method of recruiting is defective. It does not command the confidence of the people, nor does it put fairly before them the advantages held out by the colonies. There are good reasons why the State itself should not interfere directly in the matter, or encourage the surplus population to emigrate. But the Colonial Governments are free from the responsibilities which beset the Indian Government, and it rests with them to improve the agency by which they obtain recruits. The subject is one of vital interest to them. They must feel that "it is a shameful and unblessed thing to take the scum of people and wicked men to be the people with whom you plant." For, as Bacon adds, "it spoileth the plantation." The present system gives the colonies the refuse of India. Complaints are frequent that the emigrants are incorrigibly lazy and careless. They work three days in the week, and are idle the other four. The reason is, that the emigrants, as a rule, are not good specimens of the more industrious races of this country. If a little more attention were paid to the method of recruiting, it is possible that a better class of emigrants might be easily obtained. It has been suggested that the recruiting agents should be natives of India, who themselves have emigrated, and done well in the colony. Such men would come back to their own villages and districts, and their words would carry weight, which the ordinary recruiting agent cannot hope to win. A story is told of a man and his wife who lately returned from the Mauritius well off, and covered with jewels. The recruiting agent used them as recruiters, and succeeded so well that he in this way collected more emigrants in one month than his colleagues did in three. This is a hint which the Colonial Governments would do well to avail themselves of. It would probably be judicious to use the Trinidad coolie who has been able to take to racing, and exhibit him with his horses in rural Bengal. Another proposal has been made by the Commissioner of Bhaugulpore that is worth noticing. He would have the Government send out to the colonies an intelligent Englishman, accompanied by a few representative natives of different classes. They would see everything there is to be seen, and return to India, bringing enthusiastic accounts to their friends. The Colonial Governments might also send back with them any original emigrants who could be spared, and they would recruit in the localities where they were known. The main obstacle to all such projects is the expense. The Government of India naturally objects to relieve the colonies of a burden with which it has no immediate concern. The colonies are very anxious to obtain emigrants, but they have already been put to a good deal of expense, and they are unwilling to sink more money in costly experiments of a somewhat doubtful kind. As it is, the emigration agents complain that they have to defray the travelling expenses of persons who ought to pay their own way. One Kassi, a head coolie at the P. and O. Company's coal depot, took a trip to his home at Dinapore. His Calcutta life had shown him a good deal of the emigration depots, and he knew that intending emigrants are brought down by rail. At Dinapore he registered himself, his wife, and four children as emigrants, and thus travelled down to Calcutta at the expense of the British Guiana Government. Having in this way saved the cost of six railway fares, he took an early opportunity of leaving the depot with all his relatives, and has not since been heard of. Another instance is mentioned in which two syces and their wives got registered as emigrants at Bankipore, and thus obtained free tickets to Calcutta. When they arrived at the depot they said they had changed their minds, and did not want to emigrate. There was nothing to be done; the British Guiana Agency had to submit to the loss, and the men went back to their work at Messrs. Cook and Co.'s stables. The law is framed to protect the emigrant from fraud and deception. But it may be doubted whether the framers of it, in their praiseworthy anxiety to protect the injured innocent, have not placed the agencies at the mercy of impostors and cheats. A remarkable feature in the papers before us is the view held, by not a few of the officers consulted, as to the supposed over-population of the country. The severity of the famine in Southern India is usually ascribed in great measure to this, and it is regarded as an evil with which it is hopeless to contend. To read the replies of the Commissioners of Assam and of the Central Provinces, one would imagine that the great want of India was, not more land, but more men. The Central Provinces, we are told, are not now, and for many years could not become, a field in which recruiting for emigrants can be carried on. A vast expanse of land lies waste "because there are not hands to bring it under the plough." Mr. Morris thinks that if people could only be induced to emigrate from the densely-peopled parts of India to his territories the question of excessive population would no longer trouble any one. Colonel Keatinge, with the labour wants of Assam in mind, writes in much the same strain. Men, he thinks, are the one want of whole provinces of India, and it would be a ruinous policy to assist in sending them across the seas when there is so much for them to do at home. Madras also, though not so sparsely peopled as the Central Provinces, cannot, on the whole, be said to suffer from excessive population. The local officers of Trichinopoly and other districts report that the demand for labour fully equals, if it does not exceed, the supply. The problem is how to equalise the population of India so as to relieve the thronged Gangetic valley, and people the solitudes of Nagpore and the sub-Himalayan valleys. Hardly anything as yet has been tried in this direction; but as the years advance the State must become conscious of the need of energetic action.—Pioneer, April 13.

THE AFRIDIS.

A correspondent at Kohat writes :—Since the return of General Keyes' force from Sheendeh and Turkhi, the Jowakis settled in British territory, who had all left this part of the country, are returning in great numbers to the lands previously held by them within the British border. The returning Jowakis, when spoken to, acknowledge a loss of seventy-three men killed during the late expedition, besides a large number of men wounded. They mention that, of the seventy-three men killed, sixty-five belonged to their own tribe, two to the Guille Pass Afridis, three to the Hussun Kheyl, also Pass Afridis, and three to the Upper Afridis. These men were all killed while helping the Jowakis against the British Government. All the Jowakis seem to agree in stating that only one man was killed by the artillery fire; that all the others were killed by rifle shots. They say the artillery fire at first frightened them very much, but that they soon began to see that it really did not do them so much harm as the rifle fire. They declare that one man killed on their side was the total result of the artillery fire, whether with General Keyes or General Ross's force. The Jowakis all agree in stating that their loss in cattle has been very great indeed; many of them who had large numbers of cattle last November, now having only two or three remaining. They seem to consider they had lost nearly nine out of every ten of their cattle. The loss must amount to more than 2,500 head of cattle. They also lost a great number of the younger and weaker of their camels, only the stronger camels having survived. The exposure and scanty food they had to endure during the coldest months of the year, amongst barren and rocky mountains, without any shelter but what they could hastily construct, caused loss not only amongst the camels and cattle, but also among the women and children, who suffered a good deal. This loss of camels and cattle will prevent the Jowakis engaging for some time to come to any great extent in the salt-carrying trade, by which they have previously earned much money. It is the opinion of natives that the late expedition has been the most successful, considered as to its punitive results, that has ever taken place on the frontier. The usual process of a force entering the hills, burning two or three villages, and destroying some crops, and then returning after a few days, has very little effect, and often causes much anger and ill-feeling without having any good result. During the late expedition the very contrary policy was pursued. The new policy initiated by Lord Lytton concerning frontier expeditions was carried out thoroughly, viz., that when a British force once enters the hills, it shall stay there until the tribe finally gives in to the terms demanded by the British Government; and that the force employed should not withdraw from the enemy's country until the terms of peace are finally settled and carried out. In previous expeditions the policy has usually been to strike a good blow, or such a blow as the time permitted, and then return to British territory, trusting to the effect produced on the minds of the hostile tribe by the expedition, to cause them subsequently to sue for peace. This was not by any means always successful. During the Jowaki expedition the villages in the enemy's country were occupied by the troops, thus giving a defensible position and shelter to the soldiers while forcing the Jowakis to remain in the most inaccessible and barren parts of their country, only those villages being burnt which could not be occupied by the troops. Their country being occupied by a hostile force for nearly four months—from the 9th November to the 7th March—showed the Jowakis and other tribes that Government was able, if it wished, to keep possession of their country for an indefinite time, and to annex it altogether if it desired to do so. I am informed that this occupation of the Jowaki villages has had a very great moral effect upon the Terah and Pass Afridis, who now see how easily troops can shelter themselves in their villages, strengthening them, and turning the villages into strongholds against their former owners. It is considered by some Englishmen that the Jowaki expedition was rather barren of results, but this is not the opinion of those Englishmen best able to form an opinion; and it certainly is not the opinion amongst the Afridi tribes. The Pass Afridis, Guille, and Hussun Kheyl have taken up a very different tone since the settlement of the Jowaki dispute to what they held previously. One thing that has impressed the Guille very much, is the fact of the troops under Generals Keyes and Ross having on the 18th and 19th January taken the heights above the Pass villages of Koon and Torsuppa, which the Pass Afridis consider the key of their country. Natives say that the purdah of the Pass Afridis has been raised, and we now know all the weak points of the pass country. Formerly Englishmen had only seen the Kohat Pass itself and its immediate neighbourhood, but now they know how to turn the positions in the Kohat Pass from the Jowaki country. No one knows better than the Pass Afridis how easy it would be for the British Government to do this if necessary, and they also know how very happy the Jowakis would be to give a right of way through their country to British troops if it was required for the purpose of punishing the Guille. A very unfriendly feeling exists between the Jowakis and the Guille at present, in consequence of the Guille not having helped the Jowakis.—Pioneer.

Miscellaneous.

THE BANK OF BENGAL has reduced its minimum rate of interest and discount from 6 to 5 per cent.

ASSAM.—At the instance of the Chief Commissioner of Assam, the Government of India have sanctioned the grant of a sum of about Rs. 19,762 for the survey of lakhiraj holdings in the district of Kamroop during the official year 1878-79.

TURKI VOCABULARY.—The Government of India have sanctioned the purchase of about 250 copies of an edition of Mr. R. B. Shaw's new Turki Vocabulary published in England, and now being brought out by the Asiatic Society of Bengal, at a maximum cost of Rs. 750.

MAYO COLLEGE.—We have been informed that the Government of India have recently sanctioned the grant of Rs. 1,350 per mensem for the pay and allowances of the Principal of the Mayo College, Rajpootana, in lieu of the sum of Rs. 12,000 per annum formerly contributed by the Government to the income of the said institution.

VAGRANTS' HOME.—Colonel Reid, the Commissioner of Lucknow, has recommended that a Stranger or Vagrants' Home for Europeans, similar to the Home at Allahabad, be started for Lucknow. At a meeting convened to consider the matter, it was decided that the proposed home was to be kept up by private subscriptions, a grant from Municipal Funds, and a grant of Rs. 100 per month from Government.

A FAREWELL DINNER.—A movement has been set on foot amongst the following officers in the Account Department to give Mr. George Welsh Kellner, C.S.I., Accountant-General in the Military Department, a farewell dinner on the eve of his retirement from a very long and meritorious official career under Government :—Mr. E. Gay, Deputy Comptroller-General; Mr. Kiernander, Deputy Accountant-General, Bengal; Baboo Shama Churn Dey, Assistant to the Comptroller General; and Messrs. Fink, Ronaldson, and Macleod, assistants to the Accountant-General, Bengal.

STOLEN GOODS.—Mr. Bruere, District Superintendent of Police, Husharpore, aided by the officers in charge of the Ludhiana and Jullundur districts, has, it is stated, succeeded in discovering a large quantity of property, believed to have been stolen by a regularly organised gang of karnais, who for months past have been infesting and harassing the Jullundur Doab, and the villages on the east bank of the Sutlej. Several men have been arrested on suspicion, and are about to be tried on the charge of receiving stolen property, knowing it to be stolen.

THE REV. W. C. FYFE.—One by one the older missionaries labouring in Calcutta are retiring, some for good, and some for a season. The Rev. W. C. Fyfe, Principal of the Free Church Institution, is now about to leave for Scotland under medical advice. It is hoped, however, that he will return to India by the commencement of the next cold season. But as there is some probability of his not returning at all, our brethren of the Free Church and others presented him an address at a tea-meeting held last week in the hall of Dr. Duff's girls' school, Rambagan. The meeting was presided over by Rev. J. D. Bhattacharjee, and an address was read by Baboo Kali Churn Banerjee.—Indian Christian Herald.

FIRE IN RANGOON JAIL.—A telegram to a Bengal paper gives some particulars of the fire in the Rangoon Jail on Sunday, March 14 (before stated to be the 7th). It appears that the convicts in one jail ward broke out, and fired another ward where furniture and other stores were kept. The fire consumed the ward. One convict was burnt to death. In other wards the prisoners got loose, but all attempts to escape were frustrated by the military and volunteers, who surrounded the jail, and the police guard behaved well, shooting three convicts dead and wounding many others. The plot was evidently preconcerted, the prison wards, half of timber, offering a facility to break out.

THE RECENT RAIN.—At Simla, on the night of April 12, the rain fell in torrents. It lasted till past daylight on the following morning. There was no wind and no hail. This morning it has cleared up, and there is a bright sun shining. A correspondent writes from Kurnal, N.W.P., under date Sunday:—"Rain has come on here with terrible storms for the last three days, the rainfall for two days being 2.47 inches. The barley of the zemindars is cut and is lying rotting on the ground, while the wheat is ready for cutting, but every one is away at the Hurdwar Fair." The overdue March storms, which have been making up for lost time at Simla, have also reached Mussorie. Since the severe hailstorm on the night of the 11th the weather has been very bad; continual rain varied with occasional storms of thunder, lightning, and hail.—Pioneer.

HEALTH OF CALCUTTA.—The mortuary return of the Health Officer for the week ending Saturday, the 30th March, 1878, is as follows :—Non-Asiatics, males, 4; female, 1; mixed races, males, 5; females, 6; Hindoos, males, 182; females, 93; Mahomedans, males, 62; females, 40; other classes, males, 2; female, 0. The total deaths of all ages were 400, being 255 males, and 145 females, showing a death ratio of 47.1 among the former, and of 51.4 among the latter, and both together of 48.5. The causes of decease were—small-pox, 102; croup, 1; enteric or typhoid fever, 7; simple continued fever, 66; dysentery, 16; diarrhoea, 13; cholera, 80; remittent fever, 23; other zymotic diseases, 1; want of breast milk, 1; gout, 1; dropsy, 1; phthisis, 7; apoplexy, 1; convulsions, 11; tetanus, 7; heart disease, &c., 1; bronchitis, 1; pneumonia, 1; asthma, 5; ascites, 1; jaundice, 1; spleen disease, &c., 13; obstruction of bowels, 1; diabetes, 1; still-born, 8; child-birth, 2; old age, 12; poison, 2; causes not specified or ill-defined, 13.

PILGRIMS AT DACCA.—Dacca during the past week has been crowded with pilgrims going to and returning from the Nagalbund bathing festival. The great majority, about 85 per cent., seem to have been women, and of pilgrims in all the number has been computed at about 100,000. Great care, both against accident and disease, has been taken by the officials, several of whom were present at the festival superintending precautionary arrangements. It would appear, however, that one or two accidents, almost unavoidable in such dense masses of human beings, did occur, if the report be true that several women were trampled to death in the crush at the bathing ghats. Cholera having been present, though not very widespread, in Dacca for the past two weeks, some little anxiety has been felt lest the influx of return pilgrims might help to spread the disease. But the cases amongst them have been very few.

PETROLEUM.—The Arakan News states that Mr. Savage has discovered an earth-oil well on the Eastern Barongos, and has received the congratulations of the Commissioner of British Burmah on the early success which has attended his operations in search of earth-oil. The discovery places beyond doubt the existence of petroleum on the Borongos, and as there are three or four other prospectors in the same neighbourhood, it is hoped that further permanent results may be attained. The finding of this mineral oil will be of great importance to the province. The Commissioner of Arakan, accompanied by the resident merchants of Akyab, visited the spot himself, to ascertain whether a flowing well had really been discovered, and he reports that he and the gentlemen who went with him were fully satisfied with the sight which greeted them. Mr. Savage's find has given a great impetus to the number of prospectors, which promises the development of a new source of wealth in this portion of our Eastern dominions.

THE THEATRICAL SEASON, 1878-79.—We have received from Messrs. Shepherd and Freyberger a prospectus of a joint stock company which they propose to form, for the purpose of leasing the Theatre Royal, Chowringhee, and bringing out a dramatic company from England to play there during the ensuing season. The proposed capital is Rs. 35,000, in 350 shares of Rs. 100 each; and as an inducement to the public to invest, the holder of one or more shares will have the right of free entrance to the theatre once every week during the season. The scheme includes extensive alterations to the theatre, both external as regards the approaches, &c., and internal in respect to the fittings and decorations. These alterations are estimated to cost Rs. 8,000; the advances to artistes, and passages out and home for a company of fifteen persons, is put down at Rs. 17,750, and other minor expenses, bring the preliminary outlay to Rs. 27,650. The annual expenses are estimated at Rs. 64,200. And the returns for the season, calculating on Rs. 4,000 a week, are put down at Rs. 90,000. A meeting is to be held on Saturday afternoon, when Mr. Shepherd will be ready to give any information beyond what is obtainable in the prospectus. We are assured that Rs. 20,000 of the capital is already subscribed. In respect to the Corinthian Theatre, we believe Mr. Anderson intends to be well to the front. He informs us that he has already let a number of boxes and stalls, and that he proceeds to England shortly to engage his company. We have every promise, therefore, of a good healthy competition, by which the public are sure to be gainers.

Madras.

TAX ON LIQUOR LICENSE.—The amount of revenue derived by tax on Liquor License held by vendors in the town of Madras from April to January last was Rs. 9,884.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—Mr. Charles Morrice, superintendent of the Omie Malley Coffee Estate, West Coorg, was, on the evening of the 5th instant, killed by falling from his horse while riding along the Waveney Valley Estate road.

BURMESE CONVERT.—A nephew of the King of Burmah, named Moong Lat, who has resided for some years as a State prisoner at Cannanore, was baptised by the chaplain of that station, on Sunday the 7th April, in St. John's Church, in the presence of the congregation assembled for evening service.

MR. ELWIN.—A deputation of native gentlemen waited on Mr. Elwin, the retiring agent of the Madras Railway, on April 6, and presented him with a farewell address. On the evening of the same day, Mr. Elwin was entertained by his friends at dinner at the Madras Club. A hundred and fifty gentlemen sat down to dinner. His Grace the Governor was a guest.

COLONEL NAPIER CAMPBELL.—It is stated that Colonel Napier Campbell, Deputy Inspector-General of Ordnance and Magazine, who is now in Calcutta, discharging the duties of President of the Committee appointed by the Government of India, to determine upon a uniform system for preparing Ordnance accounts, is expected to return to Madras at the end of the current month.

"SPIRITS THAT MINGLE MAY."—A strange incident occurred in a district of Malabar not long since, where a signaller of the Government Telegraph was out on line duty. Forgetting to take with him, among the other appliances used on such occasions, a battery, he procured a pot of toddy, and with the help of copper and silver coins generated a current sufficient to exchange signals with an office. The toddy having undergone fermentation, formed, with the coins, a chemical combination like a proper battery.

HAIDARABAD MINT.—The Haidarabad Government lately took steps to improve the coinage of that State, and with that view imported a large quantity of machinery to establish a mint. From all accounts the coins turned out at that establishment are as unsightly and crude-looking as the "dubs" which were in circulation before the mint found a habitation in Haidarabad. The Secunderabad paper says that the "dubs" would be a disgrace to any country.

PROPOSED MEMORIAL.—The Bombay Times relates on the authority of a Madras contemporary that the Hindu community of Madras intend to erect a column opposite the Triplicane pagoda, "containing representations on stone of the British lion, her Imperial Majesty the Empress of India, and the Duke of Buckingham and Chandos, together with a few representations of famished paupers, in memory, not of the Madras Famine of 1877, but of the voluntary and generous relief afforded by both the British Government and the nation during its continuance."

THE LATE MR. MILLER.—The Madras Government have called for information about the immediate cause of the death of their Administrator-General, the late Mr. John Miller. Medical opinion is said to be divided between typhoid and dropsy; while lay opinion fears that the case was not quite understood. No official or other inquiry will recall the lamented gentleman to life; but after the apparent miscarriage of medical skill in Lord Hobart's case, the Government are right in requiring to be furnished with exact information regarding the circumstances of the loss by death of their officers.—Madras Mail.

COIR FOR PAPER.—People at Cochin and Colombo should be glad to hear of the application of the coir or fibre from the husk of the coconut palm for paper-making. It seems, from a statement in a home paper, that in France experiments have been made with the view of thus utilising the substance. In one experiment eight cwt. of fibre was made into paper, and the opinion of those engaged in the operation was that cocoanut fibre might well be used for all kinds of white paper for which esparto is now employed; or, perhaps, even a better paper may be manufactured from coir than could be procured from esparto.—Madras Mail.

THE LATE MR. COTTON.—According to the Times of India, the Madras Government has done a graceful and proper thing in Cud-dapah. Mr. Price, the late Acting Collector, submitted for the consideration of Government the question of placing, at the cost of the State, a stone, with a suitable inscription, over the grave of Mr. Cotton, of the Bengal Department Public Works, who lost his life in that district last year in consequence of small-pox, contracted when going about amongst the paupers at Royachoti who were afflicted with this disease, and doing what he could to assist the sick. Mr. Cotton left his family utterly unprovided for. Mr. Price had since learned that he died considerably in debt. The Governor in Council has sanctioned the placing of a stone with a suitable inscription over the grave of Mr. Cotton. The cost, which is not to exceed Rs. 100 will be debited to Famine Relief.

GOVERNMENT SANCTIONS.—The Government of India, in the Revenue Department, have accorded its sanction to the employment, as a temporary measure, subject to report at the end of the year, to the further additional establishment, which has been entertained by the Madras Government, in anticipation of the sanction of the Supreme Government, for the registration and compilation of the statistics of the sea-borne trade, at an increase of Rs. 12,364 per annum. It is also said to have confirmed the sanction accorded by the Madras Government to the appointment of certain Deputy Post-masters in the suburbs of the town of Madras to be stamp vendors, who are to be remunerated by discount at the rate of two per cent. upon the value of the sales that might be effected by them, on the understanding that the proceedings of the local Government are not to refer to postage stamps, for which separate rules and rates of discount exist.

THE "ALBUQUERQUE."—The steam dredger, costing over £20,000, which was ordered out from England for the purpose of deepening the Cochin Bar, has received orders to hold herself in readiness to proceed to Paumben Channel. This vessel has been lying in the Cochin Harbour for two years doing nothing, owing to hopper barges not having been ordered at the same time as the dredger; but of course that was nobody's fault. Two hopper barges have now arrived from Calicut, and although condemned by the Master Attendant of Cochin, have been ordered to be passed. These barges will accompany the dredger to the Paumben Channel. It is a pity, says a Madras paper, looking at the great natural advantages of Cochin as a harbour of refuge in all seasons, that the bar, which is a very narrow one, should be allowed to remain in its present state. There are now fourteen feet of water on the bar, and with the scour, which runs about three and-a-half knots, a dredger should soon make the harbour open for vessels drawing twenty feet.

DISTRESSING SUICIDES.—The Madras Times has the following account of the suicide of a police officer:—"I am quite incapable of performing the duties of a police officer, and so make away with myself." Thus, on the 31st March, wrote the youngest assistant superintendent in the police force of this presidency, before cutting his throat with a razor a few minutes after. Mr. Guy Melville Lawford, Acting Assistant Superintendent of Police, died at Rajahmundry, on March 31st. An inquest was held by Mr. Brandt, the District Judge. The jury, after hearing witnesses, were of opinion that the cause of death was a wound in the throat, inflicted, without any doubt, by his own hand. They were also of opinion, having read a letter left on his table addressed to Major Morris, and from other circumstances within their knowledge, that the act was committed under a temporary aberration of intellect. Mr. Lawford was the son of Colonel Lawford, Commanding 4th (P. W. O.) Cavalry at Bellary. He had been only a week in the district, but his singularly bright and happy appearance and manner had already attracted many towards him, and his sad and early death is deeply lamented by all.

H.E. THE HON. SIR RICHARD TEMPLE, BART., G.C.S.I., C.I.E., has been pleased to accept the office of Hon. Colonel of the Bombay Volunteer Rifle Corps.

DR. T. DENISON-MACKENZIE, Senior Surgeon to the Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy Hospital, who some time ago went on two years' furlough, is, we hear from a reliable authority, not likely to return, in consequence of which Dr. Blanc will be confirmed in his acting appointment.

NEW LOCOMOTIVES.—The Government of India appears to be proceeding rapidly with the importation of new locomotives for India. The Anchor Line steamer India (Captain George Read) has just brought eight locomotives to Bombay from Liverpool, and they are now being discharged at the ship's side.

WINE IMPROVER.—There is in the Bombay harbour just now (says the Times of India), a little top-sail schooner of 130 tons register, named the Border Maid, which has been cruising about the world with a cargo of sherry and madeira (in butts and hogsheads) simply with a view to improve it. She has only six hands, all told, on board. She left Leith on the 18th August, 1877, touched at Plymouth and different ports in Australia, thence to Bombay, and now returns to Scotland via the Cape. The wine belongs to a firm in Leith, and the idea is a very novel one. She has absolutely no other cargo on board. She arrived on the 5th inst., and leaves on the 7th.

HIS EXCELLENCY SIR RICHARD TEMPLE, BART., accompanied by Mr. Hart, his Private Secretary, and Captain Dean-Pitt, left the Byculla Station about 9.36 p.m. (Madras time) on the 16th inst., for Munmar, by a special train, consisting of sixteen first and one second-class carriages. His Excellency, with his Military and Private Secretaries, and Captain Dean-Pitt, drove to the station, escorted by a few sowars of his body guard, and was received there by Sir Frank Souter, Knight, C.S.I. Amongst those who left by the special were Colonels Hancock and Merriman, Captains Marryatt, Becke, and Babington, Messrs. Hart, C.E., J. M. Maclean, Barnett, Conder, Wilson Bell, King, and others. Mr. Keily, Deputy Traffic Manager, accompanied.

FLUCTUATIONS OF TRAFFIC.—Great are the mysteries of trade in India. A few weeks ago the Great Indian Peninsula Railway could not carry the traffic offering at the stations; there seemed to be every prospect, on account of the high prices ruling for all kinds of produce, that the quantities of goods to be carried by the company would go on increasing; and the Bombay Chamber of Commerce was bombarding the Government with demands for more waggons, as the rolling-stock of the railway had not kept pace with the development of trade. Last week the tide turned. It is suddenly discovered that the cotton, grain, and seed crops have failed, and that, such as they are, there is little or no demand for them in Europe. The consequence is that the railway traffic has fallen off tremendously, and seems likely to come to an untimely end. It is curious that the European merchants should not have foreseen this extraordinary collapse.—Bombay Gazette.

Official Papers.

OPERATIONS AGAINST ISKAKOT.

(Punjab Gazette, April 4, 1878.)

(From Captain P. L. N. Cavagnari, C.S.I., Deputy Commissioner, Peshawar, to the Commissioner and Superintendent, Peshawar Division).

On receipt of your order conveying the approval of the Government to the proposal to employ military force against the Ranizai village of Iskakot, I at once communicated with Captain Warburton, Assistant Commissioner in charge of the Yusafzai sub-division, and directed him to arrange, in consultation with the Officer Commanding the Guides, to move out a force of sufficient strength to surprise and, if possible, surround the said village. The Hazara Mountain Battery had received orders to proceed to Mardan, and was therefore also available if its services were considered necessary.

2. As my presence at Mardan would have created suspicion, and as it was most necessary for the success of the movement that the most absolute secrecy should be maintained, I arranged to reach Mardan just before the troops should march, and entrusted all the preparations to Captain Warburton to manage.

3. A force (Hazara Mountain Battery, Guide Cavalry, 258 sabres, Guide Infantry, 432 rifles) left Mardan at a little before nine o'clock on the evening of the 13th inst., the distance having to be marched being about twenty-three miles, and the object being to reach our positions before day-break. A detour had to be made in order to avoid the village of Jalala; and as it was known that after the night attack on Sapri the people of Iskakat, feeling that they had good grounds for alarm that they might receive a similar visit from the troops, had been keeping a watch outside their village, the utmost caution had to be observed.

4. The village of Iskakat is situated on the right bank of a very deep ravine, which is the main drainage channel of a great portion of the Ranizai country. Its direction as it passes Iskakat and enters British territory is due north and south. Between this ravine and the hills on the east the ground was described to be practicable for cavalry. On the north-west of the village there is a small detached hill, which, from the description we received, completely commanded Iskakat, and, if held, would prevent any assistance from the independent villages to the north. Owing to the precipitous character of the banks of the ravine, crossing it, except at the regular fords, would have been a matter of extreme difficulty, if not impossible, for troops to accomplish by night, and we had to try and discover some ford which would not be too close to either Iskakat or Dobandi, another Ranizai village about two miles further down the ravine.

5. The plan of operations was as follows:—A party of infantry under Major Stewart was sent on ahead to cross the ravine and occupy the hill to the north-west of the village. The remainder of the infantry were to follow under Major Campbell, and after crossing the ravine were to take up a position as close as possible to the village preparatory to attacking it as soon as it was light. The artillery and cavalry remained on the left bank of the ravine, at a distance of about two miles from Iskakat, with orders to wait till daybreak, when the artillery with its infantry guard was to take up a suitable position to the south of the village; and the cavalry under Captain Wigram Battye were to move rapidly forward and cut off the retreat of the enemy to the north and east, placing some dismounted troopers to close up the head of the ravine.

6. The party under Major Stewart reached the crest of the hill without having alarmed the residents of Iskakat, and on this depended the success of the surprise. The main body of the infantry, under Major Campbell, which Captain Warburton and myself accompanied, reached their position in front of the village just as it was getting light. The people of Iskakat evidently were first aroused by hearing and seeing the cavalry trotting past to take up the position assigned to them. The alarm drums were then beaten, and the villagers were then seen streaming out and making for the hill to the north-west of the village, but only to find that it was occupied by the troops. Major Campbell then advanced in skirmishing order towards the village. At this juncture I sent forward Malik Barkat Ali, of Jamal Garbi (a man sufficiently well known and respected to make it a matter of no great risk to depute him on such an errand), to inform the headmen that their village was surrounded, and that if they did not intend to resist they should send their jirgat to submit unconditionally. This they very wisely did, and the armed men gave up their weapons to the troops without offering the slightest resistance.

7. We then proceeded into the village and demanded the surrender of all outlaws from British territory. The headmen denied that there were any to be found in the village, and made all kinds of excuses to account for the absence of those who were admitted to have been residing in the place. The Inspector and Deputy Inspector of Police, aided by some of the soldiers, then commenced searching the village, but though it is impossible to believe that there were not several of those who were entered in the list Captain Warburton produced concealed in the vicinity, after a couple of hours' ineffectual search, we had to recognise the fact that unless the headmen assisted us it was quite hopeless to discover the whereabouts of the parties we were seeking for, especially as the village contained more than 500 houses, and was situated in a very network of ravines. Three unimportant arrests were made; and though I threatened to carry prisoners into Mardan a number of the principal men of the village if the outlaws were not surrendered, it was all of no avail. I therefore proceeded to make such demands from the residents of Iskakat as would prevent that village from being in future an asylum for criminals from British territory. The headmen urged that they had never, in common with other border villages, been prohibited from giving shelter to refugees from the plains, but they admitted that they were responsible for preventing such men from committing offences against British subjects, and they expressed their readiness to at once adjust all claims that might be proved against them. The principal offence committed by the people of Iskakat was the raid on Shergarh in 1876, for which, as previously reported, they had been undergoing a self-imposed blockade for fear of reprisals being taken from them. As generally follows, when a tribe is plunged into open misbehaviour, there were indications that if the account was permitted to remain unsettled much longer serious complications might result, and it was with the view to prevent this that I suggested the prompt show of force to compel an immediate settlement.

8. I made the following demands, and threatened to take back with me a sufficient number of cattle to cover all claims for compensation unless the headmen agreed to what was asked:—

- 1st.—That they should pay a fine of Rs. 500 for past misconduct.
- 2nd.—That they should at once adjust all claims of British subjects for compensation for losses inflicted on them within British territory.
- 3rd.—That all outlaws should be at once expelled from Iskakat, and suitable guarantees should be given by the headmen, binding them in future to refuse such persons an asylum.
- 4th.—That hostages or other suitable guarantee for the good behaviour in future of the village should be furnished.

The headmen at once agreed to these demands, and thirty of the principal men of the village were selected to be taken as hostages to Mar-dan, to remain there till the terms were adjusted. A limit of one week was fixed within which a settlement as above was to be completed. The headmen further agreed that they would force the outlaws to submit to any penalty awarded by a jirga, should the authorities desire to have any of the cases disposed of in this manner.

9. I purposely made the pecuniary demands from the village as moderate and easy to be complied with as possible, as leniency under the existing circumstances could not possibly be misinterpreted, seeing that the whole of the village, its inhabitants and property, were completely in our power, and we could have helped ourselves to whatever they had. Moreover, a settlement voluntarily agreed to by the headmen, and sufficiently easy for them to enforce from the villagers, is more likely to be productive of permanent good results in future than might be the case if the terms had been so severe as to tempt the unruly members of the tribe to resist the prompt settlement of them; for though we could take action against the hostages and have ultimately obtained what was required, still the results would not be nearly so satisfactory as if a speedy compliance with our demands followed without a check the employment of military force. The comparison that will certainly be made between the moderate demands of the British Government and what would have been the case had the village been captured during the factional quarrels amongst the trans-border Khans, those of Swat in particular, will possibly not be without good effect. If, on the other hand, the leniency which has been shown proved hereafter to have been a mistake, it will not be a matter of much difficulty to pay Iskakat another visit and inflict a more severe punishment. I am, however, tolerably confident that this will not be necessary, and that there will be nothing to complain of in the conduct of this village or of the Ranizai tribe in general for some time to come.

10. As the villagers had made no use of their arms against our troops, I requested Major Campbell to return the weapons that had been surrendered to the people of the village. These arms were of the poorest description, and as they represent those in the possession of the tribes throughout Swat and the countries of the north, we have not much to fear from any future encounter with them.

11. While at Iskakat the Ranizai of the adjacent villages sent in their headmen to offer their services. I informed them that the object of the visit of the troops was purely to compel the people of Iskakat to respect the property of British subjects, and to no longer permit their village to be an asylum for criminals of every description, and that I hoped that the rest of Ranizai would do what the headmen of Iskakat had agreed to do in future. So completely overawed were they all by the sudden appearance of a military force amongst them, that I believe we might have seized the Malakand Pass and entered Swat without much resistance. As the troops returned the villagers ran along by their side until well within the British border, and seemed to enjoy the spectacle. Many of them had never seen an European force before, though there were some who recollect the visit of Sir Colin Campbell's force in 1852.

12. To the admirable arrangements made by Captain Warburton, Major Campbell, and the officers of the Guides, the success of the movement is entirely due, and I trust that you will bring their services to the notice of the Government. I beg specially to express my acknowledgments to Major Campbell for the courteous manner in which he met all my wishes.

13. The whole force returned to Mardan before nine o'clock on the evening of the 14th, having marched nearly fifty miles within twenty-four hours—a feat which they may all be well proud of.

14. Malik Barkat Ali and the village guides will be suitably rewarded for their services. Major Stewart speaks very highly of the guides furnished him by Captain Warburton.

15. In conclusion, I would observe that, although the outlaws whose capture was hoped for succeeded in evading our search for them, this was a minor point compared with the general settlement of our account with Iskakat, which the complete manner in which the surprise was effected has enabled me to carry out, and has prevented what was not a very serious matter from assuming graver proportions.

No. 569, dated Lahor, April 3, 1878.

(From Lepel Griffin, Esq., Officiating Secretary to the Government, Punjab, to the Commissioner and Superintendent, Peshawar Division).

I have laid before the Lieutenant-Governor your letter of the 17th ult., covering a report of the Deputy Commissioner of Peshawar, dated 16th idem, No. 54, describing the operations undertaken against the Ranizai village of Iskakat. The proposals for effecting the surprise of this contumacious village were laid before the Lieutenant-Governor previous to his departure from Peshawar, and his approval of the attempt was communicated to you, his Honour feeling sure, from the discretion and energy which had been displayed in the attack on Sapri, that a similar operation against the village of Iskakat would not be less successful. These anticipations have been fully realised. The arrangements for the surprise of the village were well planned and excellently carried out; the surprise was complete; and although the capture of outlaws from British territory, which was one main object of the enterprise, was not effected so far as the more important offenders were concerned, yet the complete submission of this large village, without resistance to the terms imposed, shows how much the people were impressed with the weakness of their position.

2. The terms imposed, as stated in paragraph 8 of the Deputy Commissioner's letter, are considered by the Lieutenant-Governor to be suitable, and the reasons given for their moderation appear to be sufficient.

3. The Lieutenant-Governor desires his special acknowledgments to be conveyed to Captain Cavagnari, Deputy Commissioner; Captain Warburton, Assistant Commissioner, in charge of the Yusafzai sub-division, to whom the preliminary arrangements were entrusted; and to Major Campbell, Commanding the Guide Corps.

The service performed by the troops was arduous in the extreme; and it was, as is invariably the case with this distinguished Corps, excellently performed.

4. Any Khans of zemindars who rendered service in furnishing information or otherwise should be suitably rewarded.

EAST INDIA PUBLIC WORKS COMMITTEE.

The Select Parliamentary Committee appointed to investigate the system of the Public Works Department of the Indian Government resumed its sitting for the first time after the Easter holidays on May 9; Lord George Hamilton in the chair.

Colonel Crofton, Inspector-General of Irrigation Works, Public Works Department, India, formerly Chief Engineer of Irrigation in the Punjab, was the witness called. Lord G. Hamilton conducted the examination-in-chief, when the following evidence was given:—

The witness, in answer to a series of questions from the Chair, stated generally that he endorsed the plans and recommendations of Colonels Dickens and Rundell to develop the irrigation and railway systems of India so as to meet the contingencies of drought and famine. Having explained the modes of land settlement and revenue collection in India, the witness referred to the assessment of the land in the Punjab and North-Western Provinces for the purpose of meeting the expenditure on irrigation. The cultivators were assessed, and had to pay a water-rate for the benefits they derived from an improved method of irrigation, namely, by the construction of irrigation and navigation canals, and the reconstruction and protection of already existing tanks and reservoirs of various kinds. The attention devoted by the Government to irrigation works dated back to half a century; and from 1862 schemes and plans for irrigating the soil had been specially attended to, under a new Land Settlement Act. An indirect revenue from land under cultivation was obtained from assessments and a water-rate. The cultivators paid rent to their landlords, and the latter a water-rate to the revenue. The assessment was on the landlord, not the tenant. The Act of 1873 passed by the Indian Legislature fixed more equitable imposts or rates, but the new rates have not yet been levied, as recommended by the Act.

To assist the committee in calculating percentages of gain to indirect revenue from irrigation, the witness read from official papers, being returns to show the income derived from the old Jumna canals, these being the oldest irrigation works of importance in India. It appeared that from 1825 to 1835 the sum of £12,000 was the total financial advantage to indirect revenue of the Western Jumna Canal. From 1834.5 until the date of the regular revenue settlement of thirty years, made in 1842, no other documents than those which regulated the striking of the percentage in favour of revenue from 1824.5 to 1834.5 are accessible.

Replying to questions put to ascertain what had been the returns to revenue from irrigation rates, the witness referred to papers showing the indirect revenue derived from year to year from cultivators using the irrigation works constructed by the Government; and after detailing the number of canals and other works that had been constructed up to the present time by the activity of the Public Works Department, the witness's examination in chief concluded.

Miscellaneous.

EXPORT OF SPECIE.—The Peninsular and Oriental steamer Mongolia has left for Bombay with £66,500 in bar silver.

VISCOUNT CRANBROOK.—Mr. Gathorne Hardy, Secretary of State for India, has been gazetted to the Peerage under the title of Viscount Cranbrook, of Hemsted, in the county of Kent.

LEVÉE.—The Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief will hold a levée at one o'clock on Thursday, the 16th inst., at the Horse Guards, Whitehall, the number being limited to 150. Applications to attend should be addressed to the Military Secretary.

IMPORT OF SPECIE.—The Peninsular and Oriental steamship Nepaul left Galle on Wednesday for Suez and Southampton, with £570,000 in specie. The Pekin is expected to arrive at the latter port on the 11th inst. with £586,362, principally in gold from the East.

TROOPS FROM INDIA.—The Serapis, Indian troopship, Captain Davidson, arrived at Portsmouth on the 9th inst. from Bombay, with time-expired men and invalids. She left Bombay on April 6, arrived at Port Said on the 21st, Suez on the 23rd, and Malta on the 29th.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders for £500,000 in bills on India were received at the Bank of England on Wednesday. The amounts allotted were:—To Calcutta, £446,100; and to Bombay, £53,900. Tenders on both Presidencies at 1s. 8½d. will receive about 13 per cent., above in full. This result shows a decline of exactly ½d. per rupee compared with last week.

OXFORD LECTURE.—The Boden Professor of Sanskrit (Monier Williams, D.C.L.) proposes to give a public lecture (open to all members of the University and their friends) in the large lecture room of the Museum, on Wednesday, May 22, at three p.m. The subject will be "Indian Domestic and Religious Life," and the lecture will be illustrated by objects of interest brought from India.

HERR LOCZY.—The Geographical Magazine has heard from India that Herr L. Loczy, the geologist, has slightly modified his programme by a journey to Darjiling, whither he arrived on the 9th February, and whence he has started for Independent Sikkim, with the object of studying some of the glacial formations of the Himalayas.

H.M.S. EUPHRATES.—The Euphrates, Indian troopship, made a trial of her machinery after slight repairs. She was six hours underweigh, the official trial lasting two hours. The trial was quite successful, the boilers being free from priming, and keeping their steam well. The pressure of steam was 58.5 lb., the vacuum 27.5 in., the mean revolutions fifty-three per minute, and the speed realised, by log, 13½ knots. The maximum power developed was 3,667.72, and the mean power 3,582.63 horses.

SHAKESPEARE MEMORIAL.—Notice has been sent to us of a performance to take place at the Gaiety Theatre on the afternoon of Wednesday, the 22nd inst., in aid of the Shakespeare Memorial Theatre, Library and Gallery now approaching completion at Stratford-on-Avon. The selections from the great bard's plays and the names of the distinguished artistes who have kindly come forward to interpret them; besides the announcement of Miss Kate Field, Messrs. Hermann Vezin and Arthur Cecil in a new comediotta, will doubtless induce Indian as other playgoers to do honour to so good a cause.

THE "LADIES' CLUB."—The Russell Club, 316, Regent-street, which has been established with the especial object of affording to ladies and gentlemen alike the advantage of a first rate social club, opened its doors to the members on May 1. We have had an opportunity of observing since that a very respectable quota of ladies attend the Club, although of course at present the gentlemen are more numerous. Would not the Russell Club prove an eligible resort to Anglo-Indians, alike ladies and gentlemen, who, in a modified form, at least, are familiar with that kind of social intercourse in India?

CAPTAIN GILL'S recent journey in Western China supplies an interesting confirmation of the apparent existence of a belt of exceedingly moist region between the Tibetan plateau and the lands encompassing it on its north-eastern and eastern sides. Prejevalsky, in his "Mongolia and Tangut Country," notices this feature while ascending the mountains south-west of Taging; the Père Armand David noticed it during his residence at Mupin, north of Ching-tu-fu; Mr. Cooper, while making his way from the last-named place into Eastern Tibet; and Captain Gill's testimony now supplies us with a link between the observations of Prejevalsky and David, as he speaks of the wonderfully moist and semi-tropical character of the vegetation on the eastern side of the plateau, between the valleys of Sun-pan ting and Ling-ngan, on the extreme northern border of the province of Se-chuen.—Geographical Magazine.

SADDLERS' COMPANY.—One of those banquets which are seldom seen out of the City of London, and which the Worshipful Company of Saddlers know so well how to give, took place on the 1st May at the Saddlers' Hall, in Cheapside, and was attended by the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor, General Lord Airey, Sir William Codrington, Sir Erasmus Ommaney and other distinguished guests. The officers of the Company performed their respective parts with that easy and unrestrained hospitality for which they are noted; and the loving cup was passed with the prescribed time-honoured ceremonies. Mr. Roebuck responded for the House of Commons with his usual fire and felicity; and openly avowed his confidence in the present Government for rightly concluding the delicate negotiations now pending with regard to Turkey and the Eastern Question. Other speeches were made; and the concert, under the direction of Mr. Wilbye Cooper, was most successful; Miss Jane Wells was in excellent voice, and sang her solo in the National Anthem in a manner to arouse and charm her hearers; Mr. Hilton has a fine organ, and is heard perhaps to greater advantage in a moderately-sized room than in the spacious Albert Hall.

THE NEW PEER.—The Right Hon. Gathorne Hardy, who has been elevated to the Peerage under the name, style, and title of "Viscount Cranbrook of Cranbrook and of Hemstead, in the county of Kent," is the third and youngest son of the late Mr. John Hardy, of Dunstall-hall, Staffordshire, some time M.P. for Bradford, by his marriage with Isabel, daughter of the late Mr. Richard Gathorne, of Kirkby Lonsdale, Westmoreland. He was born in the year 1814, and was educated at Shrewsbury School and at Oriel College, Oxford, where he took his bachelor's degree in 1837. He was called to the Bar at the Inner Temple in 1840. He entered Parliament in 1856 as member for Leominster, and represented that constituency down to the general election of 1865, when he succeeded in defeating Mr. Gladstone and securing his seat for the University of Oxford, which he has represented for nearly thirteen years. He was Under-Secretary for the Home Department under Lord Derby in 1858-59, President of the Poor Law Board in 1866-67, and Home Secretary under Mr. Disraeli in 1867-68. On the formation of the present Administration he undertook the post of Secretary of State for the War Department, which, as our readers are aware, he has recently exchanged for the control of our Indian affairs, in the place of Lord Salisbury. He is a magistrate and deputy-lieutenant for the West Riding of Yorkshire, and a magistrate for Kent, and ex-chairman of the West Kent Quarter Sessions. Lord Cranbrook married in 1838 Jane, daughter of Mr. James Orr, of Hollywood-house, county Down, Ireland, by whom he has a family. His eldest son, the Hon. John Stewart Hardy, who sits as member for Rye, and is heir apparent to the title, was born in 1839, and married in 1867 Miss Cicely Marguerite Wilhelmina Ridgway, daughter of Mr. Joseph Ridgway, of Fairlawn, near Tunbridge, Kent.—Times.

INDIAN TROOPS.—The following extract of a letter from the Times correspondent, writing from Alexandria on the 27th ult., shows that preparations have already been made for the arrival of the native Indian contingent in Egypt:—Water is already provided at Suez, and coal at Port Said. This news seems to bring war terribly near, though the measure is only one of precaution on the principle of Si vis pacem para bellum. Thousands of British soldiers, of course, pass through the Canal every year, but they come by in the stately transports of the Royal Navy at stated intervals, and we are used to the recurrent passage and re-passage of these floating barracks. But a motley crowd of merchantmen, sailing vessels as well as steamers, is a different thing. Out of the thirty soon to be on the road, seventeen are sailing vessels. The first two are expected at Suez in a fortnight, the rest about the 17th of May. The passage of the Canal by such a fleet will somewhat disturb the ordinary traffic. Of course, the steamers will follow the ordinary rule and go through under their own steam; but they will have enough to do to take care of themselves, and will not be permitted to attempt any towage for the sailing ships. That duty will have to be performed by the local tugs of the company, some eight in number, which will be in readiness. The average time of passage for a steamer from entrance to entrance is thirty-six hours and fifty for a sailing vessel. But the latter are much more difficult to manage than vessels under their own steam, and their time cannot be so accurately predicted. It would seem an easy business to tow a ship through a big ditch in the desert, but a considerable tide sets in from the Red Sea, and its ebb and flow in the curves of the Canal create under-currents that always require good pilotage, and are at times very dangerous when things are complicated by a strong land breeze. But the pilots of the Canal know their work, and, fortunately, the Agent for the Government of India in Egypt, Admiral Willoughby, R.N., who has been charged with the transport through Egypt of all British troops since his appointment before the Abyssinian war in 1867, knows the Canal with all its curves and its currents, its cross winds and its sand-storms, probably better than any other man living."

INDIAN TROOPS.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, May 6.—The departure of Indian troops for Malta during the short recess which has just terminated gave rise to no less than three notices of motion. The Chancellor of the Exchequer was to be asked by Sir W. HARCOURT whether the coming soldiers would remain subject to the Native Articles of War; by Mr. WHITWELL, whether the Indian Government had voted the money necessary for their despatch; by Mr. HOLMS, under what Act or Article of War they were called upon to serve in Europe; and by Mr. LAING, whether opportunity would be given to the House to discuss the particular step taken? This was a mere preliminary to the debate which followed, when the Marquis of HARTINGTON put his two questions to the right hon. gentleman; first, as to the state of the negotiations with Russia, and chances of a Conference; and, secondly, why the decision to employ Indian troops had not been communicated to the House before the recess?

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER replied to the effect that it were unwise to discuss the pending negotiations; and that it was neither necessary nor according to practice that the decision referred to should have been made public. He had been charged by Mr. Bright with having deceived the House: he did not see the member for Birmingham in his place, but he hoped if he had any charge of that kind to make he would lay it before members in some definite form.—Mr. FAWCETT did not accuse the Chancellor of the Exchequer of practising deception; but he himself had been deceived by the statement made by the right hon. gentleman before the recess, that there had been no change in the policy of Government. He considered the despatch of Indian troops westward to mark a very great change. Some of his friends had told him there was nothing to prevent the Government from landing seventy or eighty thousand men in London. Such a thing should not be done without the consent of Parliament. He moved the adjournment of the House.—Sir GEORGE CAMPBELL did not see by what law the troops would be governed, nor what provision would be made for their pay; after which he made many sound and sensible remarks about the native soldier and Press correspondents, which are at least worthy of attentive consideration. Those who usually disagree in opinion from the member for Kirkcaldy may well take a lesson from his Indian experience, which is great and varied.—Sir W. HARCOURT questioned the right of Government to transfer the Native Army of India to Europe at its pleasure, and pressed for enlightenment on the authority now claimed. He stated his own views on the subject in order that the Chancellor of the Exchequer might give fuller explanations, and so that the relations between the House and the Government might be understood, with reference to the measure under discussion and other measures of a like character.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER then rose and entered fully and frankly into the debate. He admitted the importance of the step taken; but, at the same time, it was neither more nor less than a direction given by her Majesty for the moving of a portion of her forces from one part of the Empire to the other. And though it was a movement which would undoubtedly come under the notice of Parliament (and over which Parliament holds the control which it holds over all movements of British forces—that of the right of withholding or challenging the supplies asked for the purpose), yet so far as the order given to her Majesty's troops was concerned, it was strictly within the proper constitutional prerogative of the Crown, and one which her Majesty had as much right to give as to order any portion of British troops then in England to proceed to Gibraltar or Malta or any where else. Then, as to the want of notice of the step, it was not desirable that there should be any premature discussion or disclosures until the necessary arrangements were completed. The decision was arrived at in principle some time ago, but the arrangements had to be made in India, where they required time, and where they could be satisfactorily completed only by the observance of secrecy. As regards bringing Indian troops to England, he believed that such a step would be contrary to the Bill of Rights, and that it was one which no Minister of the Crown could advise her Majesty to take without the consent of Parliament. The employment of the Indian revenue for the purpose of enabling her Majesty to use Indian troops out of India without the sanction of Parliament, again, was distinctly provided against in, he thought, an Act of 1859. Indian troops in Indian pay could only be brought outside the limits of India for the purpose of repelling invasion. The funds required to bring Indian troops out of India for other purposes must be supplied by Parliament. Hence the entire expense of the sending of these troops from India to Malta would be borne by the Imperial Exchequer. He hoped there would be no necessity to go further into the discussion at that time; but he felt that it would be within the competence of the House to discuss these matters when the Estimate was produced.

Mr. LAING contended that our hold on India would be seriously endangered if we removed our Indian troops from the garrison duty they were performing, and transformed them into a powerful army with a martial and roving spirit. A much larger number of European officers would be required to keep them in check than at present, and the strength of our European army in India would also have to be increased, so as not to tempt the native troops to rise against us by allowing them to feel that they were stronger than we. The result would be an enormous increase in the financial burdens of India. A step of the kind taken by the Government was one on which the House ought to have been informed.—Sir JOHN HAY believed that the course adopted by her Majesty's Government would show that they were prepared to put forth the full strength of the Empire, should the occasion arise for doing so.—Mr. NEWDEGATE regarded the question raised by the hon. member for Hackney as being a good deal more than a mere matter of punctilio. He would have much preferred that Government had, under the circumstances, employed mercenary to Indian troops.—Mr. RYLANDS believed the ordering troops from India involved a great constitutional question.—Mr. BAILLIE COCHRANE thought it was a most fortunate occurrence that the Government had ordered troops from India.—Sir ROBERT PEEL could not see the slightest objection to the course pursued; and was thoroughly convinced they were right in giving the Government all the support in their power—a support which their policy justified them in expecting at the hands of the House of Commons.—Mr. E. JENKINS was of opinion that Government might be technically right in removing troops from India, but if they went too near the line which divided constitutionality from unconstitutionality, and pushed the rights of the Crown to the extreme, they might endanger the stability of the Throne.—Mr. FAWCETT said that he and others would be false to their principles if they did not by their votes protest against the Government saying they could call an indefinite number of troops from India without informing Parliament; and, therefore, if a resolution were not brought forward by some one of higher authority, he should move one himself, and he should avail himself of the third reading of the Customs and Inland Revenue Bill, as completing the Budget, to ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer how he meant to provide the ways and means for the additional expense that had been incurred.

The motion was then, by leave, withdrawn.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, May 7.—INDIAN TROOPS.—Mr. CHAMBERLAIN gave notice that on an early day he would move that, sharing the earnest desire expressed in the Circular Despatch of Lord Salisbury for the good government, peace, and freedom of the populations to whom these blessings had been strange, the House condemned the policy of warlike demonstration which her Majesty's Government had pursued, and was of opinion that the object in question and an honourable and peaceful settlement of existing difficulties would be best promoted by a European Congress, and a frank definition of the changes in the Treaty of San Stefano which her Majesty's Government consider necessary for the general good of Europe and the interest of England.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER, replying to Mr. WHITWELL and Mr. HOLMS, supplemented his statement of the previous day with regard to the cost of moving the Indian troops to Malta, by explaining that the Indian Government had for the moment made the necessary provision, and that on an early day he would submit an Estimate to the House for its repayment, and for making such further provision as might be requisite. The troops served under the Mutiny Act and Articles of War passed by the Government of India, under an Imperial Statute of the 24th and 25th of the Queen, but they could not be called on to serve in the United Kingdom in time of peace without the consent of Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, May 9.—MAIL CONTRACTS.—On the motion for going into committee on the Civil Service Estimates, —Mr. G. BENTINCK (whose remarks were not audible to the reporters) called attention to the contracts at present existing between the Post-office and the Peninsular and Oriental Company, under which the company are fined for the non-delivery of the mails at the contract dates, and moved—"That, in the opinion of this House, the enforcing of a contract which makes no allowance for fogs and bad weather leads to incurring great and unjustifiable risks, by inducing, and even compelling, the masters of mail packets to neglect the necessary precautions in such weather, and thereby to endanger life and property; and that in such contracts the give and take system ought to be adhered to."—Mr. D. ONSLOW said that, in the whole history of the P. and O. Company there was no instance of a ship being lost by reason of a captain going too fast or of negligence during a fog. The contract with the Government was expensive, and allowed a considerable margin for bad weather, and he had never heard a complaint from any of the captains against the Government upon this score.—Lord JOHN MANNERS had never heard of the risks mentioned by the hon. gentleman till he had called his attention to it recently. As a matter of fact, there had been no loss of life; and no risk in consequence of the provisions of the contract. During the existence of the contract 364 voyages had been made, and there had been no loss of life; and another company, under a like contract, had made 154 voyages without occasioning any loss of life. The complaint rested entirely upon an anonymous letter in the Times, which was really not relevant to the case. He hoped the matter would be allowed to rest where it was, especially as complaints had been made in India that the contract speed was not high enough.—the motion was put and negatived.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FRIDAY, May 10.—INDIAN TROOPS.—Sir H. JAMES gave notice that on Monday next he would ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the number of the forces at present employed for the safety of the United Kingdom and the defence of the possessions of her Majesty's Crown, exclusive of the numbers actually serving in her Majesty's Indian possessions; and whether, with the addition of the native troops which it was proposed to remove from India, those forces would exceed the number authorised by Parliament, viz.:—135,452.—Mr. A. MILLS gave notice of his intention to move the following amendment to the motion of the hon. member for Hackney:—"That this House cordially approves of the policy of her Majesty's Government in the employment of native troops from India on Imperial services—(Ministerial cheers)—not only as involving a legitimate exercise of the Royal prerogative, but also as affording a substantial recognition by the Home Government of the loyalty and efficiency of the Indian army."—Sir H. HAVELOCK gave notice that on Monday he would ask whether it was not a fact that the officers commanding the Indian cavalry and infantry troops ordered to Malta would receive, according to Indian rates of pay, four times the amount of pay which some of the officers commanding the English troops in Malta would do.—Major NOLAN asked the Under-Secretary of State for India what was the proportion to each thousand of the fighting men ordered to embark from India of the non-combatants attached under the heads of transport, supply, or hospital services, or as camp-followers, including dhooly-bearers, bheesties, syces, and servants.—Mr. E. STANHOPE said the proportion of non-combatants would be 380 per thousand men, and although they had no precise details, he believed they would include transport, supply, and hospital services.

A NOVELTY IN BILLIARDS.—M. Carmé, the French professional billiard-player, continues to be a great attraction, his exhibitions twice a-week being always attended by large numbers of people who are never weary of seeing his proofs that he has extraordinary command over the balls. Recently he has started French "pin pool," which to English pool-players looks a most eccentric game—more like skittles than billiards. A number of pins, each having a definite value, are placed round the table, and the player receives the value of as many pins as he can knock down with any ball on the table at one stroke. There are, however, two black pins on the board, and, if any of these is knocked down, the player has to pay a forfeit, and commence again if he wishes to continue in the game. If he succeeds in putting down both black pins without knocking down any of the others, he wins the pool; but this is a feat rarely accomplished, for these awkward pins are always tumbling down at the wrong time until the player is tired of paying forfeits. The player who first scores an aggregate of thirty-one or over wins the pool. Many people think the game is easy, and depends purely upon luck, but the professor can always show that it can be played really scientifically, because by beautiful accuracy he can, at least once out of three times, knock down nearly the whole of the pins, or two blacks alone. Altogether it is a singular game, and is worth seeing, if not playing.—Bombay Gazette.

SHOCKING ACCIDENT.—We hear that a Goanese girl took her seat in a third-class carriage from Deeksal on Wednesday without a ticket. When others in the carriage with her found that she had no ticket, they told her she would be taken up by the police. She got so terrified that she jumped out of the train while it was in motion, and the train passed over her legs and cut them off above the ankles. She was taken to the Sassoon Hospital for treatment when the train arrived.—Deccan Herald.

By W. BRIGHT, Colour-Sergeant, 37th Middlesex R.V.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"Under this title, Colour-Sergeant Bright, of the 37th Middlesex R.V., has prepared an elaborate series of 'Test Questions' in all the matters in which a Sergeant of Volunteer Infantry has to be examined for his Certificate. The questions are very well framed, and very complete. Except in a very few instances, the answers are not given, but each question is followed by a reference to the Field Exercise, or the Rifle Exercises, from which the student will gain the information necessary to frame the answer. The book is interleaved with blank paper, so that the answers, when discovered, may be written out. Altogether the scheme is a very ingenious one, and we commend the new 'Red Book' to all Sergeants or intending Sergeants. We should add that the book contains a useful Appendix on certain points of military etiquette with which all Volunteers ought to be acquainted."—Volunteer Service Gazette, March 2, 1878.

"The object of this work is to enable a candidate for promotion to the rank of Sergeant in the Volunteer Infantry to acquire by heart a thorough knowledge of the subjects of his examination. . . . The questions are clearly framed, and . . . a very good method has been adopted for impressing the subject on the memory. A simple, handy book of the sort was much wanted, and the want has been supplied."—Broad Arrow, March 2, 1878.

"In this useful little manual of fifty-eight pages Mr. Bright has succeeded in making a 'royal road' for those members of the Volunteer Force who may desire to qualify themselves for the rank of Sergeant. . . . The 'Red Book for Sergeants' is a concise and practical guide, and should be in the hands of every Volunteer in the Kingdom."—Weekly Dispatch, March 10, 1878.

"The work is very carefully compiled and neatly got up, and seems well adapted for the end in view. . . . This 'Red Book' takes a comprehensive view of what all Volunteers, commissioned or non-commissioned, should know, and cannot fail to be of great value to all ranks of the Service. Some very useful information is given in an Appendix."—Military Record and Volunteer News, March 13, 1878.

"A compact shilling 'Red Book for Sergeants' appears very opportunely, as Volunteers are turning their thoughts to active service. . . . A most useful guide for Volunteers."—Lloyd's Weekly Newspaper, March 24, 1878.

OPINIONS OF VOLUNTEER OFFICERS.

The following is a copy of a letter received from Lieutenant-Colonel C. E. HOWARD VINCENT, Commanding Central London Rifle Rangers (4th Middlesex), President of the Volunteer Conference, and late of the 23rd Royal Welsh Fusiliers:—

"Lieutenant-Colonel Howard Vincent has read with great interest the 'Red Book for Sergeants,' compiled by Colour-Sergeant Bright, of the 37th Middlesex. The questions have been very carefully framed, and there can be no doubt that writing out the answers to them will impress the duties of Sergeants more on their memories than any other system. The publication of this book affords additional evidence of the successful zeal with which the Non-commissioned Officers of Volunteers apply themselves to their military duties—to the great gain of the entire Force.—Feb. 21, 1878."

One Officer (a Major) writes:—
"I have no hesitation in expressing my opinion that it should be in the hands of every Non-Commissioned Officer in the Service."

Another (a Captain) writes:—
"It is likely to be of service not only to Non-Commissioned, but all ranks in the Volunteer Service."

Similar approbatory letters have also been received from many other Officers of the Volunteer Force.

USE NO SUBSTITUTE.—See perpetual injunction against imitators; also the unanimous judgment before the Lords Justices Bramwell, Brett, and Cotton, Jan. 22, 1878, in H. Lamplough's favour.
Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates.

Her Majesty's Representative, the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."

SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.

SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.

For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor,

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are, from Bombay, April 29; Allahabad and Madras, April 27; Calcutta, April 26.

THE Indian papers are chiefly taken up with accounts of the great enthusiasm evinced by the native troops ordered on foreign service. Nothing could be more soldierly or satisfactory than the spirit of the army moving westward. The first detachment was to leave Bombay in four steamers and five sailing vessels, the latter towed by the former, on the day of the Mail's departure. At Madras a hundred volunteers were required to strengthen the 25th, or Regiment of Native Infantry selected for foreign service; and that number at once came forward from one Regiment alone, the 15th N.I., which had returned to Madras about six weeks before, and had hardly become settled in its lines. According to the Madras Times, "when volunteers were called, the whole regiment offered to go, and when the commanding officer explained to them that only a hundred men were required, the whole regiment again came forward, and begged to be sent, but only one hundred of the most persistent were selected." The men went off, it seems, in excellent spirits, leaving Madras by special train on the evening of Monday last for Baipur, en route to Cannanore, where, with the 25th Regiment, they embarked on board the Transport Tenasserim. The band of the 15th Regiment, at Madras, played the Volunteer detachment to the Central Station, and the men left amid much cheering from those who were present on the platform.

THE Times of India is told that not only the native soldiers, but the classes from which they generally enlist, are showing the greatest anxiety to take part in the war, and commanding officers have informed the authorities that they could raise a second battalion of their regiments in a few days. The Commander-in-Chief at Bombay, in spite of recent severe illness, has been energetically engaged in superintending the whole arrangements for the Expeditionary Force. On the other hand, the harbour defences and other practical provisions are insufficient to escape attention. Efforts were being made to complete the battery at Scandal Point early in May; and the Marine authorities in Calcutta had been asked for as many spare seamen and engineers as could be obtained for the transports in Bombay, to be sent as early as possible.

WE give the text of a Farewell Order issued by the Viceroy to the troops embarking at Bombay:—"Soldiers,—You have been selected for the first expedition that has ever left to strengthen the British forces in the Mediterranean. Whether your duties be those of peace or war, I am confident that in the faithful and devoted performance of them you will safely uphold the honour of the Empire which is now confided to your hands. Be assured that your conduct will be watched with interest and your progress with pride by the Queen-Empress, and that from the shores you are now about to leave you will be accompanied by the good wishes of all India."

THE following appointments in the Indian Contingent for Malta have been notified:—Capt. Neill, of the Central India Horse, and Major Macpherson, of the 3rd Punjab Cavalry, to be Aides-de-Camp to Brigadier-Generals Watson and Macpherson, respectively; Capt. Clementi, to be Deputy Judge-Advocate General; Capt. N. F. F. Parker, to be Deputy Assistant Commissary General; Deputy-Sergeon-General Dr. Beatty, of the Bombay Army, to be Chief Medical Officer; and Capt. J. Becke, of the 21st Bombay Native Infantry, to be Baggage-Master.

FAMINE is again less talked of than the movement of troops in the papers which have just come to hand. The latest accounts from Maisur are, we hear, up to the 20th of April encouraging. "Plentiful rain had fallen, which has been good for the Vysakh rice; and has made welcome additions to the supply of water. The reaping of the rice goes on, and there is no lack of employment, nor any sign of increasing distress." Four of the last weekly reports from the North-West Provinces and Oudh show the following fluctuations in numbers on relief:—Numbers on relief works up to March 29, 32,604; April 5th, 16,464; April 13, 11,927; April 20th, 10,627. The increase during last week in numbers on works was in the districts of Agra, Muttra and Rai Bareilly, the numbers in poor houses being on March 29, 18,148; April 5th, 11,724; April 13, 6,090; April 20th, 5,326.

PROSPECTS in Bellary are represented as very gloomy, and relief camps were to be opened there in four taluks. At Bangalore and Chicacole there had been good rain. But out of India, and in the North of China, the stories of famine are sadder than ever. It is stated that in Lunan-fu a shop had been opened for the sale of human flesh. The horrible traffic did not last; for after two days it was closed by order of the Mandarin, and the proprietor beheaded. And the death-rate in that district was estimated at 70 per cent! If these tales be true, India may be congratulated on a comparatively mild visitation. The Friend of India, quoting from (probably) a local paper, adds to the above particulars the statement that "the Province of Shantung as yet is exempt from the fate of its neighbours, but unless we get rain soon the young wheat will suffer."

WE regret to observe in to-day's paper a notice of the death on the 15th inst. of a well-known and much respected servant of the State, Sir William Grey, K.C.S.I., some time on the Viceroy's Council and Lieut. Governor of Bengal, and afterwards Governor of Jamaica.

SIND has never been considered a profitable investment for Government, as regards mere money return and outlay; but it has certain elements of prosperity which may still need testing and development. We rejoice to see that the annual report on the revenue administration of this Province for 1876-77 exhibits on the whole favourable results; and shows an increase in every branch of the revenue.

LAST Monday's Indian telegram in the Times reproduces an interesting account, published, in a Bombay paper, of a public demonstration made in that city on the occasion of the embarkation of the 9th Bombay Regiment. The men, we are told, "turned out at dawn and paraded in their new uniform, consisting of French-gray pagris, bright scarlet coats, and blue knickerbockers. The regiment numbered fifteen native officers, thirty-one havildars, and 643 rank and file. Bands of music playing attended their march to the place of embarkation, immense crowds also following them and cheering enthusiastically. The greatest demonstration was made at the Apollo Bunder, on their way down which the troops were cheered at every step, the enthusiasm rising at the end to an almost frantic pitch. The crowd cheered the Great Rani and the Prince of Wales. Many shook hands heartily with the English Volunteers. The whole scene is described as an exhibition of the most extraordinary military enthusiasm ever witnessed in Bombay."

THE same telegram states that a large meeting had been held at Poonah to protest against the Vernacular Press Act; and that a Government officer from the educational service had been appointed, under the title of Press Commissioner, to act as the recognised medium between the Government and the Indian Press, both English and vernacular, his chief duty being, it was supposed, to keep the Government informed as to the tone of the vernacular Press. The contradiction by Sir George Campbell of the Viceroy's statement that he had advised action against the vernacular Press had induced the publication of Sir George's official letter, written in 1873, from which the following is an extract:—

The Government cannot allow Bengalee schoolboys to write seditious fustian without running great direct risk, and the further danger of such things spreading. Boys in Calcutta may read and not rebel; but what would the frontier Pathan think if he reads translations of such things and finds them published with impunity? The Lieutenant-Governor requests that this opinion may be submitted to the Governor-General in Council, and that there should be a law to punish summarily and severely, without the celat of a long prosecution, all seditious writers and the publishers of mischievous and seditious libels on the Government, and to stop any newspapers which are vehicles of matter of the same character.

EXPLANATION is afforded by the Egyptian correspondent of the Times, why so many sailing vessels had been taken up as transports by the Government of India. It is owing to the greater convenience presented by these for the accommodation of horses. The whole length of the ship between decks can be fitted with stalls. As for Suez the "deserted," it was expected that the coming expedition would invest it with new life and interest. The old military hospital, built by the English in the time of the Abyssinian war, is being prepared to receive the sick; and 150,000 gallons of water were being got in readiness, with due regard to the religious prejudices of native troops—that is to say, canvas hose was to take the place of leather for the conveyance of the liquid from shore to tank, and tank to ship.

WHILE noticing the migration of the Government officials to Utakamand, the Madras correspondent of the Times bears testimony to the service rendered the State by his Grace the Duke of Buckingham, than whom no man "worked harder and in the face of greater difficulties." We learn that in the midst of the troubles which beset the Presidency during the famine, the Governor was never absent for a day from his post, and throughout the severity of the crisis was an example to every subordinate official, of unflinching honesty of purpose, calm courage, and earnest endeavour to do right.

THERE is an interesting letter in the Pioneer Mail of the 20th April which is from a correspondent in Calcutta. Part of it will be found extracted in our present issue. The writer is of opinion that the late jail insurrection at Rangoon demands the most careful investigation, for "it is not many years since that the surgeon of the jail was shot dead; that a number of prisoners broke loose and spread the utmost terror. Many were killed, and many more were brutally battered by jailors and police. To crown all, six or seven men were tried, convicted, and hanged on the roof of the jail as a warning to the others." He does not consider the present outbreak to have been so disastrous; but that it tells pretty plainly there is something radically wrong in the treatment of Burmese prisoners at Rangoon.

OWING to a remark made by the Attorney-General, when introducing his Bill to the House on Tuesday last, a question has been raised on the authorship of the Indian Penal Code. One writer avails himself of the columns of the Press to affirm "that the Code was draughted by Mr. Macaulay in 1834, was passed by Sir Barnes Peacock in 1860, and has since, on two occasions, received some trifling amendments at the hands of Sir Henry Maine and Sir James Stephen." Another, immediately succeeding, explains the Code to have been "the work of the Indian Law Commission . . . commenced in the time of the late Lord Macaulay, to whom belongs the honour of its authorship as much as to anybody." A third writes that "the Right Hon. Sir John M'Leod, who is now alive, was, as Mr. M'Leod, of the Madras Civil Service, a member of the Indian Law Commission which in 1837 presented the draft of the Indian Penal Code to the Governor-General of India in Council. Those who are aware of Mr. M'Leod's dialectical skill will not be surprised to learn how great a part he bore in its form and composition."

THE following piece of intelligence has been communicated to the Times from Paris under date the 15th May:—

One is sometimes tempted to believe that there is a contagion in evil which spreads with fearful rapidity over the whole world. A short time ago Vera Zasulitch shot General Trepoff, a few days ago Hô lel fired at the Emperor of Germany, and yesterday Okubo, the Second Directing Minister of Japan, was murdered in the streets of the capital by five assassins on his way to a Cabinet Council. Okubo was the promoter and defender of all the reforms which have marked the recent rise of Japan. He was one of the conquerors in the last insurrection, and for these reasons was held in special horror by the defenders of the suppressed abuses. The partisans of feudalism knew that in him they would destroy one of their chief adversaries. By a strange contrast, too, while in Europe it is socialism and anarchy which have promoted to assassination, in Japan it is reaction. Okubo, who came to Europe in 1873, left behind him a character for firmness, frankness, and enlightenment. His loss is a public misfortune for Japan. All the assassins have been arrested.

ACTING appointments are a manifest necessity, and we quite agree with the Friend of India that those who have filled them for a certain period with satisfaction—say a twelvemonth—have, as a rule, made good their claim to be confirmed en permanence should a vacancy ensue. But it will never do to tie the hands of authority too tightly in these matters. There is a discretion which belongs to Viceroys and Governments as well as to kings and emperors; and if that were taken from them, their position and prestige could suffer to the detriment of the public service. If it be wrongly or heedlessly exercised, discussion and disclosure lie within the province of the Press as of other arbiters of official acts; and Englishmen are not backward in asserting their right of criticism where fair occasion offers. We have no notion whatever to whom the following extract points:—

An official acted in one of the highest posts under the Government of India for about four years; but there was no permanent vacancy, and he could not get the place substantively. There was a new régime: another, perhaps a better man, was preferred, the officer in question was ousted, and the permanent post, which presently fell vacant, was given to another. Now this we distinctly say cannot be justified.

But if blame is to be attached anywhere, it must be to the old régime. Why should an incoming authority accept every acting appointment—even if it had extended over four years—as a fit and judicious one, because it may have been agreeable to an outgoing authority? How many Governors or Viceroys would get rid of permanent incumbents of offices if they could conveniently do so, to make room for fitter men, or men whom they conscientiously think fitter. But the rules or the customs of the service forbid them to proceed to such extremities, which are only justifiable for acting appointments. Here is, however, something else said by the Friend which we think irrefutable:—

The thanks of Government ought not to be regarded as an idle formality, but as a distinct recognition of proved, not to say, exceptional ability. If Government regards its thanks in this way, then its thanks should not lightly be given. If Government attaches no importance to its thanks, the tender of them is an insult. But whether tacitly or openly, a man should not be encouraged, simply to be afterwards cast down.

COLONEL MALLESSEON'S first volume of the "History of the Indian Mutiny" has appeared, and we hope to notice it fully in our next week's number. At present we confine our observations to the now much-discussed subject of the Indian Press, touched on in the opening chapter. Sir John Kaye had expressed strong approval of Lord Canning's determination to acknowledge no difference between the English and Native Press of India in the application of a restrictive Act; and had stated his opinion that "to have drawn a distinction in such a case . . . would have been an insult to the loyal native inhabitants who were supporting the Government." Colonel Mallesseon, on the other hand, writes that, after putting certain galling restrictions on the Native Press, "had Lord Canning stopped there, he would have carried with him the voice of the public. The times were critical, the Native Press had encouraged sedition and rebellion, and it was necessary that authority should assert itself." That the latest historian is practically right, some persons may think sufficiently proved, by the recent action of the Indian Government—an action forced upon it by uncontrollable circumstances. For ourselves, experience leads us to the same unpopular conclusion. We have no doubts about the wisdom and policy of drawing a distinction between a handful of loyal, if plain-speaking Europeans, and a disaffected multitude whose "loyal" subjects, among Vernacular Press writers, were, at the time adverted to, but a fraction of the mass.

WE notice in the Times of the 15th inst., and we have transferred to our columns the article referred to, that a Nestorian deacon, Khanan Eshoo Abraham, has been writing an account of the mission which has brought him from Armenia to Stoke Newington. He has, it appears, been deputed by the ancient Episcopal Church of the Nestorians to visit this country in order to elicit the sympathy and aid of the English Churches on behalf of his co-religionists; and he is further desirous of suggesting to British merchants and capitalists the advantages to be derived from the development of commerce in Western Asia. He thinks that steamers might be established on Lake Urumiah, at present only navigated by dangerous and uncomfortable fishing-boats. Beautiful as may be the plain of Urumiah and part of the neighbouring scenery, the city itself has not the reputation for salubrity to make it a desirable residence for foreigners. The stagnant water and the rice-fields are especially unfavourable features in the landscape. It is possible, however, that the introduction of a mercantile community from the West might be productive of hygienic as well as other reform in the ways and customs of the people; but there is much to be said and demonstrated before Englishmen, more especially merchants, will be persuaded to go and settle at Urumiah. When Martin Chuzzlewit asked General Choke if he had been in England, his reply was, "In print I have, sir, not otherwise." Neither print nor persuasion of any kind will, we believe, bring about an emigration to Persian Armenia without some very substantial testimony that the venture is a sound one, and not of the character to develop Mr. Tapley's qualities of self-negation.

LEST the above remarks be misinterpreted, we may remark that from the category of those who need solid guarantees of success in their calling at Urumiah, as elsewhere, we wholly exclude the fearless and single-minded missionaries long resident in Western Persia, whose fellow-labourers are to be found, moreover, at Bitlis, Mardin, Kharput, Sivas and Yuzgat. We speak of hard thinkers, of worldly and practical men whose calculations are in temporal matters, and whose considerations are rather physical than moral, for it seems to us that Khanan Eshoo Abraham appeals to such as these. Before taking leave of the Deacon we should like to ask what he means by the suggestion to appoint "a British Consul at Tabriz, both for the encouragement of English interests and, indirectly, as some protection to the Nestorians and Armenians against Kurdish persecutions"? We have had for many years a Consul-General in the capital of Adarbaijan, and it would be strange if his existence were unknown at Lake Urumiah.

It is gratifying to find that while steamers on new principles have already started, and submarine tunnels are under consideration, for improving communication between England and France, our neighbours at Pondicherry are to be drawn nearer to their English friends in Madras and throughout British India by a connecting link of railway. We hear that the scheme of a light railway to Pondicherry is being pushed on vigorously by the enterprising projectors, and that several European and native merchants of Madras, Chingleput, Cuddalore, and Pondicherry have taken shares in the enterprise. A list is in course of circulation, and it is said that as soon as a sufficient number of shares is taken up measures will be taken to start the undertaking. The cost of construction it is calculated will be about Rs. 20,000 per mile.

A TELEGRAM to the Times, dated the 12th inst., states that "considerable distress is still prevalent in the North-West. The number on the relief works has increased. The accepted estimate of expenditure for the Madras famine from April to September next is fifty lacs."

Odds and Ends.

THE SHAH OF PERSIA reached Tiflis on the 14th May.

THE Ameer of Cabul is seriously ill again.

LIEUTENANT H. F. CADELL, Quartermaster of the 10th Regiment Native Infantry, having volunteered, has been appointed a Wing Officer of the 25th Regiment N.I., under orders for Malta, and left Madras last evening by train for Beypore.

CAPTAIN WILLIAM COOK, M.S.C., Sub-Assistant Commissary-General, Madras, has proceeded to Bombay to do duty as Victualing Officer at that port of embarkation until further orders.

DR. A. L. HACKETT, Medical Officer, 37th Regiment N.I., but at present Acting Assistant Garrison Surgeon, Bangalore, has been posted to the 25th Regiment N.I., at Cannanore, under orders for Malta. Surgeon A. N. Rogers-Harrison will also accompany the regiment to Europe.

SIR DINKER RAO, K.C.S.I., has gone on a pilgrimage to Benares, where he is expected to remain for some time.

SIR JOHN STRACHEY, though still exceedingly weak, is better, and is considered to have turned the corner.

MR. ROGER LETHBRIDGE, C.I.E., has been chosen as Press Commissioner with the Government of India.

MR. HENVEY, the new Resident in Kashmir, after having been received most cordially by the Maharajah, has proceeded to Srinugger via Banihal.

It is said that the Rev. J. R. Baldwin, Chaplain of Darjeeling, goes home in July next.

MR. JUSTICE CUNNINGHAM left Calcutta last evening for Simla to take part in the famine inquiry.

MR. H. W. W. ELLIS, Deputy Shipping Master, Calcutta, is allowed eighteen months' leave to Europe.

We hear that Mr. A. E. Gough, M.A., Officiating Principal, Benares College, will be posted to the Hoogly College.

The Calcutta Bar will entertain Mr. Justice Kemp at a farewell dinner on the 4th proximo.

MR. J. A. ANDERSON, Assistant Commissioner, Gujrat, has proceeded on six months' special leave.

CAPTAIN E. G. HASTINGS, Settlement Officer, Kohat, proceeds on three months' privilege leave after the new assessments have been announced.

We learn that it is likely that the Monitors at Bombay will be armed by two companies of Marine Artillery from England.

A JAPANESE paper says that the Prussian system of drill is to be adopted by the Army Department in Japan instead of the French.

THE Eastern Extension Telegraph Company notify that their Singapore-Batavia cable is now repaired, thus restoring telegraphic communication with Java and Australia.

THE Junma, with mails from India, China, and Japan, arrived at Point de Galle on the 12th May.

At the meeting of the Legislative Council at Singapore on the 16th April, the Hon. Mr. M'Arthur gave notice of two questions, one regarding the erection of a lighthouse at the northern entrance to the Singapore Straits, and the other regarding speculations in land by Government officials.

THE Madras Railway Company have received instructions from Government to reserve all the powder-wagons the Company have in stock, so that they may be placed at the disposal of Government at a moment's notice.

THE hands at the Gun Carriage Manufactory are at work daily from six A.M. to ten P.M.

THE dhooly-bearers from St. Thomas's Mount have been sent on to Bombay to join the Contingent.—Madras Mail, April, 23.

THE appointment of Colonel Colley, C.B., to be the Viceroy's Private Secretary, is notified in the Gazette of India; also the appointment of Colonel the Hon. G. P. H. Villiers, to be Military Secretary. Colonel Colley has just arrived in India from Europe.

WE learn that the shikar party which started some time ago from Dehra for the Nepal Terai have returned with a bag of twelve tigers—and "no end of other shikar."

THE SAHACHAR.—There was a large and enthusiastic meeting of natives in the Town Hall to protest against the Vernacular Press Bill, which does not seem to be at all popular with Bengalees. A contemporary gives the following as the text of a circular which is being sold in the streets of Calcutta at a pice a copy, in memory of the Sahachar, the first victim to the new law:—

Thou diest, Dear Sahachar, Dear Friend, Thou diest. How oft shall I remember thee. Since thy birth, thou wast my company, my delight. Thou was born with a mission, which before thou couldst complete, thou hast ceased to exist. But the glory of glories of thy life is—thou diest in the accomplishment of that mission.

Thou diest. I have one consolation indeed. Thou diest, but in thy death thou achievest a victory more glorious than Cæsar's victories. Thy death has about it a halo splendour. Thou diest a martyr's death.

Thou diest, but thy death, those who knew thee not, might condemn as culpable suicide. Suicide no doubt is culpable. To desert one's post of duty here below appears to be culpable. But in thy case suicide is elevated to the height of a sacrifice.

Thou diest, but in the death thou speakest. Thy dying eloquence will never cease to rouse thy countrymen to a just sense of the divinity that lies dormant in them. Thy last words will ever open their eyes to the greatness of their destiny and the inviolability of their human nature.

Thou diest, but thy death sanctifies an idea. Thou hast pledged thyself to the worship of principles, and in the act of that worship, thou diest. Apostasy I know was opposed to thy nature. No wonder, then, that thou preferest death before dishonour.

Thou diest, but thy death, I fear, the enemies of thy sovereign, for whom thy love and respect amounted to adoration, would make the handle of many unfounded suspicions.

Thou diest, but thy death is a warning to thy brother-writers to enter into a fresh lease of life, if to live they would now at all like.

Thou diest, but the story of thy death men will repeat to teach their children the difference between devoted loyalty and abject submission. Thy death proves the consistency of respect for the King with respect for the Self.

Thou diest, and in thee the country loses a valued friend and a loyal heart; the poor ryot, an honest and bold tongue to his thoughts and feelings; and myself, an active and earnest coadjutor. In thee we lose too a fertile source of amusement, both innocent and instructive. A heavy penalty indeed! But those who pay it do not know still why they pay it. That mystery is yet locked up in the bosom of him who has prepared thy death-warrant. If thou wast accused of disloyalty, that accusation was a calumny belied by facts. Thou wast born loyal, thou didst live loyal, and thou diest loyal.

May thy spirit rest in peace, and from on high direct those who will still live to carry on that mission, which thou has left half done, to a glorious termination. Be thy spirit their guide, their light, their column of fire.

SETTLED order is gradually becoming the rule in the Persian Gulf, and trade, both local and foreign, is speedily growing.

THE amount of cash in the reserve treasury of the Government of India on April 18 was Rs. 1,59,23,097.

THE head-quarters of the Punjab Government will not be moved to Simla till about the middle of May.

No notice has been yet issued of the Annual Relief of Troops.

THE CENSUS IN MADRAS.

A correspondent of the Times gives the following interesting information, in a letter, dated Madras, April 20:—

As the reports regarding high mortality were received with cautious scepticism, both here and at the India Office, it was suggested that a census of selected areas would help in determining the more important facts of the famine as regards loss of life. Accordingly, the Government of India passed orders directing such a census to be held early in January of this year. In Bombay the famine was then over, but in Mysore and Madras it was still very severe. The census was held in Bombay in January, and notwithstanding the strong assertions that the people had been saved from high mortality, the results have not been made known. In Mysore the January census showed that about 25 per cent., or one-fourth, of the population had melted away; but the actual figures in this case have not, it appears, been published. In Madras the Duke of Buckingham decided that it would be useless to hold the census in January, and accordingly the date was postponed to the 14th of March. The principle of action was to take a "talooka," in which there had been an average amount of distress, and to number the houses and people in that area. A "district" contains from eight to twelve "talookas." But, besides this, it was thought advisable to take the population of certain areas in parts of the country where the famine had not been bad, and where the population had suffered only from high prices, and not from absolute dearth of food. To correct any error on account of the wandering and migratory habits of the people, the entire population of the Salem district, an average district of famine distress, was counted.

The census operations were completed on the night of the 14th of March and were of a simple character, but, of course, involved a preliminary numbering of the houses and people, leaving the correction of the house schedules for the night of the 14th of March. The results were sent down to Madras for tabulation, and this work has just been completed by Mr. Kalyana Sondara Chettiar, a gentleman who acquired his experience of census tabulation, in 1871, when the last Madras census was taken. On this occasion every village in a district was separately numbered, and the district tables show the particulars of population for every one of the 55,000 villages of the Presidency. In this way it was easy for the tabulator of the famine census to show the loss or gain of population in each village, and this practice was followed in the tables, which will hereafter take a prominent place in the history of the famine. The main fact brought out by this statistical inquiry is that the death registration, as all along contended by the Sanitary Commissioner, did not represent the real mortality of the famine. According to the estimated population at the end of 1876, the losses in the famine year have been as follows:—Bellary, 21 per cent.; Kurnool, 27 per cent.; Cuddapah, 26 per cent.; Nellore, 21 per cent.; Coimbatore, 17 per cent.; Chingleput, 10 per cent. The Salem district was numbered throughout. Its estimated population in 1876 was 2,129,850. The actual population on the 14th of March, 1878, was 1,559,876—that is, there were 569,956 souls in this one district, or nearly 27 per cent. of the people unaccounted for. And it must be remembered that in this Salem district the famine distress is not yet over, nor will it be for some months; so that the half-a-million and odd out of the two millions of population does not represent the whole of the fearful life-waste of the famine.

But a trial census was also made in some districts in which there had been no actual famine, and the results are of the highest value in corroboration of the figures of the worst famine districts. For instance, in the following districts there was an increase over the estimated population, as follows:—Kistna, 5.1 per cent.; Tanjore, 1.7 per cent.; and in the subjoined districts there was a very slight decrease:—Trichinopoly, 2.9 per cent.; Tinnevely, 1.9 per cent. But in all these four districts the population of 1878 was above that of 1871, though in two of them not quite equal to the "estimated" population. It has been assumed throughout that an Indian population grows normally at the rate of  $1\frac{1}{2}$  per cent. per annum, and this proportion is within the mark in ordinary times; but we have now the most convincing testimony that the death-rate indications throughout the famine were right, and that no Government can in future afford to neglect the warnings afforded by such testimony. The Government of India must already be aware that any famine "policy" which allows one-fourth of the population to die can hardly be put forth as a policy to be followed on future occasions. . . . We have probably lost not less than three millions out of the twenty millions of population severely affected by the famine, and if we add the mortality in Mysore and Bombay, the total losses of the population in South India will not be far short of six millions.

DURING the Viceroy's recent visit to Nahun, the Rajah offered the British Government a site for a military cantonment within his territory. The hill in question is about twelve miles from Dugshaie, with plenty of wood and water, and room enough, it is thought, to quarter a regiment on.

CALCUTTA PUBLIC MEETINGS.

THE organisation of discontent which has been effected by introducing the native of India into the ways and mysteries of public meetings on the European system is not so much to be charged to the Local Governments as it is a necessary consequence of out-of-school education in her Majesty's Indian Empire. But there is a certain section of Englishmen in India, not in the service of the Government, who cannot be so readily acquitted of complicity. They not only bring our friends the Babu, or the Dis, or the Pillay, to the threshold of open discussion, but they invite, allure, or push him in, according to circumstances, till he suddenly becomes fired with the desire of distinction in oratory, and labours to prove a very Cicero to his countrymen. If he has hitherto had no special grievance of his own he must now find one, or share one with a more fortunate companion.

The Muhammadan is not so easily influenced; for he has not the same facilities of showing off on a platform, nor has he that strong but semi-childish ambition of display which possesses the mind of the Hindu. When he does speak, however, it is likely that his words have more real meaning; and with all his insincerity and love of intrigue, he may be trusted, as a rule, to speak more "out of the abundance of his heart" than his fellow-Indians.

We are led to these observations by the report of the public meeting on Indian Expenditure and Taxation, held in Calcutta on the 22nd March last, to which we referred a fortnight ago, and to which we promised to revert. We think it, however, right to avow, that a careful review of the several speeches made on that occasion has given us a higher opinion of the speakers than we should have entertained had that calibre been judged by ordinary precedents.

Raja Digambar Mitra discoursed so well, so moderately, and so much to the point, that we can forgive him the conventional allusion to, and resuscitation of, "John Bull," a person whom he can hardly be supposed to comprehend in his entirety. But his remarks would have lost none of their value had he omitted redundancy and ornament. And why quote Scripture? Does he really compare the imposition of taxes forced upon an unwilling Government by famine or natural progress, to the demand of the "horse-leech," expressed in that grand chapter of Proverbs which speaks of things that are "never satisfied"? Let him think over the context with the humility and loyalty he professes to feel in approaching Parliament, and he will doubtless agree with us in opinion. Maharaja Narendra Krishna wished to reduce the Indian military establishments; to regulate the Home military charges so as to save India her present large share in their disbursement; and to cut down the cost of Cooper's Hill College and the Public Works Department; but beyond expressing his views to that effect he said little more to convince or satisfy his hearers. The Honourable Kristodas Pal is clearly a practised hand at public speaking; but does he know the state of European politics, or what lies behind the clouds in the East well enough to assure the Government they can meet the exigencies of the hour by reducing rather than increasing taxation? He argues shrewdly and wisely; and may be pardoned, nay, sympathised with in his regrets at the passing away of an old régime; though it sounds oddly for one of his name and caste to talk of "John Company of blessed memory." His facts and figures are, moreover, to the point, and he may well carry with him the approval of an English as of a native Indian audience. But, if he be not sarcastic, he is very much mistaken when he calls India "undoubtedly the brightest gem in the diadem of England," because she pays the bill on so many occasions for the Home Treasury. The fourth speaker, Babu Jaikissen Mukerji, repeated generally the arguments of his predecessor, but gave interesting and perhaps valuable testimony of his own to the recruiting resources of his country, when he said "there was not the slightest doubt that Lord Lytton, if he were called upon, would find no difficulty in raising in a few months an additional force of 100,000 men from our Rajput, Pathan, and Pandya population." Babu Surendranath Banerjee made an onslaught on the Public Works Department, which would have done no discredit to an average Parliamentary debater in England. He somewhat recklessly proposed to abolish Cooper's Hill College, and to "introduce a large native element into the administrative work of the Government;" but the following statement, which occurs in the penultimate paragraph of his address, is worthy of consideration:—

They heard in these days a great deal of the dangers of Russian ambition, of the steady advance of Russia into Central Asia, and of the menace which that advance contained as regards the stability of British rule in the East. He would beg of the rulers of India to enlist on their behalf the gratitude of his countrymen by acts of financial reform and political justice, and if the storm-wave of Russian invasion should burst on these shores, then he would take the liberty of assuring them that that storm-wave would be rolled back across the Hindu Kush, and the Empire of Britain once more restored in India, resting this time not merely on 60,000 bayonets, but on the willing allegiance, the steadfast loyalty, and the fervent devotion of 250 millions of human beings.

Unfortunately for the argument, the class represented by the speaker is not one sufficiently large to be considered the "people of India."

We had proposed to analyse the petition, the adoption and despatch of which were moved by Kumar Kanticharan Singh; but to do so would cause us greatly to exceed our ordinary limits. We shall, therefore, simply state an opinion that it is a representation which merits attention and reply; but at the same time it is one to admit the raison d'être of which, would be to constitute the petitioners better administrators than the Government officials placed over them by the Crown. It is couched in respectful terms as a whole, and makes fewer slips of language and propriety than many documents of the kind at home. But with all its humility and professions of loyalty there is an uncomfortable tone pervading the paper, which gives to it the character of criticism rather than of appeal, and of dictation rather than of petition. It is supported by a memorandum of the Committee of the British Indian Association, signed by its Secretary, Mr. Kristodas Pal, of whom we have already spoken.

We have noticed elsewhere the circumstance that a large meeting had been held at Puna to protest against the Vernacular Press Act. And if the appointment of the Press Commissioner be what we believe it to be, nothing to our mind could well be more judicious. Much will of course de pend on the choice of an incumbent, who should be firm and conciliating both, in addition to his more literary attainments ; but this personal fitness is so essentially part of the scheme that it could not well have been overlooked.

TELEGRAPHS.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

"During the past year the line of telegraph connecting Mooltan with Dera Ghazi Khan was abandoned, owing to the frequent failure of the Chenab and Indus cables, telegraphic communication between the Derajat and stations in the Punjab being made via Haiderabad (Sind), Disa and Agra ; but to secure direct communication, a line is under construction connecting Bannu and Kohat. A portion of the Derajat line which was subject to inundation was dismantled and reconstructed at a safer distance from the river." Para. 218 of "Punjab Administration Report for 1874-75."

SIR,—I quote the above as proof of want of strength in the Indian Government. Is it possible that the skill, the science, and the wealth of England are unable to keep in working order a telegraphic cable across two rivers?—a telegraphic cable, upon which the existence of the Indian Empire may depend? The whole extent of the line is only forty-two miles ; but Government, despairing of maintaining this short line sends its political and military messages over a line 1,800 miles in length! I beg your readers to trace the roundabout way from Mooltan, the key of India, to its outpost, Dera Ghazi Khan, via Lahor, Loodiana, Umballa, Agra, Ajmere, Deesa and Hydrabad in Sindh, partly through deserts, where one rebel horseman can destroy communication in a single night.

It is true that ere now Government has probably secured what it is pleased to call direct communication, i.e., a wire nearly six hundred miles in length via Kohat and Bunnoo ; but as part of it runs through country inhabited by Affghans, whom we or our authorities have continued to exasperate, this wire is not likely to exist whole for more than one week after war has broken out. Here we perceive the result of a too exclusively Civil Government for twenty years, which has made no sufficient preparation for war. Everything in India, at present, points to the necessity of creating a military dictatorship.

If Government be unable to maintain a telegraphic cable across two rivers, I would suggest that it should have recourse to one of the old semaphores. They might be adapted to give signals even at night by a system of revolving lights ; letters being separately shown by the varying intervals of light.

Mooltan, as I have urged in former letters, is the key of India. No enemy can invade India with any prospect of success, so long as we hold Mooltan in force. If the hordes of cavalry of Central Asia, instigated by Russia, were to try the old cavalry route by Peshawur, Attok, and Jhelum, the Mooltan force, assisted by the railway to Lahor, would crush their right wing long before they could cross the Sutlej. If an invading army furnished with pontoons (after massacring our garrisons at Quettah and Mittree), were to try to cross the Indus at Roree-Bukhur or Mithunkote, it would find a desert before it and have a desert behind it ; its left wing would be crushed by the force from Mooltan, and its right by the Bombay army moving from Kuraehi.

Dera Ghazi Khan, forty-two miles west of Mooltan, is the outpost of the latter. If we lose Dera Ghazi Khan we shall find great difficulty in ascertaining the movements of an invading army, and of attacking it when good opportunities for doing so present themselves.

Wherefore do we send native cavalry from India to the small stony island of Malta? How can they act as the eyes of our army? They are ignorant of the languages of Asia Minor and Syria and Thrace, unable, therefore, to glean information from the peasantry. They will find an encounter with Russian riflemen a very different business from charging badly-officered Chinese. If Lord Beaconsfield seriously anticipates war he would find a few hundred British officers selected for their tact and good character invaluable in organising and leading into action Arab, Kurdish and Turkish horsemen.

A strong military government in India would not only maintain efficient telegraphic communication between Mooltan and Dera Ghazi Khan, but would construct a first-rate Roman road between the two places, and would protect strongly a pontoon bridge at Dera Ghazi Khan.—Your obedient servant,

May 7. T.

Notices of Books.

[As the Editor is not responsible for the opinions of Reviewers, all contributed articles will bear a nom de plume, or initials.]

Prince Bismarck, Friend or Foe? By the Author of "German Home Life." London: William Ridgway. 1878.

This pamphlet is pitched in a somewhat high key, and the portrait of its leading character partakes rather of rhapsody than sober description ; in fact, the quotation from Scripture at page 9 is beyond all rhapsody. Yet the talented author of "German Home Life" is lucid in style, and knows how to dispose of periods well enough to ensure a certain readable terseness. But although the reader may well read on to the end, we do not think that, if he reflect while he reads, he will always assent to the propositions put before him. And if he did assent, the assent of one or many readers would hardly affect or enhance the wisdom of the argument. Because Germany is shown, on the negative testimony of displeasure at our indifference to her achievements in the Franco-Prussian war, to value the goodwill of England, is that any reason why her Emperor should risk giving offence to all Europe besides, by entering into a Treaty offensive and defensive with us? We doubt it ; but at the same time, neither is there any reason why we should not be warm friends, and even active allies, it may be, in future contingencies.

We are unable to subscribe generally to the sentiments expressed in the following passages, referring to the outbreak of the German war with France :—

Englishmen, with that loyalty which is perhaps the most distinguishing trait of the national character, clung at first to their old allies. They remembered the hardships shared together on foreign soil, the fellowship that grows out of brotherhood in arms. La Grande Nation, they thought, could not fail. Gallic gallantry and daring were well known to them, the dash and fire, the military vanity born of Napoleonic tradition, and the personal courage of the French nation had been recognised by the world. Of Germany and the Germans the mass of English people knew nothing, and for them cared perhaps even less. The subject seemed too scattered, the elements too miscellaneous, the conditions too variegated, to inspire much sympathy. France and the French they knew, but who could say what Germany was, or who the Germans were? One man would tell you Germany was Austria, another Prussia ; . . . but as events progressed, it was seen with dismay in England that the French had not the virtues with which they had been credited. Very slowly, by degrees, hesitatingly—perhaps, not over-willingly—England was forced at last to recognise the grand qualities of the nation, which she had in her ignorance under estimated.

English people as a rule have mixed more with Frenchmen than with Germans, but they have never, we conceive, understood them better. And as to the question of the Franco-German war, there was great divergence of opinion. Sympathy may have been more general with France after her reverses, but it was divided at the beginning of the contest. One of the best of Tenniel's cartoons in Punch uttered a warning to the French nation which might have been in kindness, but was not in sympathy with her cause. And this drawing was significant of at least one shade of popular opinion. We neither remember the "dismay," nor do we know the precise "virtues" of which our neighbours across the Channel have been deprived in our eyes by the results of the war. They suffered sorely, and they have become perhaps a greater people than before, after passing through the ordeal of suffering. Otherwise, we cannot affirm that the genius or character of the nation has become changed, or that French valour and French honour are other than they were in olden days.

In the retrospect of the deadly struggle between the two nations the author's words go seemingly beyond the meaning. We are told that "None stepped down into the arena. No voice was raised across the blood and dust of the death struggle. Nothing disturbed the simplicity of action ; nothing weakened the magnificent isolation of the belligerents ; nothing complicated or diverted the absorbing interest of the two central figures locked in a death-embrace."

If it be not so easy for plain matter-of-fact people to apprehend the "simplicity of action" here expressed, there will be more difficulty still in explaining the "magnificence of isolation." But, as we have said before, the pamphlet is quite readable, and for many persons it may well have greater attraction.

EAST INDIANS AS SOLDIERS.

It is stated, we see, that there is some idea of raising one or more East Indian Regiments; and Sir Neville Chamberlain is credited by the Madras papers with a minute on the subject, though whether for or against the proposition we cannot say. This is an old story. For many years past, this idea, which appears never to arrive at fruition, has been constantly cropping up, and the reason of the blight we presume to be the disinclination of most military men to command half-castes. Not because these people are without courage, or a good appearance when in uniform, but rather for the reason that they are excessively troublesome, the restraint of military discipline being very irksome to them. The experience of any commanding officer who has to deal with East Indian drummers and bandsmen will, we are sure, clinch this assertion. In native corps commandants are often heard to say that their drummers and bandsmen are more trouble to them than all the rest of their men put together, and it is easy to suppose that such must be the case, since it is only the lowest and poorest classes of Eurasians who ever enter the army. The dross of that community take to military service in their despair, and these are, generally speaking, people who have all the vices of sire and dam; but it is a question whether a better class of East Indian would not make a better soldier; or, in short, whether he would not be worth enlisting in a regiment entirely composed of his kind. It is certain that the native army has no attractions for this better-class man. His position in a sepoy regiment is hateful to himself and to others. No wonder, if he is drunken, insubordinate, dirty, and in bad odour with his European officers, for he has little self-respect, and the natives about him have no respect for him whatever. To make the Eurasian of any account as a soldier, he should be enrolled in a regiment composed solely of East Indians, and under this condition it is likely enough that his regiment would be worth the public money expended upon it. We know that during the mutiny East Indians often performed yeomen's service, and their loyalty is almost always to be depended upon; still, it is as unfair to take the Volunteer East Indies corps as typical of East Indian Regiments as it is to accept the drummers and bandsmen of native corps as their prototype. The first are probably much superior to what Eurasian regulars would be, and the second much worse, because the Volunteers have East Indian gentlemen in their ranks, and the latter only the very scum of the community. However, the opponents and the friends of this talked-of scheme appear to have only these two very different types of Eurasian military men in view when they discuss the question; and, this being so, one cannot be much surprised if there is a great deal of dissension on the subject. East Indians, like men of any other race, or mixed race, have their characteristics; and it is only when dwelling on these that we can attempt anything like a speculation on the value or otherwise of Eurasian corps, probably costing the State, each one, quite Rs. 15,000 a month; or, say, £15,000 a year. Among their failings is an overweening vanity, which, however, would not much interfere with their uses as soldiers, an excessive self-confidence not always well-grounded, which is worse, and a disinclination to endure hardships inseparable from a military career, which is worst of all. East Indians, so far as we know them as soldiers, and we have had some experience of their qualities, are very ready to play at soldiers, and we dare say to fight as soldiers also, on their own ground, but they don't take to strict discipline kindly, and are very prone to kick against it where it is rigidly enforced. In some respects, we should consider them as far superior to natives as soldiers, and in others as worse; but this is a question of discipline rather than of fighting. If it is possible—and a really smart commanding officer ought to be able to do it—to get an East Indian regiment into a high state of discipline, we do not see why an East Indian corps should not be well worth its salt, or why, with a few of them we should not make valuable additions to our military strength in India. It is practicable to enlist a few thousands of Eurasians, we should say, in view of their clamour for military service; but this could only be properly done by raising East Indian regiments. We do not believe that they could ever be advantageously enlisted in either British or native regiments. In either they would have to endure indignities which would ruin their esprit de corps, and it would be a very unwise proceeding to alter the rule which refuses to enlist in the British army men of colour, or Indo-Britons, as they are sometimes called. It would be equally wrong to mix them up in the ranks with sepoys. In either case, they would be driven to associate together, and to form a clique in the regiment, which could not possibly tend to its discipline, or efficiency in quarters, or the field. The most feasible way of working this scheme, if it is ever to be worked, would be to raise an East Indian regiment in each Presidency as an experiment, and to make its organisation that of a British regiment of the line. With the exception of the commanding officer and adjutant, who should be carefully selected officers from the British or native armies, we should be disposed to have all the officers and all the men East Indians. In this way the regiment would have an opportunity of acquiring esprit de corps, and the men would be saved the mortification of being looked down upon by European comrades, or degraded, in their own ideas, by association with natives. They have of course their prejudices and pride, and both must be respected, if it is desired to utilise them as soldiers. Otherwise, the State would have only half-hearted men in its service, worse, in a military sense, than no men at all. We should be glad, for our own part, to see the experiment fairly tried; for one reason, because it might really prove profitable; and for another, because the wretched condition of the Eurasian lower classes is a shame and reproach to the white rulers of this Empire, whose blood they share. There is no more pitiable spectacle in India than the Eurasian we so often see begging his bread from door to door. It is not at all unlikely that he may be, if his history was known, the son of some English gentleman; he has certainly European blood in his veins. But what a miserable object he is; half-starved, totally uneducated, demoralised, and the scorn of Europeans and natives alike. It would be both politic and humane of the Government to open a door of employment for these people, if it is possible to do so, and such a door, we think, we can see in the army under the conditions we have glanced at. With good regimental schools, strict discipline, and the self-respect begotten of honest and honourable service, there is good reason to hope that the soldiers of an East Indian regiment would do well; but, as before remarked, nothing positive can be known in the matter until Government puts the question to the test of experiment.—Indian Daily News.

STATION TALK.

CALCUTTA, April 14.—In a bygone age, before reporters and telegrams brought the daily news of the world to our separate homes, most people were content to discourse on the affairs of their own village, street, or township. The four great quarters of the world were resolved into the single conception of foreign parts. In Calcutta the city was the world; and a hundred years ago its domestic concerns were of greater interest to its inhabitants than they are in the present day. Every ship that arrived in Calcutta, every new face that appeared on the Strand, was a subject for inquiry and conjecture. The newspapers, such as they were, devoted themselves to the doings of different members of society, under the provoking reticence of initial letters; but they were read, talked about, and fought about, far more than the large events which at this present epoch appears likely to change the history of the world. Calcutta must always have been dull in the hot weather, but never so dull as under existing institutions and usages. The affairs of daily life have been shaped and forced to suit daily business, and pleasure is sacrificed or forgotten. In the days of Warren Hastings work of all kinds commenced at seven or eight in the morning, and was finished at noon. Then followed the great meal of the day, the dinner of the ancient world; and the people of Calcutta smoked and slept like lotus-eaters throughout the hot afternoons. Instead of returning from office weary and exhausted, they woke up to fresh life and spirits, ready for any gaiety that was going on—riding, driving, walking, or paddling about in budge-rows angling for mango-fish. At eight o'clock evening began, not as with us with a big dinner, a cheroot, or at best a game of whist, but a round of visits to certain houses, which were always open on particular evenings. Colonel Sleeman, who landed at Calcutta in 1812, has given us a suggestive description of these social gatherings; he was just in time to see the last of these entertainments. There was an old lady, aged ninety or thereabouts, who remembered the days of the Nawabs and the Mahrattas, Clive and the Black Hole. One evening in the week she opened her house to society at large; and the male visitors were not men who had risen at six o'clock in the morning, and were worn out with business or office work, but lively gallants, fresh from the afternoon siesta, and ready for a little supper, as people would be who had dined at one or two; and, of course, they talked, laughed, flirted, sang, danced and played at cards till midnight, as people can do who have slept away the afternoon. All this awakens up pleasant ideas to a generation that dines at eight o'clock in the evening, and often falls asleep directly afterwards; but it had its disadvantages in the shape of liver, yellow complexion, disease, and death. Life was merry but short; whereas if life at present is somewhat dull, the doctors assure us that it is longer. Indeed, if we are to believe the doctors, people in former days were old at forty, and died before they were fifty. Yet somehow there were some who could stand all sorts of dissipation till they were fifty or thereabouts, and then go to England, and live for twenty or thirty years longer. Warren Hastings was a man of this stamp. He landed at Calcutta in 1750, aged eighteen; he left India in 1785, aged fifty-three; he died in 1818, aged eighty-six. —One public man within the last few weeks has made a mistake, which seems likely to be fatal to his career. Keshub Chunder Sen has been the victim of the avenging Nemesis. He has just reached that stage in a prophetic career which is fatal to the modern prophet. He has appealed to the supernatural as an excuse for breaking a sound moral rule which he had himself laid down. In Keshub Chunder Sen's case the motive force was not love, but ambition. It is all the more to be lamented, because the matter is of grave importance. The question of early marriages lies at the very root of the political regeneration of the people of India. The off-spring of boy-fathers and girl-mothers can scarcely be fitted to exercise political rights. In America we see a population, darker and ruder than any people in India, voting for members of Congress and exercising all the rights of citizens. We hear no such complaints as those which are made against the Calcutta Municipality. One main cause for this superiority is their downright manliness. They do not marry while they are young; they learn to get their living first; and this is the true basis of marriage. Of course some men are born to fortunes; but the true rule for marriage is, that a man ought not to marry until he can keep a wife. In the particular case of Keshub Chunder Sen, this rule does not apply. The Rajah of Cooch Behar can keep as many wives as he pleases. But is it healthy for a girl of thirteen or fourteen to be betrothed? Is it not premature for a girl of that age to spend three years of her life in thinking of a husband who is away. Of course the Brahmo Somaj cannot accept the lame excuse that their apostle thought he was right, whilst they know and feel that he was wrong.—Friday, the 12th inst., was the festival of the Churuk Pooja, the last day of the Bengalee year. In former times it used to be celebrated with swinging on iron hooks, and other public forms of self-torture. Indeed, it is not many years back when processions might have been seen in Chowringhee, of natives with lances thrust through their tongues, with other horrible spectacles too unpleasant to be thought about. Pictures of those brutalities used to appear in missionary magazines as amongst the worst evils of idolatry. They have long since degenerated into feasting and tamasha, and the public self-torture has been put down by the British Government. Strangely enough, beneath all this outward show of superstitious barbarity, there was a religious idea which will recommend itself to the general sentiment. The last day of the year was the day of atonement for the sins of the year. The people of India are supposed to atone for their sins throughout the year by committing acts of self-torture, or by paying others to perform such self-torture on their behalf. How the original religious idea degenerated into such gross superstition belong to the history of human error.—The news of the week is not much. On April 12 there was a heavy storm at Calcutta, which furnished an agreeable interval of repose.—Pioneer Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

SIGNALLING AND TELEGRAPHY.—The Government of India having ordered the discontinuance of the supply of army signalling apparatus to batteries of Royal Artillery in India, any at present in use with batteries is to be returned into store.

CALCUTTA HIGH COURT.—It is said that Mr. Broughton, Administrator-General, Calcutta, has been nominated to the temporary vacancy at the High Court of Calcutta, caused by Mr. Justice Cunningham's absence on the Famine Commission.

BIKANIR AGENCY.—The Secretary of State has, it appears, sanctioned the proposal of the Government of India that Capt. E. W. Burton should be graded as an additional Political Agent of the third class, and be granted a consolidated salary of Rs. 1,000 monthly, so long only as he remains at Bikanir.

PRESS COMMISSIONER.—A notification in the Gazette of India of April 22 says:—Subject to the sanction of the Secretary of State, his Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General in Council is pleased to appoint Mr. Roper Lethbridge, C.I.E., to be Press Commissioner with the Government of India. Mr. Lethbridge is attached to the Foreign Department, and will rank with Political Agents of the first class.

RAILWAYS.—It is stated that whilst the traffic on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway has suddenly collapsed, that on the East Indian Railway has lately largely increased, and the Englishman hears that, owing to all the goods-waggons borrowed from the Jabalpur line having been returned, large quantities of goods are delayed at many of the stations between Dinapur and Howrah for want of carriage. Some of the new waggons ordered from England were almost daily expected.

SALT.—In connection with the question of the admission of Ganjam salt into Orissa, we understand that the Secretary of State concurs with the Viceroy in considering that if Pooree salt, taxed at Rs. 2-8 per maund, cannot compete with Ganjam salt at a selling price of Rs. 2-11, especially as the Pooree manufactures have been relieved of the cost of the preventive establishments at the works and at warehouses, it will not be proper to grant any further measure of relief to enable it to do so.

MARINE DEPARTMENT.—Some time ago the Government of India in the Marine Department communicated with the Home Government on the subject of the services rendered to the crew of the Glenrich by the Cheviot and British Sceptre, with the object of obtaining some recognition of them. The matter was referred to the Board of Trade, who replied that "it is not their practice to reward services rendered by British vessels to British vessels in distress unless they are rendered under exceptional circumstances, and that this does not appear to have been the case in the present instance."

DISTRICT SETTLEMENT.—According to the report on the settlement of the Sultaupur District in Oudh (which has been confirmed for a period of twenty years), the result has been to raise the demand from Rs. 8,20,598 to Rs. 10,99,111 (excluding cesses), an increase of 38 per cent., the incidence being about Rs. 2-2-9 per acre of cultivation. The demand has been promptly introduced and collected without difficulty. The cost of the settlement was Rs. 4,54,756, which, with one exception (Unao), is less than in any other district of Southern Oudh. The district which is in a prosperous condition is very thickly populated, and no less than 78 per cent. of it is under irrigation, a larger proportion than in any other district in this province.

STATION TALK.

UTAKAMAND, April 15.—After alternating for some time between hopes and fears, which were exalted or depressed according to the nature of current reports, the serenity of public feeling has been restored by the actual arrival of his Grace the Governor and family in Utakamand. This happy termination of our doubts came to pass on Friday last, when the Ducal party arrived safely at their destination. I have not heard that any contretemps happened en route, so we will conclude that nothing more than the usual inconveniences attendant on a journey up the Ghaut were met with by our august visitors. The Ladies Grenville came in during the day, the Governor not until evening, having made a detour to Palghaut. His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief has, too, arrived, and his coming will tranquillise the minds of those who were timorous about a postponement.—The Rajah of Mysore has arrived at his country residence, Fern-hill, and will probably remain longer than he did last year, a visit of six weeks having been all the leave of absence allowed to his Highness from his famine-stricken territory, Mysore.—Easter being so late this year, festivities have not yet begun in Ooty; I hear that on Easter Monday a Grenville fancy dress ball will be held at Walthamstow, the residence of Colonel Clemenston, Joint Magistrate of Utakamand. This will be the beginning of gaieties. I presume the Annual Club Ball will not be far behind; whether it is to be one of fancy costumes, or whether the ladies and gentlemen will appear in the dress of the period, which, however, admits of free scope for the display of the most fanciful fancies, is, I believe, not yet decided.—The weather here of late has been most enjoyable to the residents who have gone through the winter of frost and cold winds. The climate has been oppressive for the last few days, clouds have come up from the horizon each day, but dispersed without raining upon the thirsty land, until yesterday, Sunday, when a most grateful and beneficial shower fell. The wish is that there may be more to follow.—An execution is not a happy occurrence to take place in any locality. Our little station was the scene of one on Saturday last. The man named Sella, of the Kotagerry Massacre notoriety, paid for his indulgence in crime with his life. Caste zeal seems to have been the motive power that led to such murderous results, and the poor wretch, at the last, met his death, feeling, in all probability, that he was a hero, as he gave no evidence of fear or contrition.—Again has the question arisen of the annexation of the whole of Wynaad to the Neilgherry district; probably this season will see the matter settled one way or the other. Coorg may be thrown in, too.—An excitement is going on now about the proposed railway up the Ghaut, and a petition to Government has been numerously signed that the Righi principle may be adopted. Fears are entertained that if his Grace carries the day in having the line according to his engineering lights, the thing may be a costly failure. The matter is a serious one, and should be freely discussed in all its bearings, before any action is taken; a wrong beginning would annihilate the project, perhaps, for ever.—Mr. Ouchterlony's hounds meet to-morrow for the first week of the season, at the residence of the Commander-in-Chief; the former occasion was merely a preliminary run; the Club is the place of rendezvous. For the next week sport should be good, as jackals abound, and in many localities make night hideous with their not melodious bark; yesterday's rain will have moistened the ground a little, and taken the slipperiness off the grass; but it has done more than this; the fall was heavy enough to test the state of the roofs of our houses; alas! how few of them bore it favourably. Spring clearings and spring repairs have been going on, as is the annual custom, but the very first heavy rain only shows how fallacious were all hopes of a watertight roof.—Madras Times Correspondent.

Miscellaneous.

HORSES FOR THE REMOUNT DEPOT.—A large number of horses lately imported from Melbourne, by Mr. J. Lalor, in the ship Erynome, have been purchased by Government for the Remount Depot at Oosoor.

THE JUNCTION CANAL.—The Junction Canal, which was lately inaugurated by his Grace the Duke of Buckingham, is now open for public traffic. The Junction Canal as a relief work cost the Government about seven lakhs of rupees.

THE S. S. "TENASSERIM."—The s.s. Tenasserim, after her voyage out to Rangoon with the 33rd Regiment M.N.I., has been ordered to proceed to Bombay, for the purpose of being refitted for transport service in case of emergency.

COLLISION IN THE ROADS.—On the afternoon of Thursday last, while the barque Nevada was shifting her berth in the Roads, she went foul of the barque T. D. Marshall, and carried off the jibboom of the latter.

EMIGRANTS TO PORT NATAL.—Mr. G. H. Ross, Agent for Emigration to Port Natal, has engaged the ship Dunphail Castle to convey a batch of 400 emigrants to Port Natal. The emigrants will leave Madras about the 28th inst.

ACCIDENTAL DEATH BY DROWNING.—The Coroner held an inquest on Saturday morning on the body of a woman named Ramanaye, who was drowned in a tank at Washermanpettah. The evidence showed that the woman went into the tank to bathe, and, accidentally getting beyond her depth, was drowned. The jury returned a verdict accordingly.

THE REV. LUKE RIVINGTON.—This well-known preacher has arrived at Madras by the s.s. Africa, and preached at St. Matthias's Church, Vepery, both morning and evening, on Sunday, to crowded congregations. He is to preach in the same church every day, morning and evening, during this week, except on Good-Friday evening, when, it is understood, he will preach in St. George's Cathedral.

DATURA.—Cases of datura poisoning are somewhat common in Bangalore, and we are told that there is an organised gang of vagabonds in the cantonment and pettah. The other day a few men were arrested while in the act of administering the poison. If the police put on extra spurt we doubt not they will bring the organised gang to justice, and have them sent out of the country for the country's good.—Madras Athenaeum.

WYNAAD.—The last weather reports from Wynaad are favourable. Vythery, Cooloor, and Calputty have had thunder storms, and a good fall of rain, varying from 55 cents upwards. Terrioot, Mooperand, Cherambady and the South-East generally are still pining hopelessly (as it seems) for the much-needed rain. Velleramulla, the district hitherto always considered the one most generally favoured by the clerk of the weather, has had a few drops, insufficient for measurement.

MADRAS CARRIAGE FACTORY.—Orders have been received at the Madras Carriage Factory for the immediate making up of siege and mining implements, and the men have been all told off that they should begin work at five every morning instead of eight till further orders, and will strike work at eight instead of at five P.M. The steam-whistle may now be heard at four every morning calling the men to work. It is expected that the men will get extra pay for the extra hours they work.

PREPARATIONS.—The two companies of Sappers and Miners, who are proceeding from Bangalore to Malta, under the command of Col. H. N. D. Prendergast, v.c., R.E., being under strength, volunteers were called for from the other companies in Bangalore, and a most gratifying response was at once made, for four times the required number stepped forward, and almost all the recent recruits begged to be allowed to go.

SEVERE STORM.—A tremendous storm of wind, hail, and rain, accompanied by thunder and lightning, swept over Bangalore on the afternoon of Wednesday last. Hailstones fell in proportion, some of them large enough to break a thin pane of glass. The thermometer fell from about 90 deg. to 70 deg. A perfect deluge of rain fell, and the roads, that were before ankle deep with dust, are now ankle deep with mud. Bangalore is saved from all gloomy apprehensions of drought for this year at least.

A SAVAGE BUFFALO.—A native woman going along the new Washermanpotta-road has been attacked by a buffalo. The animal seems to have taken fright and become furious at the red cloth she wore. Fortunately for the woman, in her flight, she stumbled over a heap of stones deposited alongside the road, which threw her on her face. The animal, finding it could not use its horns, began pawing the ground with its forelegs. Meanwhile assistance was rendered by some passers-by, who drove off the buffalo, and the woman got off with a considerable shaking and a few bruises about her face and body.

FROM A SHAM TO A REAL FIGHT.—A Cochin correspondent sends the following to the local paper:—"A well-to-do Nair got up a dramatic performance here for the entertainment of his friends. The piece chosen was a representation of a battle between the French and the Turks, in which the latter were defeated. While the piece was being performed some twenty-five Moplas rushed into the house, and the leader, who was armed with a knife, went up to the host and threatened to kill him if he did not at once close the play. Soon afterwards the intruders made a general rush on the stage, and speedily put to flight the combined French and Turkish forces. The culprits were put up before the Joint Magistrate of Cochin, who convicted seven, and sentenced them as follows:—The first to one year's rigorous imprisonment, the second to six months' rigorous imprisonment, and the seventh prisoner, a minor, to receive twenty-five stripes with a rattan."

Bombay.

COLONEL COLLEY, C.B., Private Secretary to the Viceroy, was among the passengers who arrived in Bombay by the last mail steamer. The appointment of Colonel Colley, C.B., to be the Viceroy's Private Secretary, is notified in the Gazette of India; also the appointment of the Hon. G. P. H. Villiers to be Military Secretary.

KURRACHEE STEAMER.—There is good reason to believe that the B.I.S.N. Company is likely to be subsidised to run a weekly mail steamer between Kurrachee and Aden. This will be a good arrangement, and render us independent of Bombay, as well as give us our letters some days earlier than now.—Beacon.

MARINE DEPARTMENT.—Captain Searle, Superintendent of Marine at Bombay, has been ordered to remain here instead of going to Calcutta to act for Captain Robinson. This change of arrangements is no doubt due to the fact that Captain Robinson cannot now go on leave, owing to the new regulation as to the stoppage of furlough.

SURAT RIOTS.—Mr. Lely, First Class Assistant Collector and Magistrate, Ahmedabad, who has been selected to try the cases against the rest of the Surat rioters, has arrived in that city. Thirty more prisoners await their trial, eleven of whom will be arraigned in one case and nineteen in another.

BOMBAY MUNICIPALITY.—A good deal of correspondence is said to have lately passed between the Governments of Bombay and of India regarding a proposal submitted by the former to make available, for the purposes of the Municipality of Bombay, a large amount of Imperial revenue in the form of proceeds of an enhanced tax on the manufacture and sale of spirits, and also respecting the transfer of tobacco duty to the Municipality.

DUTCH VESSEL.—The Dutch double turret-ship Koning der Nederlanden arrived in Bombay harbour on Saturday week from Nieuwe Diep via the Suez Canal. She is a large schooner, and has twin screws and, what is seldom seen, three funnels. The Koning der Nederlanden called on her way out at Gibraltar, Malta, Port Said, and Aden.

SIR RICHARD TEMPLE, accompanied by Captain Searle, visited the steam-ships Madura and Madda, which are been prepared for infantry. He also inspected for the second time the sailing ship Maraval, on board of which some of the guns of the Artillery are being placed. He expressed himself satisfied with the forward state of the preparations in all three vessels.

MR. KIRKHAM.—The appointment of Mr. T. B. Kirkham, Professor, Elphinstone College, to act as Educational Inspector of the Central Division, will be welcomed as a fit recognition of the long and able service he has rendered in the several appointments through which he has graded, and the earnestness and interest which he has unremittingly thrown into the performance of his duties.

STATEMENT OF SILVER BALANCE IN THE MINT.—The value of silver in the Mint on the morning of the 8th April, 1878, was Rs. 1,93,57,010, and silver received during the week Rs. 18,38,855. The sum of Rs. 17,00,000 in new coin was paid during the week; the balance left was Rs. 1,94,95,865. There is in addition bullion valued at Rs. 42,20,903 belonging to private individuals deposited in the Mint vaults and awaiting assay.

SURAT RIOT.—One lesson to be derived from the Surat riot is, we think, that it is highly necessary for the local Governments to keep a tight rein over the fiscal proceedings of the Municipalities. Unless this is done, the large powers of taxation that are being given all over the country to bodies of the most miscellaneous composition, ungifted with even a moderate amount of political knowledge, inspired by no adequate sense of responsibility, and puffed up out of all sympathy with their fellow citizens by the little brief authority vested in them, threaten to prove a source of danger of Imperial dimensions, and of unknown issues.

MORTUARY RETURNS.—The total number of deaths registered during the week ending Tuesday, April 16, was 518, being 23 less than in the preceding week, 389 less than the total of the week ending April 17, 1877, and 18 more than the mean of the corresponding period in the preceding five years. During the week 245 births were reported in the different districts of the city. The rate of mortality per 1,000 of the population was 40.67. There were 176 deaths from remittent fever, which are 53 less than the previous week and 176 less than the same period last year. There were 26 deaths from cholera last week as compared with 37 deaths during the previous week. The deaths from diseases of the respiratory system, diarrhoea, and dysentery were last week 48, 19 and 18, respectively, as compared with 38, 11, and 20 last year.

BOMBAY GIRLS' SCHOOL.—The interesting ceremony of delivering the prizes to the successful pupils of the three schools working in Bombay under the auspices of the Parsee Girls' Schools Association took place on Friday evening, in the fine bungalow of Mr. Dinshaw Maneckjee Petit, Nepean Sea Road. Sir Richard Temple presided, and the prizes were presented by Miss Temple. An interesting report was read by Mr. Nowrojee Furdoonjee, giving an account of the formation and progress of the Association and its schools. The young lady whose name stands at the head of the prize list is Miss Jayeejee Darashah Reporter, who carried off the highest prize—namely, a scholarship of ten rupees per month; but as she gained the same prize during the last two years, she was awarded a gold neck chain of the value of Rs. 100, the scholarship being allowed to pass to the girl next in order of merit.

ADEN.—The Aden news report for the week ending Wednesday, April 10, has the following:—"Owing to the Bourbaine, a sub-tribe of the Subahis, having for some time past interfered with, and almost entirely interrupted, the land communication with Perim, and having on the night of the 27th ultimo murdered two Arabs and severely wounded one Somali at the Hiswah, not far from the cavalry lines at Khormukson (under British protection), a small force, as below, under the command of Major Stevens, Commandant, Aden troops, was despatched on the 6th and 7th instant to punish them, twenty rank and file Royal Artillery under a European officer, with two camel mountain train guns, twenty rank and file Sappers and Miners under Lieut. Clarke, Assistant Executive Engineer, Aden, seventy rank and file 25th Regiment, N.L.L., under Lieut. Inglis, the Aden troop, Surgeon Kelcall, in medical charge. Captain Hunter, First Assistant Political Resident, and Surgeon Hay accompanied the above troops. These troops are expected to be absent for only a few days."

DEPARTURES FROM BOMBAY.—The Hon. Sir Edward C. Bayley, K.C.S.I., member of the Viceroy's Council, left for Venice by the mail of April 15. Shortly after five o'clock several friends of Sir Edward assembled at the Apollo Bunder to bid him good-bye and a prosperous voyage to England. A deputation, consisting of Mr. Hart, Acting Private Secretary to H.E. Sir R. Temple, Mr. Gonne, Officiating Chief Secretary to Government, Mr. J. H. Grant, the Municipal Commissioner, and Sir Frank H. Souter, Kt. C.S.I., waited at the bunder to receive him officially, and Miss Temple, attended by Captains Frith and Dean-Pitt, drove down to see the Honourable Member and Miss Bayley off. At about 5.30 p.m. Sir Edward and Miss Bayley, accompanied by Sir Michael and Lady Westropp, arrived at the head of the pier, where they were received by the Hon. J. Gibbs, the Hon. L. R. Ashburner, C.S.I., the Hon. Justices Sargent, Bayley, West, Green, Kemball, Melville, and Pinhey, Captains Searle, Parker, and Fenn, and Mr. Arbutnot, Collector of Bombay. As Sir E. Bayley and Miss Bayley accompanied by several friends left the bunder in a Government steam-launch a salute of fifteen guns was fired from the land battery. During their stay in Bombay Sir Edward and Miss Bayley were the guests of Sir Michael and Lady Westropp.

FESTIVITIES IN THE HARBOUR.—At this season of the year dances on board ship are delightful; in fact, it appears to be the only place where they can reasonably be held, as the heat on shore is great, while in the harbour there is always a cool breeze blowing. A few nights ago, Captain Craig, of the Olympia, gave a dance on board his ship, at which a large number of people were present. On Monday night Captain George Read, of the s.s. India (Anchor Line), entertained a party numbering upwards of forty. An excellent programme was danced through with all the enthusiasm that lovely woman and splendid moonlight (which seemed to transform the harbour into one quivering lake of silver) could inspire. The wheelhouse was transformed into a bar, and, ornamented as it was with flags, and made brilliant with lights and glasses, it looked anything but a wheelhouse. The deck was adorned with Chinese lanterns, the soft lights of which had a charming effect. During supper the toast of Captain Read's health and prosperity to the Anchor Line was, on the proposition of Captain Brebner, drunk with great enthusiasm, and when the company separated at an early hour in the morning, the last words wafted from the steam launch that bore away the dancers were full of good wishes for the prosperity of the Anchor Line.

EAST INDIA PUBLIC WORKS COMMITTEE.

The committee met on Thursday, the 16th inst., Lord George Hamilton in the chair, when Sir George Campbell gave evidence for the second time. The examination-in-chief lasted nearly the whole of the day, and the witness detailed at great length his personal experience of the progress of the irrigation works in the Punjab, the North-Western Provinces, Bengal, Oudh, Madras, the Central Provinces, &c. In the Punjab the system of irrigation by means of wells obtains; it is an old resource of the cultivators, and is still kept up and encouraged by the Government. The thirty years' settlement, under which in modern times irrigation works have become sources of revenue, has proved highly favourable to the development of the ancient modes of irrigation in India.

Sir George Campbell described at length the native modes of agriculture in the Punjab and the dryer lands of the North-Western Provinces. The system, he stated, would be found fully described in Sir H. Mayne's work on Indian agriculture. The witness gave an epitome of the contents of the book, in the chapters which treat of irrigation, cultivation of soils on the in-field and out-field system, the mode of obtaining natural and artificial manures, &c.

Sir G. Campbell's further explanations referred to the methods of canal irrigation, and he went over the various works in existence in different parts of India, pointing out where they were of utility, and in what cases and under what circumstances the canal system had proved a costly failure, with little prospect of the works ever becoming remunerative projects.

At the close of his examination Sir G. Campbell submitted his opinions with regard to obviating famines. He advocated improved interior communications by land and water, a larger extension of the railway system, a greater development of every means of irrigation, taking into consideration what modes of irrigation were best suited to particular districts and soils. Before concluding his evidence Sir G. Campbell put in papers, compiled in the India Office, being a record of famines in India from the earliest periods down to the present time. In reference to this document he expressed his belief that the famines of the last few years might have been more successfully contended with, had it not been for the private trade in grain, which monopolised the railways when they were urgently required to carry the grain to the famine-stricken people in Madras and Bombay. In respect to the old famines—in Bengal and Madras—those of the last century,—he considered that, with such improved communications as now existed in India, those past famines could have been checked and prevented from recurring. The recent famine in Madras was a more serious occurrence than any that had preceded it. What we had to do now was to prepare for any future droughts and resultant famine by pushing on every available means of constructing public works in districts where they were most needed.

Miscellaneous.

TRADING COMPANY.—Manila papers allege that an English trading Company, in accord with the Sultan of Borneo, has planted the British flag on the island of Sanda Kan. The Spanish Press expresses displeasure at this proceeding.

THE FAMINE IN CHINA.—A private telegram from Shanghai states that large quantities of grain are being conveyed by the natives into the famine districts. There is no immediate prospect of a cessation of the distress. The entire receipts of the famine relief fund in Shanghai amounts to 100,000 taels.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.—Messrs. Allen will publish shortly a volume of "Natural History, Sport, and Travel," by Edward Lockwood, Bengal Civil Service, late magistrate of Monghyr. The same publishers announce as nearly ready, an edition of Milton's Poetical Works, by John Bradshaw, M.A., LL.D.

EXPORT OF SPECIE.—The Peninsular and Oriental steamer Hydaspes has left with £200,108, £28,000 being in gold, and £4,000 in silver coin for Malta, £58,500 in bar silver for Bombay, and £48,000, also in silver, for Galle. Of the £29,508 for Hong Kong, £14,050 is in bar silver and £15,458 in dollars, and £32,100 is in dollars for Shanghai.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The tenders for £400,000 in bills on India were received on May 15 at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were:—To Calcutta, £358,700, at an average rate of 1s. 8½d.; to Bombay, £30,300, at an average rate of 1s. 8¾d.; and to Madras, £11,000, at an average rate of 1s. 8¾d. Tenders on all Presidencies at 1s. 8½d. will receive about 10 per cent.; all above in full. With the exception of the average rates being rather higher than they were last week, there is practically no alteration in the present allotment. During the ten weeks (March 6 to May 8) that tenders were received for a nominal weekly amount of £500,000, the Council were able to sell bills to the value of £5,000,000, and for that period obtained an average of 1s. 8½d., so that the reduction in this week's allotment has not been productive of any increase in the price.

HIMALAYAN EXPLORATION.—The Academy has summarised some important geographical work performed on our northern Trans-Indus frontier by one of the trained explorers attached to the Great Trigonometrical Survey of India. The Mulla, the explorer in question, has made a survey of the course of the river Indus, from the point where it enters the plains above Attok to that where it is joined by the river of Gilgit, which portion has hitherto remained unexplored. Here the great river traverses a distance of some 220 miles, descending from a height of about 5,000 feet to 1,200 feet above the sea-level, and its course winds tortuously through great mountain ranges, whose peaks are rarely less than 15,000 feet high, and culminate in the Nanga Parbat, the well-known mountain, whose height (26,650 feet) is only exceeded by a very few of the great Himalayan peaks. No European has ever yet penetrated into this region, which is very difficult of access from all sides, and is inhabited by hill tribes, independent and suspicious of one another. Each community elects its own ruler, and has little intercourse with its neighbours, and with the outer world it only communicates through a few individuals who are privileged to travel over the country as traders. The Mulla possesses this privilege, and thus, in the double capacity of trader and explorer, was able to travel along the Indus and through some of the lateral valleys, leaving the rest for future exploration. He afterwards proceeded, as directed, to Yassin, through the Gilgit Valley, which has been already surveyed. From Yassin he surveyed the southern route to Mastuj, through the Ghizar and Sar Laspur valleys, and has furnished an important rectification of a route hitherto very erroneously laid down from conjecture. From Mastuj the explorer proceeded along the route leading towards the Baroghil Pass, as far as the junction of the Gazan with the Yarkhun river, and then along the northern road from Mastuj to Yassin. This road turns up the Gazan Valley, crosses the Tui or Moshabar Pass, which is thought to be not less than 16,000 feet above the sea, and, after traversing a deep crevassed glacier for some eight miles, reaches the point where the Tui river issues in great volume from the glacier; the road then follows the course of the river down to its junction with the Warchagan near Yassin. Returning to Sar Laspur, the Mulla next surveyed the route to the south-west, up the valley leading to the Tal Pass, which is situated on a plateau of the range connecting the mountains on the west of the Indus Valley with those on the east of the valley of Chitral, a region generally known by the people of the country as the Kohistan. The Swat and Panjkora rivers, and most of their principal affluents, are found to take their rise here. The most commanding peaks of the range have already been fixed, but of the general lie of the valleys relatively to the peaks nothing was known before the Mulla's visit, and he has done much to elucidate the geography of this region. After crossing the Tal plateau he descended into the valley of the Panjkora, and traversed its entire length down to Dodbah at the junction of the Dir river. He was prevented from following the Panjkora to its junction with the Swat river, and therefore travelled along the Havildar's 1868 route to Miankalai. Thence he surveyed the road to Nawagai and on to Pashat in the valley of Kunar; and, last of all, he surveyed the road from Nawagai down to the British fort of Abazai. The explorations of the Mulla have thus filled up a considerable gap in the map of the country on our northern Trans-Indus frontier, where the Survey propose to carry out further explorations as soon as possible.

India in Parliament.

INDIAN TROOPS.

HOUSE OF LORDS, MONDAY, May 13.—Lord GRANVILLE gave notice that next Thursday Lord Selborne would call attention to the question whether the Indian troops excepted from the vote recited in the preamble to the Mutiny Act could, consistently with constitutional law, be employed in time of peace elsewhere than in the Indian Possessions of her Majesty without the previous consent of Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, May 13.—In reply to a question from Sir H. JAMES,* the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said that the Native troops were not, and never had been, reckoned in the number mentioned in the Mutiny Act, and the Establishment was now 715 above the figure sanctioned by Parliament, viz., 136,167 men, not including the Reserves of 35,000 which, under the Act, were added to the Establishment; and in reply to Sir HENRY HAVELOCK,* Colonel STANLEY made the following statement:—Officers commanding Indian cavalry and infantry regiments at Malta would receive about £1,836 a year and £1,716 respectively. The pay and allowances of lieutenant-colonels of English regiments would be about £564 for the infantry and £698 for the cavalry. The number of English officers in those Indian regiments had been increased to the same extent as in the case of the Abyssinian expedition—namely, by a combatant officer and one doctor. Assuming that the junior officer of an Indian regiment was a subaltern—which was not necessarily the case—he would draw £396 as against £564, the amount which he had stated as about the pay of an infantry colonel of an English regiment.

In reply to the Marquis of HARTINGTON, who wished to know when the estimates would be proposed to Parliament, and gave notice of a coming resolution that no forces be raised or kept by the Crown in time of peace, without the consent of Parliament, in any part of her Majesty's dominions, except such forces as may be actively serving in her Majesty's Indian possessions—the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER fixed Monday, the 27th, for the discussion and the resolution, too, if convenient; or an earlier day might be named if desired. When the right hon. gentleman further replied to Mr. CHAMBERLAIN* and Captain PIM, that it would not be possible to afford facilities for other motions also, Lord HARTINGTON remarked that his case differed from Mr. Chamberlain's so far, that he expressed no opinion on the policy of the Government, but solely on the manner in which their policy had been carried out.

The adjourned debate on the third reading of the Budget Bill was resumed by Mr. VIVIAN, who considered that a slight had been put on Parliament by the action recently taken, and condemned the movement of troops from India as illegal and unconstitutional. The Chancellor of the Exchequer must have known that it was intended to bring over "foreign troops," and he should have told Parliament when he brought in the Budget. But the Government had behaved throughout with a want of candour, and among other things he charged them with sending the fleet into the Mediterranean with a lie in its mouth, and with obtaining the Vote of Credit by stating that none of it would be spent.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER gave this charge an emphatic denial, and while pointing out that this was not the occasion on which to discuss the legality of the measure, admitted its gravity, and the right and duty of Parliament to scrutinise it. Dealing solely with the question whether it ought to have been communicated to Parliament, he assured the House that it was not in his power to have mentioned the subject in his Budget Speech, for it was only four days before that it was decided on by the Cabinet, and not until a week after that the first order was sent to India sanctioning expenditure. The official changes which occurred on Lord Derby's resignation and the necessary communications with India led to delay, and the Government, holding that they were under no obligation to communicate the measure to Parliament, were strongly of opinion that secrecy was expedient and necessary for the success of the expedition. The constitutional control of Parliament would be untouched, because if this should unhappily prove to be a war measure, the Government would have to come forward with further financial proposals, and if it should be merely a measure of precaution it would not lead to any special disturbance of the Budget arrangements. The mere expense of bringing 7,000 troops from India to Malta was an item which he was not then able to state precisely in figures; but it was an expense which would be of moderate dimensions, provided the troops were only brought there for a short time, and that further necessity did not arise for their employment on active service.—Mr. DONOX insisted that the Government could and should have communicated their intention to Parliament when the Budget was before the House, and enlarged on the violation of all sound principles of finance in concealing from Parliament such an important item of expenditure and in deliberately increasing the deficit. He could not understand the importance of secrecy in the mere bringing of 7,000 men from India to add to the garrison in Malta. If they wished to produce an effect in the mind of Europe, their policy should have been to show what their military resources were—that there was this force available in India, and more behind it, and that these forces would be brought over, if necessary.

Mr. A. MILLS denied that the employment of Hanoverian troops in 1775 was any precedent, and argued that the oath taken by the Indian troops placed them on exactly the same footing as the British regiments. He cordially approved the measure, and the action of the Government in removing these Indian troops had, in his judgment, contributed more than anything which had been done for a long series of years to bind to ourselves upwards of 200,000,000 of British subjects who were our fellow-subjects in the Indian Empire.—Mr. HENRY complained of the love of mystery and theatrical surprise which had of late marked the Ministerial proceedings.—Mr. RYLANDS contended that the course taken in this instance was destructive of all Parliamentary control over the finances.—Mr. NEWDEGATE was of opinion that it was illegal and unconstitutional, and would deprive the House of all power over the standing Army; and Mr. LAING argued that owing to the keeping back of this expenditure the House had never been in a position fully to consider the financial arrangements of the year.—Mr. E. JENKINS denied that any emergency had been shown sufficient to justify the Government, and complained of the want of vigour in the leading of the front Opposition Bench.—Mr. PEASE and Mr. BIGGAR also spoke, and a division being challenged on the third reading of the Bill, it was carried by 111 to 19.

* Denotes that the questions or notices of them, will be found in the previous number of Allen's Indian Mail.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, May 14.—Lord HARTINGTON will move the following resolution on May 20 :—"Military Forces of the Crown—That, by the Constitution of this realm, no forces may be raised or kept by the Crown in time of peace, without the consent of Parliament, within any part of the dominions of the Crown, excepting only such forces as may be actually serving within her Majesty's Indian possessions."

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, May 16.—THE INDIAN CONTINGENT.—Sir A. GORDON asked the Under Secretary for India whether the Articles of War made by the Indian Government for the government of the native Indian forces, and those portions of the Indian Penal Code which formed part of those Articles of War, had any force within the Island of Malta.—Mr. E. STANHOPE: Yes, Sir. They will apply to the Indian troops at Malta.

INDIAN ECCLESIASTICAL SALARIES.—Mr. BAXTER asked the Under-Secretary for India when the return regarding ecclesiastical salaries in India, for which an address was moved last session, would be laid upon the table of the House.—Mr. E. STANHOPE: The Financial Department in India has been directed by the Government of India to prepare this return, but it must necessarily take a considerable time, and I cannot at present say when it will be received.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FRIDAY, May 17.—INDIAN TROOPS.—Sir M. HICKS-BEACH: I beg to give notice that on Monday next, on the motion of the noble marquis opposite, relating to the military forces of the Crown, I shall move the following amendment. "That this House, being of opinion that the constitutional control of Parliament over the raising and employment of the military forces of the Crown is fully secured by the provisions of the law, and by the undoubted power of this House to grant or refuse supplies, considers it to be unnecessary and inexpedient to affirm any resolution tending to weaken the hands of her Majesty's Government in the present state of foreign affairs.—Mr. E. JENKINS asked the noble marquis whether it was his fixed intention to go to a division with his motion.—The Marquis of HARTINGTON, who was received with cheers, said: I believe the question of my hon. friend, although perfectly regular in form, is somewhat unusual in detail. I presume that the action any member of this House may take in pressing or refraining from pressing a motion to a division must always depend upon what takes place in debate, and I may say that much of my intention may depend upon the support which I receive from him—(laughter). I imagine, at all events, it would be only regular to suppose that it is possible that I may be converted by the arguments to the other side, or that the other side may be converted by my arguments, and that therefore it may not be necessary to take a division. However, I can only assure my hon. friend that, as at present advised, it is my most undoubted intention to press the motion of which I have given notice to a division.

THE LATE MR. COCHRANE.—The recent death of Mr. John Cochrane and the retirement of Judge Kemp have deprived Calcutta of two of its oldest inhabitants. John Cochrane was one of the most famous Calcutta lawyers of his day. Twenty or thirty years ago, whenever it was known that John Cochrane was going to address a jury, the old Supreme Court would be thronged by people to listen and wonder at his marvellous eloquence. In olden time he was the universal referee in all that pertained to the dueller; and in those days there was scarcely a barrister at the Calcutta Bar who had not, at one time or other, either challenged or received a challenge. One of the last public appearances of John Cochrane was at a great dinner given to Sir Hugh Rose on his departure from this country.—Calcutta Correspondent of Pioneer.

A SIMPLE TEST FOR MILK.—A correspondent sends us the following as the readiest and perhaps the best test for good milk in India, which is known to every native milk dealer, and affords proof instantaneously of the presence or not of water:—"Dip a finger in the milk and allow a drop to fall from it on the thumb nail. If pure, the milk will stand on the nail as a globular bead, but if it contains water, it will immediately spread over the nail. I have applied this test in many parts of India with invariable success, and have never known it fail."—Bombay Gazette.

THE BISHOP OF COLOMBO.—No one can complain that the Bishop of Colombo is an idle man. His lordship has been away for some weeks now paying pastoral visits to different places in the North Western Province, holding Confirmations, addressing Buddhist audiences, preaching in English and Tamil, and even attending a kind of vestry meeting. The Bishop will return to Colombo for Holy Week and Easter; will go to Dimbula and Kandy at the end of the month, to Rakwana and Galle early in May; and about the third week in May will leave for England to attend the Pan-Anglican Synod, and to enjoy a well-earned holiday of three months' duration.

COURT-MARTIAL.—At a General Court-Martial, held at Fort St. George, Madras, on the 5th day of March, 1878, No. 1,779, Jemadar Vengoojee Row, 10th Regiment M.N.I., was arraigned on the following charge:—Having at Madras, on the 8th February, 1878, been intoxicated on parade, when paraded prior to inspection, by the Major-General commanding the district. The Court found the prisoner guilty of the charge, and sentenced him to be suspended from rank, pay and allowances for three months. The Court afterwards passed the following revised sentence:—The Court having attentively considered the observations of the revising officer, and the whole of the proceedings, do now revoke their former sentence, and now sentence the prisoner to be dismissed the service. His Excellency the Commander-in-Chief has approved and confirmed the sentence.

FRENCH INDIA.—MM. Joubart and La Barbe, the Commissioners appointed by the French Government to inquire into the general administration of the French Possessions in India, have arrived at Pondicherry.

RED BOOK FOR SERGEANTS.

By W. BRIGHT, Colour-Sergeant, 37th
Middlesex R.V.

* * Includes new System of Attack, Musketry Regulations, and other Recent Alterations.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"Under this title, Colour-Sergeant Bright, of the 37th Middlesex R.V., has prepared an elaborate series of 'Test Questions' in all the matters in which a Sergeant of Volunteer Infantry has to be examined for his Certificate. The questions are very well framed, and very complete. Except in a very few instances, the answers are not given, but each question is followed by a reference to the Field Exercise, or the Rifle Exercises, from which the student will gain the information necessary to frame the answer. The book is interleaved with blank paper, so that the answers, when discovered, may be written out. Altogether the scheme is a very ingenious one, and we commend the new 'Red Book' to all Sergeants or intending Sergeants. We should add that the book contains a useful Appendix on certain points of military etiquette with which all Volunteers ought to
1878.

"The object of this work is to enable a candidate for promotion to the rank of Sergeant in the Volunteer Infantry to acquire by heart a thorough knowledge of the subjects of his examination. . . . The questions are clearly framed, and . . . a very good method has been adopted for impressing the subject on the memory.
A simple, handy book of the sort was much wanted, and the want has been supplied."—Broad Arrow, March 2, 1878.

"In this useful little manual of fifty-eight pages Mr.
Bright has succeeded in making a 'royal road' for those members of the Volunteer Force who may desire to qualify themselves for the rank of Sergeant. . . .
The 'Red Book for Sergeants' is a concise and practical guide, and should be in the hands of every Volunteer in the Kingdom."—Weekly Dispatch, March 10,

"The work is very carefully compiled and neatly got up, and seems well adapted for the end in view. . . .
This 'Red Book' takes a comprehensive view of what all Volunteers, commissioned or non-commissioned, should know, and cannot fail to be of great value to all ranks of the Service. Some very useful information is given in an Appendix."—Military Record and Volunteer News, March 13, 1878.

"A compact shilling 'Red Book for Sergeants' appears very opportunely, as Volunteers are turning their thoughts to active service. . . . A most useful guide for Volunteers."—Lloyd's Weekly Newspaper, March 24,

OPINIONS OF VOLUNTEER OFFICERS.

The following is a copy of a letter received from Lieutenant-Colonel C. E. HOWARD VINCENT, Commanding
Central London Rifle Rangers (4th Middlesex), President of the Volunteer Conference, and late of the 23rd
Royal Welsh Fusiliers:—

"Lieutenant-Colonel Howard Vincent has read with great interest the 'Red Book for Sergeants,' compiled by Colour-Sergeant Bright, of the 37th Middlesex. The questions have been very carefully framed, and there can be no doubt that writing out the answers to them will impress the duties of Sergeants more on their memories than any other system. The publication of this book affords additional evidence of the successful zeal with which the Non-commissioned Officers of Volunteers apply themselves to their military duties—to the great gain of the entire Force.—Feb. 21, 1878."

One Officer (a Major) writes:—
"I have no hesitation in expressing my opinion that it should be in the hands of every Non-Commissioned Officer in the Service."

Another (a Captain) writes:—
"It is likely to be of service not only to Non-Commissioned, but all ranks in the Volunteer Service."

Similar approbatory letters have also been received

RUPTURES.—BY HER MAJESTY'S ROYAL LETTERS PATENT.

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS COMPANY (Limited).

WHITE'S MOC-MAIN LEVER TRUSS, Perfected and Exhibited in the Great Exhibition of 1861, is allowed by upwards of 500 Medical Gentlemen to be the most effective invention in the curative treatment of Hernia. The use of a steel spring, so often hurtful in its effects, is here avoided; a soft bandage being worn round the body, while the requisite resisting power is supplied by the MOC-MAIN PAD and PATENT LEVER, fitting with so much ease and closeness that it cannot be detected, and may be worn during sleep. A descriptive circular may be had, and the Truss (which cannot fail to fit) forwarded by post on the circumference of the body two inches below the hips being sent to the Manufacturer.

Mr. WHITE, 228, Piccadilly, London.

Price of a Single Truss, 16s., 21s., 26s. 6d., and 31s. 6d.
postage, free. Price of Double Truss, 31s. 6d., 42s., and 52s. 6d.; postage, free. Umbilical, 42s. and 52s. 6d.; postage, free.

Post-office Orders payable to JOHN WHITE, Postoffice, Piccadilly.

NEW PATENT.

ELASTIC STOCKINGS, KNEE CAPS.

&c.—The material of which these are made is recommended by the Faculty as being peculiarly elastic and compressible, and the best invention for giving efficient and permanent support in all cases of weakness and swelling of the Legs, Varicose Veins, Sprains, &c.
It is porous, light in texture, and inexpensive, and is drawn on like an ordinary stocking. Price 4s. 6d., 7s. 6d., 10s. to 16s. each; postage, free.

NOTES ON MUHAMMADANISM

REV. T. P. HUGHES, M.R.A.S.,

C. M. S., Missionary to the Afghans, Peshawar.

Opinions of the Press on the First Edition.

"Altogether an admirable little book. It combines two excellent qualities, abundance of facts and lack of the rife. . . . On every one of the numerous heads (over fifty) into which the book is divided, Mr. Hughes furnishes a large amount of very valuable information, which it would be exceedingly difficult to collect from even a large library of works on the subject. The book might well be called a 'Dictionary of Muhammadan Theology,' for we know of no English work which combines a methodical arrangement (and consequently facility of reference), with fulness of information in so high a degree as the little volume before us."—The Academy.

"It contains multum in parvo, and is about the best outline of the tenets of the Muslim faith which we have seen. It has, moreover, the rare merit of being accurate; and although it contains a few passages which we would gladly see expunged, it cannot fail to be useful to all Government employes who have to deal with Muhammadans, whilst to Missionaries it will be invaluable."
—The Times of India.

"This small book is the most luminous, most convenient, and, we think, the most accurate, outline of the tenets and practices of Islamism that we have met with.
It seems exactly the sort of comprehensive and trustworthy book in small compass, on this subject, that we and many more have often looked for in vain. . . .
The author has evidently studied his subject in a faithful, laborious, and scholarly manner, and has not only studied but mastered it. The work is of great value for general students, and for men whose work lies among the Mussulman population, such as Civil Servants and Missionaries; it seems to be the very work that is wanted."—The Friend of India.

"In brief compass it contains a large amount of reliable information. Instead of theories and fancies, facts are placed before us. Muhammadanism is represented as it really is, not as it is supposed that it might possibly be. Instead of retailing the speculations current in literary society at home, Mr. Hughes furnishes us with brief but incisive statements, which, so far as they go, leave nothing to be desired."—The Church Missionary Intelligence.

"It is manifest throughout the work that we have before us the opinions of one thoroughly conversant with the subject, and who is uttering no random notions. . . . We strongly recommend 'Notes on Mu-hammadanism.' Our Clergy especially, even though they are not Missionaries, and have no intention of labouring amongst Muhammadans or consorting with them, ought to have at least as much knowledge of the system as can be most readily acquired, with a very little careful study, from this useful treatise."—The Record.

"Its value as a means of correcting the common impressions about Islam will reveal itself to the most casual reader, while the author's evident scholarship and intimate knowledge of his subject bespeak for him a patient hearing on points the most open to controversy."—Allen's Indian Mail.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are, from Bombay, May 6; Allahabad and Madras, May 4; Calcutta, May 3; Ceylon, May 2.

WE learn from the Times of India that the Expeditionary Force had left Bombay in two detachments, the first conveyed in four steamers and five sailing vessels, starting on the 29th and 30th April, and the second carried in eight steamers; ten sailing-vessels, and a bagla, or native craft, on the 1st, 2nd, and 4th May. It had been intended that the whole of the second detachment should start on the 1st of May, but a delay had arisen owing to some of the tanks remaining unfinished, and the water being supplied in insufficient quantities. All the troops left in the best of spirits, and nothing could exceed the enthusiasm they showed from first to last. The Viceroy had telegraphed to the Governor of Bombay the cordial thanks of the Government of India to Sir R. Temple and his advisers, for the manner in which the arrangements for the embarkation had been carried out. Her Highness the Begum of Bhopal has offered the whole available force of the Bhopal State for foreign service. And from Madras we learn that active preparations are being made, in several departments, for the equipment of more troops if required.

IN last night's debate the proceedings of Government in the matter of the Indian troops were again brought under review. The adjourned debate on Lord Hartington's Resolution was resumed by Mr. Cross, who was followed by many others, among whom may be mentioned Mr. Roebuck, Mr. Forster, the Solicitor-General, Sir Henry James, and the Chancellor of the Exchequer. At the close, the Marquis of Hartington briefly replied, and the House divided, when Ministers had a majority of 121. The much-discussed year, 1775, was exhumed anew by an honourable member; this time, however, not with reference to the illegality of employing native troops out of India, but to show that a charge of faction had been then unjustly made by a Minister against Mr. Burke.

IN republishing last week the substance of the Times telegram regarding the demonstration of May 1, at the Apollo Bandar in Bombay, on the occasion of the embarkation of the 9th Regiment N.I., we omitted to state that his Excellency the Governor, who had personally superintended the preparations for the Expedition, went down to see the Sipahis depart; and that the affair had been promoted by the Volunteer Corps. This information we are now enabled to give from the papers just received.

THREE telegrams, dated Port Said, yesterday, announce the following movements of steamers with detachments of the Indian contingent:—The St. Osyth, towing the Clydesdale, had arrived at Suez, but gone on with the Scott (Helen Scott?) through the Canal. The Clydesdale remained at Suez in quarantine. The Nankin and Kilkerran had started for Malta.

THERE is comparatively little news to record on the progress or decline of the famine in the last week's Indian budget. According to the Friend of India, prices still continue high in the North-West, notwithstanding the in-gathering of the rubi, and additional relief works are still being planned in the Madras Presidency, where also more or less distress must continue till the next harvest.

SIR MICHAEL KENNEDY's estimate of fifty lakhs for additional Famine Expenditure in Madras was sanctioned some time since by the Government of India. The Pioneer of the 4th May notices that, up to date, the actual figures for the money spent are much below those of the estimate, and attributes the existence of such a surplus to the favourable rains that had fallen in the Presidency.

A TELEGRAM from the Secretary of State to his Excellency the Viceroy, published in the Bombay papers, repeats the purport of a previous telegram received from the Prince of Wales in Paris. His Royal Highness conveys to the Minister the following information, which cannot but be highly gratifying to all concerned in the arrangements for the Indian section of the great building, now attracting our country-people across the water:—"As the Paris International Exhibition is opened to-day I am anxious to announce to you how satisfactory in every respect is the display made by the products and manufactures of the Indian Empire."

WE regret much to hear that cholera of a virulent type had broken out at Bombay, two days before the departure of the mail, in a house inhabited by a number of Goanese, on the Esplanade Cross Road. Thirteen men had been attacked, but it was only at 5 P.M. that any intimation of the occurrence was given, and after two of the number had died. Nine cases were then admitted into the Gokaldas Tejpal Hospital, of which one proved fatal the same day, and seven died the day following; the other patient is progressing favourably. Two cases were sent to the Jamsetji Jijibhai Hospital; two of the inmates being removed for safety to Kalbadavie—but on arriving there they were also attacked, and died within a few hours. Mr. Brunton, the Assistant Health Officer, visited the infected house on the morning of the 5th May, and had the place fumigated. Besides these, there were six deaths from cholera reported on the 5th May in Dabool, and three in the Chira Bazaar on the Girgaum Road.

THERE is a sad account given of mortality among the high officials at Goa. We learn that the Governor-General, Viscount Sergio Souza, expired on Friday, on the 3rd inst., of typhoid fever, and that the Secretary and Chief Justice had died on the 28th and 29th ultimo.

THE Pioneer states that the Supreme Government has sanctioned the expenditure of fifteen lakhs during the current financial year on Colonel Fraser's scheme of light railways for the North-West Provinces.

THE Ceylon Times tells us of an envoy from the King of Birmah who had brought over some sacred writings for deposit in the island, and was to make a pilgrimage to Adam's Peak. This distinguished visitor is said to have expressed himself pleased with Ceylon, but afraid that its inhabitants were "very wicked." In the same paper we read of the death of a Mohammedan merchant known in Galle as "Allie Deedio" (whatever may be the true transliteration), who had left two widows and a large fortune behind him. The deceased appears to have been a man of singular intelligence and business enterprise, although originally a Maldivian islander. It is stated that he was the uncle of the Sultan of the Maldives; but that he left our ally in the Indian Ocean some years ago, and has since devoted his energies to the amassing of wealth at Galle, where he was the owner of considerable property. His estate is estimated at Rs. 200,000.

THE Times of India gives the following extract from the examination paper of a Bengali medical student, of whom some description of the action of the heart was, amongst other matters, required:—"The action is just like the firing of the gun. When trigger being touched, down comes the flint, strikes against steel, elicits sparks, which falling upon the powder, it is ignited, flame enters the barrel, causes explosion, propels the ball, and the mark is aimed at. All these events are performed within twinkling of an eye. So when the ventricles contract, the blood passes through the arteries to the capillaries, and returns to the heart through the veins. This happens within the twinkling of an eye."

In the Times of this morning is a telegram from St. Petersburg announcing the arrival there yesterday of the Shah of Persia. His Majesty, we are told, "was received at the railway station by several members of the Imperial family. From the station he drove to the Palace with the Emperor in an open carriage, accompanied by a large escort of Circassian horsemen, some of whom were dressed in bright-coloured costumes. The houses along the route were profusely decorated with flags, and the whole scene, lit up as it was with bright sunshine, was very picturesque. The crowd of spectators was considerable, but the interest was much less intense than on the last occasion of the kind." The sojourn will not, we believe, be a long one, Wednesday next being the day named for departure. As to the statement or suggestion that the visit has a political signification, it discloses no more than Lord Burleigh's celebrated shake of the head, interpreted by Mr. Puff, in the Critic.

THE Friend of India is not so hopeful as its contemporaries in reporting on the famine. In its issue of the 26th April we are told that the number of distressed persons at Agra continues to increase; that the mortuary returns for the North-West Provinces and Oudh show, from November and March, about 800,000 deaths from causes "which, in unofficial language, means starvation;" and that the result of the nearly completed harvest in the Central Provinces is very unsatisfactory. According to the Agra returns for the 19th April there were 994 in the poor-houses and 4,669 on the relief works.

THE Pioneer has much to say in favour of the employment of native troops out of India. Cost it esteems as trifling compared to the moral advantage gained. "The transports which would bring their few thousands of fresh troops every year would merely have to be proportionably multiplied to bring tens or hundreds of thousands." But it sees in the whole scheme a means of educating the Indian army which though original enough to raise a smile on the lips of many an old sipahi officer, may not be wholly unattainable or unavailable. "In a score of ways the intelligence of Indian soldiers who had served in Europe would be brightened, their views of life widened, their susceptibility to false impressions about the action of Government here diminished. And in process of time they would all be passed through the educational process, the consequences of which appear to be wholly good and desirable, no matter from what point of view it is regarded." Of course we have to look at two sides of the picture, and assuredly this is the fair side. The first thing to be done to realise the bright vision would be to give authoritative sanction to efforts of European officers in the direction required, taking for granted that these are of the proper stuff to deal with sipahis.

THE Monday telegram of the Times, via Tebran, states that orders had been issued for the immediate construction of coast defences. Madras was to be protected by five batteries, armed with 68-pounder rifled guns. Batteries would also be erected at various ports on the eastern coast. Another battery for the defence of Calcutta was being constructed at Fultah, one of the narrowest points on the Hooghly. This would be armed with ten 9-inch rifled muzzle-loaders, and would cover the torpedo defences. Bombay and Rangoon were to be similarly defended.

FROM the same source we extract the following:—"Another case of a sensational character has lately formed the subject of a judicial investigation. Some natives were bathing at a ghaut on the Hooghly, when a body was seen floating down the river and tossing its arms. A cry immediately arose that the body was possessed by a ghost. A native doctor who was present appealed in vain to the bystanders to render assistance, but even the watermen refused the use of their boats. With great courage he plunged into the current and with much difficulty brought the body to land. It was found to be a young woman about twenty-four years of age. After restoratives had been applied, she stated that she had been for some time an invalid, that her relatives had brought her, stupefied, but sensible, to a burning ghaut; that fire had been applied to her mouth as to that of a corpse; and that she had then been thrust into the river as if dead. The unfortunate woman was taken to an hospital, where, after lingering fifteen days, she died. Her relatives were prosecuted, but have been acquitted."

THE Madras Times explains how the 25th Madras Native Infantry had the honour of selection for the Malta expedition. This regiment was the first that petitioned his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief to be sent to the seat of war, and every man in its ranks signed the paper. While Sir Neville Chamberlain was disposing of the petitions he received instructions to nominate a native regiment for service, and here was one immediately available. The 25th, or Kenney Paltan, as it is called, from the officer who raised it, was formerly the 1st Battalion of the 13th Regiment, and was formed at Trichinopoly in 1794. Though without any distinguishing names of bygone actions, such as belong to the 24th, 26th, and many other Madras corps, it has long had a good reputation, and will doubtless do credit to the service of which it is an honoured representative.

THE Newspaper Press Fund dinner at Willis's Rooms on the 18th inst. was a great success. The Marquis of Salisbury was an excellent Chairman, and made excellent speeches; and he was well supported by other speakers. Lord Napier of Magdala returned thanks for the Army, and his allusion to the Indian Sipahis who had come so readily Westward on the Government call was received with loud cheering. No question of illegality or breach of Parliamentary precedent, no foreboding of heavy cost, in fact, no doubts or apprehensions whatever as to the wisdom of the recent movement seemed to disturb the minds of any present as they applauded Lord Napier.

SO MANY reports are spread about the Amir of Kabul, chiefly relating to his health and temper, that it is impossible to know which or what to believe. We notice two that appeared in the Bombay Gazette of the 29th ult.; the one, "it is confidently stated that the Amir of Kabul is ill again, this time seriously so;" the other, "the news is confirmed that the Amir of Kabul has now a most friendly feeling towards the British." Time will show whether there is truth in either report. In the meanwhile, let us hope that reliance can be placed in the second only. It is satisfactory to learn that the telegraph line to Khetta is much used by the natives, some of whom come from some distance in the Amir's territory, to communicate by wire with their relatives in Hindustan, and even as far South as Bangalor and Cochin.

THE Times of India understands that a Commission, consisting of an Assistant Political Agent and a Dewan of one of the First Class Chiefs of Kattywar, would be held at Verawal in this month of May, to inquire into certain charges brought against the Sheikh of Mangrol, in connection with the long-pending case in which the said Sheikh claimed certain rights and jurisdiction from the Nawab of Joonaghur.

CAN it be that the local law enforces the employment of a pilot for ships within the port of Calcutta, but allows them to run into each other elsewhere in the Hugli, a river of tortuous channels? We gather from the Pioneer that the question has arisen in India with reference to a recent collision; but as we are also informed it is within the power of the Lieutenant-Governor to set the matter right, it is probable that, as this is the first, so it is the last we shall hear of the anomaly.

Few but those who have experienced the miseries of a passage up or down the Indus in any month from February to August, with a broiling sun above, a blinding or parching wind about, and a snag and sand bank teaming-river below, can appreciate the boon to mere individuals which will be obtained by the opening of the Indus Valley Railway from Multan to Kotri. The Indian Daily News learns that there is every prospect of completion by the 1st of June, although there was much still to be done at the Lakki Pass. The Adam-wahan Bridge over the Sutlej was also to be ready about the same time. There is a temporary bridge which answers all purposes of traffic, but the river is not to be trusted. We are told that the recent heavy rains brought down all the Panjab rivers in flood, and broke several of the boat bridges, and as there were unusually heavy snowstorms on the hills during the winter, it is only too probable that whether there is a heavy rainy season or not, the first snow-melting will be of uncommon force.

THE accounts that reach us from Kashgar, however gratifying to the Imperial Government at Peking, are not assuring to civilised States. On one side we read that the Western Chinese army, under General Tso, is overrunning Kashgaria, and annihilating the inhabitants indiscriminately; that ten of the local chiefs have been sent "in cages" to China; that multitudes of fugitives are flying for protection to the Russian outposts; and that famine and consequent distress continued, while enormous tracts of country remain desolated by long drought. On the other side it appears that the Russian Governor of Ush, or Takht-i-Sulaiman, on the Eastern frontier of Khokand, has kindly received and succoured 2,000 of the refugees from Kashgar. According to Vambéry, Ush is a great resort of Muhammadan pilgrims, the local of pilgrimage being a hill in the city, where, "amidst the ruins of an old edifice built of large stones and ornamented by columns, the visitor is first shown, not only a throne hewn out of marble, but the place where Adam . . . tilled the ground."

WE observe it stated that in case of future outbreaks of plague in Turkish Arabia it is the intention of the Government of Bombay to establish at Bombay and other ports a system of inspecting ships arriving from places in communication with the Persian Gulf, at or near which outbreaks have occurred. The importation of rags will be prohibited, and care will be taken to keep the port towns free from unhealthy conditions. It is added that the Secretary of State entirely concurs in the principle laid down by the Bombay Government on the subject, and will support any steps that may seem necessary to secure the object in view. We do not hear of sickness now at Baghdad or Basrah, but the Arab tribes between these two places appear to be at war with each other; and when Colonel Nixon, the Political Agent, was moving up the river recently, the belligerents are said to have dodged along the bank to get the cover of his steamer, while bullets were being exchanged across the Tigris. The Arabs would naturally become lawless and independent on the occurrence of any sensible shock to Turkish rule, their little affection for which has been constantly illustrated by resistance and revolt.

In an article headed "Emigration to Mauritius and South Africa," the Madras Times furnishes some useful information on the subject of two Recruiting Agencies for procuring emigrants from India, one of which, that on behalf of the Natal Colony, has only been established for about a year. If the following extract could be made to apply to all Colonies, British or foreign, whither our Indian labourers are sent, emigration from Madras might be encouraged to a much greater extent than at present; and there would be so many less mouths to provide for in the event of a future scarcity:—

The idea has become common that emigrant coolies are subjected to constant ill-treatment, and that their condition is but a shade better than slavery. We are inclined to think that these coolies are far better off by emigration than they would be by staying in their villages. On "recruiting" they are sent, first, to the Protector, where they are examined by a competent medical officer, who pronounces them fit or unfit to proceed as labourers. They are then comfortably fed and clothed in the depots at Cassemode until the vessel which is chartered is ready to receive and convey them to their destination. There, besides rations according to a scale laid down, they receive for the first year so many rupees per mensem, for the second an increase, and so on for five years; women are paid half the wages of men, and children according to their capacity for employment. They have to work for six days in each week and for nine hours daily, Sundays and holidays excepted. The labour assigned to the emigrants is according to the ability or profession of each. While some work on the sugar, coffee, and other estates, others again find employment as carpenters, masons, bricklayers, cart-drivers, or, as we stated a day or two ago, as ostrich nurses. Each family, or single individual, is provided with a dwelling, free of rent, with a piece of ground attached to it for cultivation, besides other comforts. It does not appear, therefore, that the coolies suffer any considerable amount of discomfort by emigrating.

We have italicised a passage which appears to us to contain a proviso well worthy of attention.

SOME interesting and instructive letters have appeared, and continue to appear, in the Times of India (from the pen, we believe, of Mr. Geary), descriptive of a homeward journey from India via Basrah, or, as custom and the "Arabian Nights" have it, "Bussorah." The writer's description of Maskat will be found in our issue of the 6th inst., and we to-day transfer to our columns his experiences of the Persian Gulf. At Bushahr he parted with his travelling companion, Captain Jourdan, who took the Persian in preference to the Turkish route. The road to Shiraz was reported safe, owing to the vigilance and severe discipline of the Prince Governor. But here is what Mr. Geary says on that score:—"He walls up robbers inexorably when he catches them, and if he does not catch them, walls up somebody else to show that he does not mean to stand any nonsense. That is at all events the prevailing impression. Sometimes he crops off hands or feet. Imprisonment is a form of punishment rarely resorted to, unless the criminal has friends who are willing to pay for his keep in jail. If a villain is very rich, he is fined until he is ruined, and then bastinadoed. All this wholesome severity reassures the good and makes the wicked tremble. Robbery is at a discount, while trade improves."

"WHOLESOME" is a word of doubtful propriety when applied in the above sense; we prefer "efficacious," and are a little doubtful about that also. The severities of the Prince Governor of Shiraz are ultra severe, and the measures which he adopts for repressing crime may themselves fall into the category of crimes; but the custom of the country is such that his acts are regarded with favour, and tend to his local exaltation. Nevertheless, it is impossible to approve or hold them up for imitation, as we should do did we consider them morally and politically "wholesome." Could not his Royal Highness turn his attention to the improvement of the Bushahr-Shiraz road, which in its present state appears to be no road at all? When the traveller of whom we now speak says "every box, bale and bundle has to be carried all the way into the remote interior on the back of an ass or mule," and that carts are out of the question because "there is not a yard of road on which vehicles could run," we think he should take into account that the physical difficulties are enormous, and that very much has been done to make a practicable line of traffic of some kind over the Kothal Dukhtar, and Pirzin Passes. But the Prince, Governor might improve matters by his personal influence and energy; and if he could turn his malefactors into labourers, and make them break stones and macadamise, instead of planting them head foremost into the earth or building them up for destruction and example, he would merit the thanks of the civilised world.

Odds and Ends.

THE BURMESE ENVOY.—"I have met," writes a Galle correspondent of the Ceylon Gazette, "some of the Burmese who recently arrived here." Those that have put in an appearance are of the party of the Shway Gyeen Sayah-daw. He is a Chief Priest from Mandalay, the capital of Upper Burmah, where he is the abbot of a large Buddhist Monastery. Whatever may be the reason why some of the others have come, his object in visiting Ceylon is to worship at the sacred relics, and for this purpose he will soon be going up-country. He is a kind-hearted, benevolent man. He has great influence with the King of Burmah, and this he has always used for good—once, notably, in helping the Rev. J. E. Marks, then Missionary in Mandalay, to save the life of a Prince who for some sort of rebellion had been condemned to death. He comes commended by letters from Mr. Marks, of Rangoon; and from Mr. R. Hope Pilcher, the Officiating Secretary to the Chief Commissioner of British Burmah.

OFFICIAL MISMANAGEMENT.

The Government of the North-West has passed the following resolution upon the mismanagement of the Lucknow district by Mr. W. F. Male, Executive Engineer, 4th Grade:—

Resolution.—The report first submitted against Mr. Male showed in very strong terms his inefficiency, his utter disregard of his work, his neglect of projects, the unsatisfactory state of his accounts, and, in short, an entire neglect and mismanagement of his district.

The further report showed large and unnecessary excess over estimate for Government House, and several other excesses and irregularities in the Lucknow district. The Superintending Engineer considered such excesses to be due to mismanagement.

Mr. Male was informed of the Chief Engineer's grave dissatisfaction at this state of things, and called upon for an explanation. He gave none, but proceeded on furlough to Europe.

In a further report the Executive Engineer reiterates all that he previously said of Mr. Male's inefficiency; and the Superintending Engineer, in forwarding this report, remarked:—"This report is, to the best of my knowledge and belief, a fair and candid statement of the facts; they require no comment from me, and the Chief Engineer having called for them, they must go up to him to form his own opinion of Mr. Male's administration of the Lucknow district. I can say nothing in extenuation of Mr. Male's shortcomings, and have repeatedly warned him myself that his continued mismanagement and want of attention to his duties would inevitably result in trouble to himself."

The Lieutenant-Governor has read these papers, and in the absence of any satisfactory explanation, the conclusion has been forced upon him that Mr. Male is unfitted for the position he holds, and accordingly directs that he be reduced to an Assistant Engineer of the 1st grade, with effect from the date of this Resolution, until he can show by proper attention to his work, and by greater energy and zeal in the interests of the public service and in the administration of a district, that he is fitted for the grade of Executive Engineer.

Mr. Male's name will stand below that of Assistant Engineer, Mr. J. T. Brown, in the Classified List, as per digest, chapter III., section V., para. 25.

INDIA IN PARLIAMENT.

MONDAY'S debate in the House of Commons, for the brief report of which in our columns we are mainly indebted to the Times—but which we recommend serious politicians to study in extenso—affords a very good instance of a certain adherence to form in the English Parliament which might be improved upon by introducing less conventionality and more practical patriotism. What we mean by "conventionality" is the persistence in saying something when that something has really no effect upon the minds of the hearers or on the result of the debate; and what we mean by "practical patriotism" is the sense of a passing exigency, to meet which union is absolutely essential, and which might be evinced more notably than it is at present.

One of the main arguments of the Opposition is the instance before us, and the apt expression of which in words caused both cheers and laughter to be credited to the speaker, arose on the question of concealment of the Government plans. It had been alleged on the Ministerial side that the arrangements for the despatch of Indian troops required secrecy, but it had not been explained why. The noble leader of the Liberal critics could understand perfectly well that when we were engaged in war it might be desirable to make no disclosures of detail in reference to a proposed expedition; but then we were not at war. He was therefore inclined "to call the step taken by Government one of a series of military demonstrations;" and when the object was manifestly to procure peace, he could not see how such was to be accomplished, if the military demonstration were kept an absolute secret. Then follows the apparent truism, that "If a demonstration is to produce any effect at all the sooner and more widely it is known the better." But surely there are demonstrations and demonstrations. A meeting in Hyde Park is one thing, and a call for British Indian forces is another. Everyone knows what thousands may be obtained by sounding a popular note in the ears of a multitude never wanting in willingness to come together, and the longer that note is sounded, the greater number will be attracted by it; on the other hand, few are aware of the stuff of which our Native Army in India is composed, and, upon the whole, the world has not cared to become instructed in the matter. As things now are, the first gains strength by time, and grows in importance with expecta-tation; the second acquires power and prestige in suddenness. It is not every man, nor is it the best man, either morally or physically, who cares to talk of his latent strength. Half its use—perhaps all its merit—is in being latent.

And what a deal of retrospect has been indulged in at a time when our best Parliamentary minds and energies are needed, and should be engaged, in dealing with a present complication! Are the proceedings of legislators who argued over a political crisis, more than a century ago, really relevant to the questions of how to face the difficulty of the hour? We venture to think that the year 1775 has been made more of, in Monday's debate in both Houses, than occasion demanded, and it seems to us that, while, mainly cited by the Opposition, the result of each citation was a success scored to the Ministerial argument.

In the Upper House, Lord Selborne states that at the outbreak of the American war, in the above-named year, Parliament was informed in the King's Speech, on the opening of the Session, that his Majesty had "sent to the garrisons of Gibraltar and Port Mahon a part of his Electoral troops, in order that a larger number of the established forces of this kingdom might be applied to the maintenance of its authority" in America. This was done while Parliament was not sitting; and the proceeding, though defended on the plea of necessity, invoked clamour and objection on the part of many eminent men of the day, some of whom were for passing a vote of censure on the Government. The Lord Chancellor points out that the King certainly garrisoned Gibraltar and an adjacent island with his Hanoverian troops; but the fact that his Majesty was Elector of Hanover as well as the Sovereign of this country did not alter the circumstance that they were foreign—as much foreign as would have been the troops of France. It was in this light, as not being soldiers of the Crown, that the question arose; and in no way with regard to their transfer from one place to another. In the Lower House, the Marquis of Hartington, still harping on the same year and the same occurrence, dwells upon the fact that Lord North thought it necessary to introduce a Bill of Indemnity for his unconstitutional act; but the Colonial Secretary finds a sufficient answer to the reference in the majority which in those days approved the conduct of Ministers, when the matter was brought formally before the Houses. Sir William Harcourt, much later in the debate, reverts to the still favoured period, and in quoting his exact words, we seem to recognise in them an unintentional justification of the late movement of Indian troops, even supposing it unwarranted by rule or precedent, or contrary to legitimate practice:—"The Government relied upon the fact that in 1775 the motion against the employment of foreign troops in British territory was rejected by a large majority. But those were bad times, and there was no Government who in bad times might not command a majority in Parliament. We had now to face the novel policy of using our Indian army for general purposes." Singularly enough, India was prominently in Parliament in the midst of the discussions on the American War, as it is now. It is recorded in the annals of the period that the Minister explained a drawback of ninepence in the pound weight of tea to have been allowed "because the great quantity of teas in the warehouses of the East India Company made it necessary to do something for the benefit of the Company;" but the assertion that it was to serve them that the arrangement had been made, called forth an indignant refutation from "a gentleman of great weight in the East India Company, long celebrated for his knowledge in its affairs."

But this particular retrospect was not confined to Monday night's proceedings. Again on Tuesday it underlies the whole debate. The Attorney-General asks what in the name of wonder the incident of 1775 has to do with the question before the House, but he does not scorn to handle and examine, before he rejects it. Mr. Gladstone uses it with that power and facility of speech in which he has few if any rivals, as the means of an onslaught on the Attorney-General. Mr. Balfour keeps the ball going, and comes to the conclusion that "Lord North's Government had undoubtedly infringed the Constitution, but there had been no indemnity and no resolution." As regards Lord Bathurst and Lord Camden, whose utterances had been especially dwelt on by previous speakers, he thought "there was some reason to doubt the value of their opinions." We shall draw our remarks to a close with the few but pregnant words which explain this latter statement, wondering whether, a century hence, any retrospective criticism will apply the same qualification to speeches of our own time:—"Lord Camden was at the time violently hostile to the colonial measures of Lord North, and the violence of his politics tended somewhat to impair the accuracy of his law, while as to Lord Bathurst, his legal knowledge was not very profound."

THE INDIAN CONTINGENT.

The despatch of the Indian Contingent to Malta is an admirable measure on its own merits, to say nothing of the possibilities of war with Russia. Nothing else Government could do would be so effectual in bringing this country into real union with the rest of the Empire. With a free circulation of native troops through the veins of the Queen's dominions at large, we should have a state of things established in which the presence of European troops here would no longer be a symbol of conquest. The Queen's subjects—some born in England, some in Canada, some in India—would be visibly a homogeneous section of mankind, keeping on foot for general purposes an army drawn in proper proportion from each of its sub-sections; but none the less a solid patriotic force, each part of which would be available for employment here, there, and everywhere. We wrote, a week or so ago, of the advantage to be gained, in this way, by putting the various regiments of the Indian army on a regular roster for service abroad, just as English regiments are on a roster for service in England. May the despatch of the present contingent prove the first step towards the accomplishment of this good end. For the moment, of course, the object of the English Government has simply been to show Russia that, if war comes on, Great Britain will make full use of her vast Asiatic resources to supplement those of her central population. And if it had not been for the existing crisis through which politics are now passing, the present step would probably not have been taken. But once taken, it may be hoped that the good sense of keeping some regiments of the Indian army in constant circulation through the Mediterranean stations will force itself on the attention of the War Office. Abstract theorists might have preached for ever on the wisdom of doing this, without getting the home authorities to move out of their usual groove; but once this has been abandoned, it is possible that properly encouraged common sense may prevail. Army reformers, however, should strike while the iron is hot. With eight Indian regiments actually serving on the European side of the Isthmus of Suez there will no longer be room for contending that caste prejudice makes it impossible to move Indian troops out of their own country. Caste prejudices are curious things, and not to be foolishly disregarded; but, like nettles, they are most dangerous to a timid touch. The highly variegated force now to be sent over-sea will found a precedent for almost any further plans of that sort. And the nature of the service on which it is to be employed, the nature of the crisis which has suggested its employment, will show all native troops that orders to cross the sea do not mean exile, but, on the contrary, a closer union with the heart of the great nation of which they form a part. It is hardly possible that the troops chosen to go can fail to feel their selection an honour; their service in Europe an occasion for pride and satisfaction. When the time comes for their return, and for other regiments, perhaps, to take their place, these will be all the more ready to go, for realising in this way that they in their turn will be brought back to their own country. As we have said already, the departure of the force now setting out should mark the dawn of a new era for the Indian army—one in the course of which mistrust will die away on all sides, and suspicion of Government among Indian soldiers become as impossible as disloyalty. All this should be represented to the home public in the strongest way. The War Office authorities are tenacious of established customs, and there may be fear of their falling back on these—in spite of having been pushed for the moment out of their usual grooves—unless good counsellors at home are energetic. The public at large should not be allowed to fancy that any violent or dangerous wrench has been given to native prejudices by the step now taken. There will inevitably be some foolish talk to this effect from old-fashioned members on the subject, tempted perhaps to show off a little personal knowledge of the subject by exaggerating the difficulties of providing for Indian troops beyond the reach of their own bazaars and familiar entourage. There will be some dull opposition to the proper development of the new system from the anti-warlike, insular, domestic party, reluctant to see Great Britain taking, in any way, a more prominent position among the military powers. Now is the time—or, when the Indian contingent is actually serving in the Mediterranean, the time will be still more opportune—for combating all these obstacles. The notion that Indian troops, on account of prejudice, cannot be got to serve abroad, should not be very hard to kill when four or five thousand of them are actually at Malta, or wherever else circumstances may drift them. But the other feeling, which will oppose itself to the idea of supporting English influence in Europe by the help of hordes from Asia, will be difficult to overcome. One can easily imagine Mr. Gladstone taking up these sentiments as a theme for eloquent tirades against the Ministry. A retrogressive Tory Cabinet forsaking the paths of conciliation and moral influence to rest its policy upon brute strength, derived from the employment of semi-barbarous auxiliaries, would be a topic to fit Mr. Gladstone all round. And the more the employment of the Indian contingent is defended, simply on the ground that England wants its services, the more will factitious opposition be stimulated. The sentimentalists will argue,—so much the worse for the policy that can have rendered such help needful. The proper line for sensible writers at home to take up will be this. The employment of Indian troops in Europe is one admirable measure per se. It would have been urged long ago on the British Government, but that experts, comprehending the matter, have also comprehended that the vis inertiae of the War Office would be too great to bear down during a period of profound peace. Moreover, at such a period the native army itself might not have understood the arrangement so thoroughly as now. But once the ice has been broken, it will be the greatest pity imaginable if the splendid reform so inaugurated be allowed to drop.—Pioneer.

SNAKE POISON.

The researches of Sir Joseph Fayrer into the nature of snake-poison have lately been supplemented by Mr. Pedler, the Bengal chemist, who has been able to furnish the Royal Society with some valuable facts. The whole subject is a long one, but full of interest. The chief objects of all investigation, of course, have been to find out what snake-poison is, and how it can be counteracted. The poison itself can easily be examined; it may be kept two or three months without alteration, but after that it dries up and becomes insoluble. Dried poison looks like dried gum, and indeed consists of about 60 per cent. of albumen, and 40 per cent. only of the poisonous matter. Attempts to extract a soluble crystalline principle have failed; even after dialysis through parchment paper, the product on either side remained poisonous. Ammonia, strange to say, had no neutralising effect when mixed with the virus; indeed, the mixture injected into a living animal produced death rather more rapidly than did the poison by itself. It does not follow, of course, that the administration of ammonia as a stimulant may not be useful in cases of snake-poisoning. Besides trying ammonia, Mr. Pedler made some other experiments. Remembering the results obtained by altering the chemical constitution of strychnia, he tried similar experiments with snake-poison; and among other things he found that platinum chloride had a powerful effect, combining with cobra virus to form an insoluble substance, which had little or no active poisonous property. But the hope thus raised of a really effective antidote proved illusory; it is impossible to inject platinum chloride into the patient so as to counteract the poison of a bite inflicted previously. The injection seems only, as it were, to drive the poison before it; when both were injected simultaneously (the chloride being more deeply injected) a good effect was observed, but an interval of even two minutes renders the chloride ineffectual. The only remedy at present known for any snakebites seems to be the application of a tight ligature above the wound, the excision of the bitten part, and the cauterising of the wound as quickly as possible. Ammonia or brandy should be given internally. Sir Joseph Fayrer, while recommending that police-stations should be furnished with a supply of ammonia, whipcord for ligatures, a sharp knife, and an iron for cauterising, &c., thinks that we cannot expect the successful application of all this by ignorant peasants, and that the precautions already noticed should be supplemented by some diffusion of knowledge. Pictures of the poisonous snakes as distinguished from harmless ones should be circulated, and judicious rewards offered for the destruction of snakes. Considering that the beautiful illustrations in Sir Joseph's Thanatophidia—some of which are marvels of accuracy and delicate colouring—are nearly all of them the work of native artists, it should not be difficult to produce the necessary drawings, and they might be displayed at police-stations, tahsils, schools, &c. Sir Joseph also thinks that the destruction of dangerous snakes should be placed systematically under some central superintendence, such as controls the Thuggee and Dacoity Department; and he thinks that "in a few years the result would be as good in the case of noxious animals as it has been in that of noxious men, thugs, and dacoits."—Pioneer.

Miscellaneous.

TIGERS.—A Mussoorie correspondent writes that a Shikar party that started some time ago from the Doon for the Nepaul Terai have returned with a bag of twelve tigers, and no end of other game.

MOULMEIN.—Shipmasters will be glad to know that there is some prospect of getting good drinking-water in future at Moulmein, as a local townsman, Mr. Duncan, contemplates employing a special water-boat for the shipping.—Indian Daily News.

COFFEE AT RANGOON.—There is a thriving plantation of Mocha coffee in the Agri-Horticultural Gardens at Rangoon. Coffee, as a rule, generally succeeds best on high ground, but in this instance the contrary has been proved.

LOANS.—In the present critical position of the Eastern Question, and the possible depression of stocks, the Bank of Bengal management has added one per cent. to the margin on loans on Four and Four and-a-Half per Cent. Government paper.

EMBEZZLEMENT.—Baboo Kali Narain Raha, First Grade Sub-Deputy Inspector of Schools of the Dacca district, has been sentenced to two years' rigorous imprisonment and a fine of Rs. 200, on a charge of embezzlement of Government money and forging documents. The case was heard in appeal last Saturday week. Judgment has been reserved.

SPECIAL COMMISSION.—We (Indian Daily News) hear that the Special Ordnance Commission, under the presidency of Colonel Campbell, now sitting in Calcutta, after having adopted certain new forms of accounts for introduction into the Ordnance Department, is, at present, engaged in preparing a code of regulations for the equipment of troops in the Bengal Presidency.

TELEGRAPH CABLE.—We (Times of India) learn from Rangoon that the telegraph steamer the other day tried to raise that portion of the cable near the Spit shoal for some repairs, but found that it could not be done, owing to its having sunk deeply in the quicksand. The line had therefore to be cut close in shore, and a new piece spliced on. About £1,200 worth of the cable had thus to be abandoned.

RAILWAY COLLISION.—A collision took place on the Lucknow railway on the 18th April, at Bhagowli station, near Hardoi, between the down mixed train at 3 p.m. and a special goods train, through the neglect of the pointsman, who omitted to lock the points. The station-master and pointsman both decamped. The traffic superintendent went to the spot as well as the district superintendent of police, and a magistrate of the district. A jemadar has been sentenced to two years' rigorous imprisonment, and a warrant has been issued for the arrest of the other two. The station-master was led to believe that, as he was in charge of the station, the blame lay with him.

EURASIAN ENTERPRISE.—Among the passengers in the P. and O. s.s. Cuthay are two young Eurasian gentlemen, whose progress in England will be watched with interest by the major portion of the Eurasian community of Calcutta. They are the sons of Mr. D. Panioty, Assistant Private Secretary to the Viceroy, who has, by his quiet, unassuming manners and high abilities, won the respect and esteem of every one with whom he has come in contact. Mr. G. W. Kellner, c.s.i., who retires from the service, has kindly taken charge of the young men. It is a pleasure to see young Eurasian students going to England to fight for the much-coveted appointments in the higher branches of the service.—Calcutta Statesman, April 19.

BISHOPRIC OF LAHOR.—Arrangements for the complete separation of the new diocese of Lahor from that of Calcutta are proceeding as fast as the circumstances will permit; an intricate organisation such as that of a great diocese cannot, indeed, be severed at one blow, and there are many interests to be considered. During the time of transition the clergy may suffer some temporary inconvenience; but this is not, however, likely to be widely felt, and will be removed before long by the united action of the two Bishops. Dr. Johnson intends to visit, during the rains, some of the stations of the North-West Provinces, which have enjoyed no episcopal visitation since 1874, and he will afterwards proceed to make a tour in Central India and the Central Provinces.

THE DEPOSED RAJAH.—The Suket Rajah is now at Lahor, and had an interview the other day with the Lieutenant-Governor. The Rajah's deposition, after a very short reign, is due entirely to his own folly, and neglect of the advice given him by the British Government; the gross mismanagement of his country, and the oppression of his subjects at the hands of officials introduced from without. There is no prospect of his case being in any way re-considered, and the only question remaining is about his successor; the eldest son is neither intelligent nor educated, while he is physically weak and almost paralytic. It is doubtful upon whom the choice of Government will fall. There is no intention, so far as is known at present, of placing a European officer in the State, the Regency of which will be conducted by the old family officials.—Pioneer.

MR. HENVEY.—On the occasion of Mr. Henvey being promoted from the Nepal Residency to an appointment on special duty in Kashmere, he was received on the 23rd March by the Maharajah Dhiraj, and also on the same day by Sir Ranadip Singh, Prime Minister of Nepal. Dr. Scully, Officiating Residency Surgeon, was also present at the interview. The Maharajah Dhiraj spoke in terms of the most cordial friendship towards the British Government, and referred with pride to the services performed by his Generals in the war of the mutinies. The Prime Minister also laid stress on the friendliness of his Excellency's policy and intentions. To the above were added by both the Sovereign and his Minister expressions of personal regret at Mr. Henvey's approaching departure. On the 24th the Prime Minister also called privately at the Residency for the purpose of bidding Mr. Henvey farewell.

VITAL STATISTICS.—The number of births registered in the town of Calcutta in March rose to 611, a number exceeding all the figures of the decade—exceeding by 81 that of the previous month, and by 23 and 194 respectively that of the corresponding month of the preceding year, and the average of the decade. The death-rate of March, viz., 45.2 per 1,000 of population, was very high. From the extraordinarily high figure in December last, viz., 52.5 per 1,000, a gradual fall took place in January and February, but an increase in all the principal diseases of the zymotic class took place in the month of March. Cholera, which caused 98 deaths in the previous month, was fatal to 312 persons in this, which is one of the highest numbers of the decade. Small-pox was more prevalent than in any corresponding month. It caused no less than 287 deaths, against 33, the average of the decade. Fever, which had taken a favourable course in the last two preceding months, was again unusually severe in March. The increase in deaths registered as due to "other causes" was mainly due to infant mortality, which showed 62 deaths in excess of that of the corresponding month of the previous year. Infant mortality was extremely high among the East Indian and native population. Reckoned on estimated births, the rates per 1,000 of population are as follow:—Hindus, 361; Mahomedans, 399; mixed races, 336.8; other Asiatic races, 82.5; non-Asiatics, 59.2. The total number of deaths registered in Calcutta during the week ending the 13th April, was 351, giving a ratio per thousand per annum of 42.6, as compared with the ratio of 44.7 in the previous week. There were last week 86 deaths from small-pox, 77 from fevers, and 81 from cholera. The deaths are thus classified:—3 non-Asiatics, 8 mixed races, 255 Hindoos, 84 Mahomedans, and 1 other class.

QUETTA.—The latest report from the Governor-General's Agent in Beloochistan shows that large quantities of supplies and fodder have been pouring into the British quarters at Quetta from the neighbouring villages of the Ameer of Cabul's territory. It is publicly rumoured there that the Ameer's officials when speaking to the people and headmen of the Ameer's border villages warned them not to molest us in any way, as our presence here has his Highness's full approval, and is a strength and support to himself and a security to his trade, &c. Reports from the Bolan Pass, dating from the 14th to the 31st December last, show that 103 caravans, numbering 1,445 camels, 53 ponies, and 600 donkeys, valued at Rs. 2,41,814, passed through the Bolan Pass, Rs. 4,534 were realised on account of customs dues, and Rs. 1,248 on account of escort fees. The total value of the caravans passed through the Bolan, and the total amount realised on account of custom dues and escort fees, from the 1st January to 21st December, 1877, are as follows:—

Customs dues	...	...	...	34,945	8 0
Escort fees	...	...	...	10,579	3 0
Camels	...	...	...	8,815	0 0
Ponies	...	...	...	3,048	0 0
Donkeys	...	...	...	4,644	0 0

During the week ending 20th February, 1878, supplies of all sorts, wheat, flour, Indian corn, barley, &c., have been pouring in from Peshin and the other villages in the Ameer's territory in the neighbourhood of Quetta. This is believed at Quetta to be the strongest proof that could be adduced that the Ameer and his officials are becoming reconciled to the presence of British troops there. In consequence the following prices: wheat 13 seers per rupee, barley, 19 seers per rupee, Indian corn-flour 11 seers per rupee, have fallen to wheat 18 seers per rupee, barley 28 seers per rupee, Indian corn-flour 16 seers per rupee, and they are still falling.

THE FAMINE COMMISSION.

We cannot express our complete satisfaction with the Famine Commission, the appointment of which has so long been in abeyance. Our chief objection to it is that the great non-official world of India is unrepresented. If there is one thing more than another upon which the majority of Indian journals have been unanimous since the idea of the Commission was started, it is that the non-officials of the Empire should have at least one seat at the Board of Inquiry. This was before the non-official community was selected to bear the entire burden of famines through all years to come. Now that the burden has been laid upon them, to deny them a seat in the Famine Commission is to add insult to injury. We hope a strong demonstration of the feeling that must assuredly exist will take place. There is the more occasion for annoyance because Mr. Justice Cunningham has been appointed. We question if there is one man in Southern India who will believe that merit had anything whatever to do with that appointment, and those who remember that, whilst in Madras, the greatest of his many failings was an absolute shirking the dry, hard drudgery of Committee work, will see in his nomination occasion for grave dissatisfaction with the commission and the object for which it has been formed. Mr. Cunningham's action in London with regard to the Mansion-House Committee was in keeping with his Madras career. There are three names, however, which will command confidence. We allude to Mr. Caird—though the special work he is expected to do will, we greatly fear, be perfunctory; Mr. Ballard and Mr. Elliott, the Secretary. These are appointments which redeem the Commission from mediocrity. We are inclined to look with some satisfaction on Mr. Ballard's nomination, as in January last, when considering who, among officials in the Madras Presidency, would be best fitted for a seat on the Commission, we could find no name to put in rivalry with Mr. Ballard's. So far as he is concerned we are more than satisfied with the Commission. Our chief objection to the body, as a whole, is the slight on the non-official community which is involved in its composition. To have to meet the whole cost of Famines and not to be allowed a single representative upon a body which is to endeavour to make such seasons of disaster impossible is treatment which even the long-enduring non-official community of India did not deserve at the hands of the Government. An administration which acts with blindness or prejudice has always occasion to regret such acts as that just displayed in the composition of the Commission.—Madras Times.

Miscellaneous.

THE VOLUNTEER MOVEMENT.—The Volunteer fever is spreading far and wide. The good people of Calicut have taken the matter up, and it is said that a representation will be made to Government for the formation of a company of Volunteers, consisting of seventy or eighty men. Nothing further has been heard of the Volunteer movement set on foot at Utakamand.—Madras Athenæum.

DEATH RESULTING FROM THE BITE OF A SHARK.—On the evening of the 28th April, while a marine boat was receiving cargo from the City of Cambridge, a boatman named Ponon, observing a loaf of bread floating in the water, made to it, and on his return was attacked by a shark, which bit him on his thigh. He died immediately after he was rescued, and was brought to shore and laid on the beach opposite Lippert's Hotel with the police in charge over his body.—Madras Athenæum.

PRODUCTS AT THE PARIS EXHIBITION.—French as well as British India is represented at the Paris Exhibition. A central committee was some time ago appointed at Pondicherry, with sub-committees at Karikal, Yanaon, Chandernagore, and Mahe. The natural history collections, drugs, barks, spices, fibres, and specimens of cotton, the botanical specimens, models, painted models of fruits, &c., were selected in Pondicherry. The specimens from the other settlements are not of importance, and include Trichinopoly and Karikal cigars, arrack, and arrowroot, cocoa, and samples of agricultural implements. Oils of very fair quality are manufactured in and about Pondicherry, and the committee have not excluded them from the contributions. Some time ago hornware and cotton cloths were to be had in the settlement in large quantities. With the large supply of imported goods available at very cheap rates, the manufactured cottons of Pondicherry and the adjacent districts have been driven out of the market.

A VICIOUS ELEPHANT.—During the Suphasthanam festival at Tanjore three of the palace elephants formed a part of the procession. One of them in a fit of sudden excitement became unmanageable, and disposed to attack the others. The mahout, alarmed for his own safety, managed to escape, when the huge beast rushed through the crowd towards his stable. The alarm and hurried attempt to clear away resulted in accidents to some of the crowd. One poor native, after running for a short distance before the animal, took shelter behind a pile of dhall stalks which lay heaped in a corner of the road; something in the man's demeanour or dress appears to have attracted the beast's ire. It rushed up to the pile, scattered the stalks right and left, seized the poor fellow in its trunk, and after beating him about and crushing him under its foot, it left him almost lifeless. The man was conveyed to the hospital in a hopeless condition, and expired shortly after.

THE LATE MR. J. JONES.—We have to announce the death in Madras of Mr. John Jones, head partner of Messrs. Parry and Co., Vice-Chairman of the Chamber of Commerce, Director of the Bank of Madras, &c. He had been ill two and a-half months, but only recently did symptoms of hepatitis appear, and as his condition improved sufficiently three weeks ago to allow him to go to Ennore for change of air, it was hoped that he would be able to leave for England by the next P. and O. steamer, in which his passage had been secured. He came out to Madras some twenty years ago, and eventually joined Messrs. Parry's firm. His conscientious and straightforward way of doing business, and his good nature and wide experience, secured for him a deservedly high reputation in the local mercantile community, as well as among the planters of the Wynaad, who often saw him in their midst. He had, on two or three occasions, suffered from jungle fever, contracted while travelling in the Wynaad, but otherwise he enjoyed excellent health, and his love of equestrian exercise, and his active abstemious habits, seemed to render it peculiarly unlikely that he would fall a victim to "liver." He was but forty-four years of age.—Madras Mail.

THREATENING TO TAKE AWAY THE LIVES OF POLICE OFFICERS.—Before Mr. Campbell, at the Presidency Magistrate's Court, Black Town, on the 26th April, one Nanjoondappah was charged with criminal intimidation by threatening to take away the lives of Mr. W. Titness, Inspector, and Seevajee Row, Sub-Inspector of Police. It would appear that the prisoner on the morning of the 15th inst. went to the Central Station at Black Town with a sharp pointed spear and threatened to take the lives of Inspector Titness and Sub-

Inspector Seevjee Row. The evidence showed that so far back as 1872 the prisoner had preferred a complaint against another man, and because the police had seen no grounds to interfere the prisoner considered they had not acted properly. On being arrested the prisoner was very violent and used most ill language towards Inspector Titness and Sub-Inspector Seevjee Row. His Worship convicted the prisoner and sentenced him to rigorous imprisonment for six months, at the end of which period he is to find sureties to keep the peace, failing which he is to undergo six months further rigorous imprisonment.

THE SURVEY OF MADRAS ROADSTEAD.—The survey of the Madras Roadstead was an elaborate examination by Lieutenant F. W. Jarrad, R.N., of the Indian Marine service, projected on a base line measured by the Harbour Works Engineers, and plotted on a scale of 200 feet to an inch, extending one mile and a-quarter north and south of the screw pile pier, and carried seaward to a depth of ten fathoms. The soundings have been sectionally taken in lines 250 feet apart, and can be used for engineering purposes. Great difficulties appear to have been experienced by Lieutenant Jarrad in the erection and maintenance of a tide-gauge, which were, however, eventually overcome, and tidal observations were recorded every fifteen minutes, day and night, during the whole time the survey was in progress. The coast to a distance of about two miles to the north and south of Lieutenant Jarrad's survey was conducted by Lieutenant Hammond, R.N., who also appears to have had his trials in regard to the tide-gauge, and in addition to difficulties with his steam cutter, the report says:—"The steam cutter caused considerable anxiety, as the tubes being old were continually bursting, and none were obtainable at Madras." Eventually this decayed boat was given up, and the remainder of the sounding was executed in an open pulling boat.

Bombay.

SIR RICHARD TEMPLE has accepted the position of Patron of the Bombay Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society. His Excellency has been a (non-resident) Member of the Society since 1866.

QUININE.—It is stated that all the quinine in the market is being bought up by the Bombay Government, who are giving Rs. 112 per pound for it, and that the allowances of quinine to hospitals are being cut down.

SURAT.—In consequence of the riotous conduct of the inhabitants of the town of Surat, Government has deemed it expedient to quarter policemen therein in addition to the police force of the district. The increase is as follows:—Fifty armed police, fifty unarmed police, ten mounted police.

GOA.—We learn that the delay in carrying out the proposed sanitary measures for the improvement of Pangim (the city of Goa) is already producing its effects. Typhoid fever has broken out with violence, and we have to record the death last week of two of the principal Government officials—the Chief Justice and the Chief Secretary to Government.

RUBATTINO STEAMERS.—Chevalier Charles Grondona, the Italian Consul and Agent, Rubattino Steam Navigation Company, leaves

Bombay for Italy on four months' leave, per Italian mail steamer Arabia, on the 1st May. During his temporary absence the office of Italian Consulate will be in charge of Signor Francisco Muraglia. This latter gentleman, assisted by Signor Grondona's First Assistant, Mr. Darashaw Sorabjee, have been nominated joint Acting Agents of Rubattino S. N. Company.

THE VOLUNTEERS.—A contemporary has called attention, unwisely, we think, to the zealous efforts Dr. Weir is making to persuade a number of Bombay volunteers to offer themselves for foreign service. Dr. Weir's zeal is praiseworthy; but, whatever may be the case in England, it is certain that as regards India English volunteers are wanted in the country, and that the members of the Bombay Volunteer Rifles can do much better service by remaining here than by going abroad.

STATEMENT OF SILVER BALANCE IN THE MINT.—The value of silver in the Mint on the morning of April 22 was Rs. 2,03,51,810, add silver received during the week Rs. 18,71,438. The sum of Rs. 12,00,000 in new coin was paid during the week; the balance left was Rs. 2,10,23,248. There is in addition bullion valued at Rs. 19,95,427 belonging to private individuals deposited in the Mint vaults and awaiting assay.

MAHABLESHWUR.—There is quite a sensation here, owing to the fact that officers who were on leave have been ordered to rejoin without delay their regiments ordered for foreign service. Several officers belonging to the Staff have already left the station, and all are following as fast as they can hasten their departure. The phae-ton-wallahs are having a brisk time of it. Everyone is thinking of the war, and many Indian officers will have to go and leave their families behind.—Deccan Herald, April 18.

ACCIDENT.—On the 24th April the Callian local train, which leaves Bombay for Callian at seven o'clock, met with an accident between Bhandoop and Tanna. It seems that a number of new carriages were attached to the train, in addition to those occupied by the passengers, with the view of testing their efficiency. About four miles beyond Bhandoop it is believed that one of the carriages ran off the line, and half-a-dozen more were smashed. None of the passengers sustained any injury beyond a good shaking.

QUETTA.—A detachment of the 2nd Punjab Cavalry, under Major Campbell arrived lately at Quetta, relieving the 4th Punjab Cavalry, which left a few days after, under Captain Money, for Derah Ismail Khan. Two officers of the Sappers, Lieutenants Hill and Blunt, arrived on April 11. A party of twelve sepoy sappers (all Pathans) and a European corporal left on the 12th for the construction of the telegraph line to Khelat, which, it is expected, will be completed about the end of April. Mr. Pitman, the Telegraph Superintendent, left on the 13th. The line runs via Mustang, about ninety miles, and there are no serious difficulties to overcome in construction.

TRANSPORTS.—Khan Bahadoor M. C. Marzban, Acting Executive Engineer, has been appointed on special duty in the fitting up of the transports and other preparations which are being made. The Government have also availed themselves of the services of Mr. Hejeebhoy Merwanjee Wadia for aiding the fitting up of the transport ships and steamers engaged for the expedition. This gentleman served the local Government as Assistant Master Builder in H.M.'s Dockyard for nearly thirty-two years, and upon the abolition of the Indian Navy in 1863 retired on a pension. By the request of the late Captain Young, the then Superintendent of Marine, Bombay, he assisted in the preparation of the Abyssinian expedition.—Times of India.

TROOPS AT MHOW.—The news published in the Bombay Gazette of the 17th inst., of Native troops being ordered to Malta, became known at Mhow, in the lines of the 23rd Regiment Native Light Infantry, at a late hour on the evening of the 18th. The next morning at an early hour, almost immediately after "roll-call," the native officers waited on the commanding officer, Colonel Bates, to express on behalf of the Regiment their keen desire to proceed on active service. Directly it was known that the native officers had gone to the Colonel, the men collected in crowds round the Colonel's bungalow, and on the Colonel coming out with the native officers, a scene of the wildest enthusiasm took place, the men with loud cheers confirming the representations that had been made by their native officers.

MORTUARY RETURNS.—The total number of deaths registered during the week ending Tuesday, 30th April, was 548, being 49 more than in the preceding week, 341 less than the total of the week ending 1st May, 1877, and 63 more than the mean of the corresponding period in the preceding five years. During the week 248 births were reported in the different districts of the city. The rate of mortality per 1,000 of the population was 42.92. There were 196 deaths from remittent fever, which are 7 more than the previous week and 157 less than the same period last year. There were 41 deaths from cholera last week as compared with 22 deaths during the previous week. The deaths from diseases of the respiratory system, diarrhoea, and dysentery were last week 46, 15, and 23, respectively, as compared with 81, 43, and 40 last year.

23rd April, and H.E. the Governor of Bombay delivered a short speech, in which he said it was most satisfactory to find that very many Parsee girls of the middle class, instead of aspiring to learn English, were content with the vernacular of their native land. He assured the Parsees present that among the promising circumstances of their social and political position there was no circumstance more hopeful, more pregnant with future blessings to them all than the interest which they took in female education. If they persevered in the course which they were now pursuing in that respect they would benefit not only themselves, but their fellow-countrymen and fellow subjects of all classes in Western India; and it might be hoped that the good example which they were getting might, with the blessing of Providence, extend to their Mahomedan and Hindu brethren.

DEATH OF THE MALDIVE AMBASSADOR.—Ali Deedee, Ambassador from the King of the Maldives, died at his residence at Dangedere, of fever. He had purchased a good deal of property in the neighbourhood of Galle, and was commonly supposed to be wealthy. He also carried on a large trade in rice and produce from the Maldives, and had recently begun extensive improvements to his property at Dangedere.

OFFICIAL APPOINTMENTS.—His Excellency the Governor has been pleased to appoint F. R. Ellis, Esq., to be Acting Commissioner of Requests, Police Magistrate, and Coroner for the Districts of Kandy and Upper and Lower Dumbare, with effect from the 24th April; G. W. Templar, Esq., to be Acting Police Magistrate of Matara and Coroner for the district of Matara; H. J. Deslandes, Esq., to be a member of the Municipal Council of Galle, vice W. G. Hall, Esq.; and F. Mortimer, Esq., to be Acting Assistant Collector and Land-Surveyor, Customs, Jaffna.—Gazette.

NEW WAY OF WORKING COFFEE ESTATES.—Mr. Montclair, of Trevandrum, has, it is said, patented a new method of working coffee estates, whereby the many evils now attendant on the coffee berries while in blossom will also be done away with, and it is said that a company is shortly to be formed to carry out this project, which, it is expected, will revolutionise the present method of working the estates. How far Mr. Montclair's patented method will work remains to be seen, but if the plan should succeed, it will, indeed, be a boon to the "Model State."

COFFEE.—According to the Ceylon Times of the 25th April, advices from the coffee districts continue very favourable as regards the prospects for the ensuing season. The weather remains very fine, and as more wood on the trees becomes mature, a further blossom puts in an appearance which, although somewhat struggling and unequal, will, it is believed, help the out-turn of the coming crop. From some districts the probability of a May blossom is reported; and from Ouvah a very abundant spring blossom is talked of, as leaf disease has apparently disappeared. The Times, however, thinks it too early to venture on any estimates of the new crop, as a good deal must depend on how these late blossoms set, and there is as yet some uncertainty about the setting of the last. But, in any case, it considers prospects undoubtedly good.

PROPOSED COMMISSION.—So great is the loss annually experienced by planters through coffee diseases that it is not surprising that it is proposed that an application should be formally made to the Government for a Commission to inquire into the whole subject. The movement has been initiated by the Dimbula Association, at the last meeting of which it was stated that since the leaf disease first appeared to a serious extent, in 1871, the exports showed a decrease of 1·65 per cent. on the whole shipment from the island, representing a loss to the coffee cultivators of £1,400,000, and a proportionate loss to the general revenue. Besides leaf disease, it is suggested that the Commission, if appointed, should also inquire into the grub, bug, and fungus pests. The matter, of course, will have to be discussed by the central authority at Kandy before any decisive step is taken; but it is tolerably clear that planters will almost unanimously agree with the proposal of the Dimbula district.—Ceylon Times.

Official Papers.

THE INDIAN CONTINGENT.

The following notification was issued at Simla on April 21, 1878:—
No. 347 of April 17, 1878.—Under instructions from her Majesty's Government, the Right Hon. the Governor-General in Council has been pleased to direct that a force as follows be prepared and despatched for service beyond sea:—2 Field Batteries Royal Artillery; 1 Regiment Bengal Cavalry; 1 Regiment of Bombay Cavalry; 2 Companies Madras Sappers and Miners; 2 Companies Bombay Sappers and Miners; 3 Regiments Bengal N.I.; 1 Regiment Madras N.I.; and 2 Regiments Bombay N.I., and to lay down the following rules for the pay, equipment, &c.:—
2. In order to complete regiments to the full established strength, volunteers may be called for from other regiments from the classes wanted to complete. None but men of good character, and who are reported in every respect fit for field service, will be permitted to volunteer. Regiments giving volunteers will be allowed to recruit up to the full establishment. On the termination of the expedition the volunteers will be permitted to rejoin their old regiments as vacancies occur.

3. Commanding officers will be held responsible that none but men and followers in every way fit for field service accompany the regiment; all sickly men are to be left at the depot.

4. Regiments of native infantry will draw extra batta; and free rations or ration-money, at the rate of Rs. 3-8 per mensem, will be allowed to all non-commissioned officers and men of cavalry and infantry while on foreign service. Native commissioned officers will also have the privilege of receiving the ordinary ration from the Commissariat Department on payment, the amount being deducted monthly from their pay at the above rate.

5. Public followers, except those engaged on salaries specifically determined for the service, will receive an addition of 50 per cent. on pay and batta, in addition to free rations, while on foreign service.

6. The sanctioned followers paid by troops will receive from Government free rations, and such extra pay as may be necessary to put them on a par with the public followers of a similar class.

7. All the arrangements special to this foreign service will have effect from the date of embarkation, and continue in force until the date of return.

8. As during a sea-voyage the officers, non-commissioned officers and sowars of the cavalry would be unable to make the requisite provision for the forage of their horses, whilst difficulty might possibly be experienced in this respect during a portion of their service on land, His Excellency the Governor-General in Council has determined that the forage of the horses and of the mules or ponies accompanying shall be undertaken by the State, with such assistance as the regiments and followers may be enabled to render after landing.

9. This measure, however, in no way relieves all grades from responsibility for the due care and condition of their horses and cattle.

10. All ranks will be required, as at present, to maintain one efficient horse, but the native commissioned officers will be allowed forage for two horses each, if they desire to take a second charger.

11. Each native commissioned officer will be required to keep up one pony and one attendant as syce and grass-cutter, whether he takes one or two horses; and the non-commissioned officers and privates to maintain one pony and one grass-cutter in charge of the same for every two horses.

12. The attendants will be paid by the troops as usual; but the ponies will receive grain, and, when necessary, hay, free of cost; both grass-cutters and animals will be required to procure forage when obtainable, and must be held disposable for all purposes.

13. On board ship the forage and water will be issued under the usual regulations, ponies receiving a half-ration of forage, and two-thirds of a horse's supply of water, or as may be specially ordered.

14. On land the forage allowance for each horse will be 8lbs. of such grain as may be procurable, with 20 lbs. of hay, when green forage is not procurable, or otherwise as may be ordered. The allowance for ponies will be one-half of the forage ration of a horse.

15. Grass-cutters will be rationed on the scale sanctioned for native followers, or receive the equivalent at the rate of Rs. 2-8 each per mensem, in addition to the amount paid to them by the regiment.

16. The native commissioned and non-commissioned officers will continue to subscribe to their regimental funds to such extent as commanding officers may deem necessary within the limits prescribed by regulations.

17. They will continue to supply themselves with their horses and their ordinary clothing, equipment, saddler, and stable-gear; but any article of extra clothing necessitated by any speciality of climate or service will be issued free of cost.

18. All casualties of horses, arising from neglect or from causes evidently unconnected with the particular nature of the service, must, as usual, be replaced by the regiments concerned. Such troop will be allowed to embark and maintain two Chunda horses, to meet casualties, which will be rationed free of cost.

19. All casualties fairly attributable to, or connected with, the service, including those from accident on board ship or during embarkation or disembarkation, will, if there has been no proved neglect, be replaced by Government, or compensation will be allowed, according to the age and value of the horse so injured or destroyed, within the regulation limit of $200.

20. Compensation will also be allowed for casualties among ponies directly resulting from the service, at the rates laid down in G. G. O. No. 953 of 1876, or the animals will be replaced by Government.

21. Compensation at the rate of Rs. 5 per mensem will be allowed to the native officer for each bargheer sanctioned by existing regulations, if maintained by them; out of which sum they will pay the share of the grass-cutter's wages, and provide stable gear. A similar amount will be deducted from the pay of the bargheer sowars.

22. Officers commanding regiments and detachments detailed for service are directed to at once draw and distribute three months' pay in advance to their respective corps.

23. Commanding officers will be held responsible that all orders and circulars connected with family remittances, and arrangements for the comfort of the men and families, are made known to, and are in possession of, officers appointed to the charge of depots; and that provision is made for the care of spare arms, accoutrements, books, heavy baggage, &c., which may be left behind.

24. Depots for regiments will be formed under the orders of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief in India, and of the Governments of Madras and Bombay respectively.

25. A British officer will be detailed for the charge of each of these depots, and will receive the allowances detailed in para. 332, Pay Code for India, Vol. I. A pay havildar on a staff salary of Rs. 5 per mensem will be allowed to each depot. Two puccally bhisties will also be allowed for supplying water to the families of each depot.

26. Regiments will take with them their camp-equipage complete.

27. Officers' tents will be limited in size to that of a lascars' pal, and officers not possessing tents of this description may be supplied from the nearest magazine on payment.

Regiments will take with them their service ammunition—cavalry, 100 rounds per man; infantry, 200 rounds.

The remainder of the notification consists of details concerning soldiers' kits; camp followers; officers' baggage and servants; entrenching tools for infantry, cavalry, artillery, &c., stores, &c.

The details of battery equipment, including hospital establishment, will be arranged for at Bombay.

Miscellaneous.

BILLS ON INDIA.—Tenders were received at the Bank of England for £400,000 in bills on India. The amounts allotted were—to Calcutta, £339,400; to Bombay, £58,800; and to Madras, £1,800. Tenders on all Presidencies at 1s. 8½d. will receive about 90 per cent., above in full. The minimum is the same as on the two last occasions, but as a much larger proportion was allotted on Wednesday at 1s. 8½d. the Indian Government has practically had to submit to lower terms. The tenders next week will be for the same amount, 40,00,000 rupees.

DEATH OF SIR JAMES INNES.—The death is announced of Sir James Milne Innes, eleventh baronet, of Edengight and Balveny, county Banff, at the advanced age of seventy years. He was for many years in the Civil Service of the East India Company, succeeding to the family honours and estates in 1838, on the death of his elder brother, Sir John Innes. Sir James was a magistrate and deputy lieutenant for Banffshire. This title dates from 1628, and was originally conferred by Charles I. on Robert Innes, fifth Baron of Innermarkie and first of Balveny; it is a "Nova Scotia baronetcy," and was granted with remainder to "all heirs male whatsoever."

CHINA FAMINE.—Sir Rutherford Alcock, the Chairman of the London Committee of the China Famine Relief Fund, writes to the Times on the 20th instant, notifying the receipt of a telegram from Shanghai by which it appears that rain has fallen in several provinces, and the prospects of a harvest encouraging. He adds :—"From this it will be seen that at last there is some prospect of a termination to the gigantic calamity which has already carried off several millions of people in China. But, although rain has fallen, it is, of course, vain to hope that any harvest can be gathered in for the next three months, and in the meantime the need of contributions, in order to enable us to carry on to a satisfactory conclusion the work which has been already commenced, is as great as ever."

THE INDIAN FAMINE RELIEF FUND.—The Mansion House Indian Famine Relief Fund was finally closed on the 20th inst. The balance-sheet which was presented to the committee showed that the amount of public subscriptions received between the 15th of August and the 15th of May last was £515,200. 8s. 7d. The sum transmitted to Madras was £506,063. 10s. 11d., and the expenses of collection amounted to £9,136, of which £7,757 was spent in advertising appeals and subscription lists. Sir Thomas White, the chairman, expressed his cordial thanks to the members of the committee for their assistance in collecting so gigantic a fund, and attributed much of the success of the appeal to the public confidence in the committee. A telegram announcing the closing of the fund was despatched to the Duke of Buckingham at Madras.

THE INDIAN TROOPS.—Whatever may be the final destination of the Indian troops, it is to be hoped that the greatest care will be taken to keep them in good health. Indian troops in ordinary times have a far smaller percentage of their force in hospital than Europeans. There is little drunkenness or immorality among them. But, on the other hand, they are extremely sensitive to change of climate and food, and nothing frightens them so much as the appearance of an epidemic in their ranks. The effect produced upon the rest of the native army in India would probably be less if one half of the force now ordered on foreign service were to fall in battle than if a tenth were to succumb to cholera or typhus. At the present time, when typhus of a peculiarly malignant type is stated to prevail in the Russian camps in Europe and in Asia, and hints are whispered about that even the plague has shown itself here and there, care becomes more than ever necessary. There could be no greater misfortune than that the high spirit which has been shown by our native army at this juncture should be damped on any future occasion by the remembrance of serious sickness in the camp or in the field.—Pall Mall Gazette.

ROYAL ASIATIC SOCIETY.—The anniversary meeting of this society was held on the 20th inst., Sir Edward Colebrooke, Bart., M.P., in the chair. Viscount Cranbrook, Lieutenant General A. Fytche, and K. Syumatsu, Esq., were elected Resident Members. The following members were elected as the Officers and Council for 1878-9 :—President and Director: Major-General Sir H. C. Rawlinson, K.C.B., F.R.S. Vice-Presidents: Sir Edward Colebrooke, Bart., M.P.; James Fergusson, Esq., F.R.S.; Brian H. Hodgson, Esq., F.R.S.; Colonel Yule, C.B. Council: Sir E. Clive Bayley, K.C.S.I.; E. L. Brandreth, Esq.; Oliver Codrington, Esq., M.D.; Rev. John Davies, M.A.; M. S. Edgeworth, Esq.; Sir Barron Ellis, K.C.S.I.; Sir Douglas Forsyth, K.C.S.I.; J. F. Fleet, Esq.; Major-General Sir Frederic J. Goldsmid, K.C.S.I.; Arthur Grote, Esq.; W. W. Hunter, Esq.; Colonel Nassau Lees, LL.D.; Sir W. Muir, K.C.S.I.; Colonel Sir Lewis Pelly, K.C.S.I.; the Lord Stanley of Alderley. Treasurer: Edward Thomas, Esq., F.R.S. Secretary: W. S. W. Vaux, M.A., F.R.S. Honorary Secretary: Thos. Chenery, M.A. Honorary Librarian: R. N. Cust, Esq. The report of the Council stated that forty-one new members had been elected during the year 1877-8.

India in Parliament.

INDIAN TROOPS.

HOUSE OF LORDS, MONDAY, May 20.—Lord SELBORNE, in accordance with notice given,* directed attention to the movement of Indian troops to Malta, stating that it was not his intention to call in question the policy of Government on the present occasion. He complained that Parliament had not been informed, nor had its consent been obtained on the subject; though both the written law, and known practice, and usage, were against the procedure adopted. In reference to the number of troops to be kept up, Great Britain and Ireland comprehended all the dependencies and possessions of the kingdom, the army being the Imperial standing army of the realm for the defence of all the possessions of the country and for the preservation of the balance of power. He argued from the words of the Mutiny Act that it was against the law to exceed the number of men voted for the year except by those who were actually serving in India, and in the present instance Parliament had not been allowed an opportunity of exercising its judgment on the matter. It was the very essence of the Constitution that no Ministry should rely merely on its majority, when there were checks provided which would give Parliament an opportunity of forming an unbiassed judgment on the measure proposed to be adopted, and he justified himself for not concluding with any motion.—The LORD CHANCELLOR said that every Government was on occasions of emergency obliged to act on its judgment, but it was the intention of the present Government to lay before the House of Commons at the earliest moment an account of the expenditure necessary for the maintenance of the Indian troops in consequence of their movement to Malta. If the Government believed that by what they had done they had strained or violated the Constitution, they would as soon as possible apply to Parliament for an indemnity; but he maintained that they had committed no act requiring them to take that step, and contended that the prerogative of the Crown with regard to the movement of troops was not limited in the cases referred to, adding that there existed no statute law to prevent the movement of the Indian troops to Malta.—LORD CARDWELL considered that the Government were bound at as early a period as possible to bring their policy in the matter before the consideration of Parliament. They admitted that they could not employ troops without the previous sanction of Parliament, if it were possible to obtain it, and that whenever they were compelled to employ them without the previous sanction of Parliament the solemn obligation lay on them to obtain that sanction at as early a moment as possible. After such an acknowledgment he must say the object of his noble and learned friend in initiating this discussion had been obtained.—After some remarks from Lord NAPIER and ETRICK, the Duke of Rutland and Lord DENMAN—LORD GRANVILLE observed that he never knew an instance in which Parliament had been more cavalierly treated than in the present case. With regard to the subject of discussion, he stated that he could not conceive why the Government did not come to Parliament and inform it of their intentions.—LORD BEACONSFIELD did not think it would be to the public advantage that a statement of the movement of the Indian troops should have been prematurely made. He believed that the Government had a perfect right to advise the Queen to exercise her undoubted prerogative in this matter, for there was no allusion in the Mutiny Act to the Native Indian Army. If Lord Selborne believed that the Government had violated the Constitution he ought to come forward and assert his opinion by bringing the matter to a clear and distinct issue. Throughout the whole of the business the Government had been animated by one feeling—namely, to secure the blessings of peace, to maintain the just position of this country and the freedom of Europe, but it would be perfectly impossible to meet discussions like the present at this moment without entering into details which would prejudice those great objects.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, May 20.—The Marquis of HARTINGTON moved his Resolution declaring that by the Constitution of the realm no forces may be raised or kept by the Crown in time of peace without the consent of Parliament within any part of the dominions of the Crown, excepting only such forces as may be actually serving within her Majesty's Indian possessions. He had purposely narrowed the issue to be voted on, partly because he did not wish at present to provoke a discussion on the general policy of the Government after the Ministerial declaration that it would be injurious while delicate negotiations were going on, and partly because he thought the question raised sufficiently important to be discussed on its own merits. The claim set up by the Government was that troops raised in India and not voted by Parliament could be transferred by the prerogative of the Crown from India and used in the other dominions of the Crown. That was the claim which the Opposition denied, asserting, on the other hand, that it was in India only that forces could be raised and maintained without the authority of annual votes by Parliament, and that when the Indian forces were transferred to any other part of her Majesty's dominions they became subject to the conditions regulating the other forces of the Crown. On the financial aspects of the question Lord Hartington contended that the conduct of the Government had broken the rules devised for the protection both of the British and Indian Exchequers; and, examining the various excuses which had been offered for concealing the step from Parliament, he showed that they were quite insufficient, and could have had no other object but to assert a prerogative. He had no desire to restrict the movement, but the House had a right to be informed of it.—Sir M. HICKS-BEACH moved an amendment declaring that, as the control of Parliament over the military forces of the Crown is sufficiently secured by law and the power of refusing supplies, it is inexpedient to pass a resolution weakening the hands of the Government in the present state of foreign affairs. The Conservative party, he said, could never object to any jealousy being shown on behalf of the Constitution, and he regarded it as a good augury for the future that this jealousy was shown by one who was a member of the Government which advised the Royal Warrant on Purchase. The Government maintained that in this matter they had acted for the best interests of the country without violating the Law or the Constitution. Lord Hartington's arguments as to the position of the Indian Army would go to prevent the Crown making any use of it outside India. On the contrary, the Indian Army was as much the Queen's army as any part of the forces, and there was nothing in any of the Acts of Parliament and nothing in Constitutional usage to prevent the Crown moving its Indian troops to any part of the Empire, except to the United Kingdom. The Indian Army was raised with the sanction of Parliament, and the Act of 1858 contemplated its employment outside India in cases of emergency without the special sanction of Parliament. In order to insure the successful carrying out of the measure, it was necessary that the sanction which had been given to it by the Government should be kept secret. The Government had taken this step because they believed that a sufficient emergency existed, and because they knew that, in spite of the persistent efforts to mislead foreign nations as to the feeling of the country, to minimise our strength and to depreciate the valour and loyalty of our forces, it would receive the approbation of the country; and he appealed to the House to support the Government.

Sir C. DILKE denied that there was any wish on that side of the House to limit the right of the Crown to employ these Indian troops. All that was contended was that Parliament should sanction it.—Mr. GOLDNEY, Mr. M'IVER, and Mr. RITCHIE defended the policy of the Government, while Mr. DILLWYN and Mr. OSBORNE MORGAN supported the resolution.—Mr. LAING, arguing the question from an Indian point of view, insisted that this policy was a reversal of all the principles and conditions on which the Indian army had been reorganised after the Mutiny and would be attended with dangerous consequences.—Mr. CHAPLIN admitted the duty of the Opposition to raise the question, but objected to the resolution because it seriously infringed the just prerogative of the Crown. If carried it would prevent the Crown making use of the Indian army, however great the emergency.—Sir WILLIAM HARCOURT did not charge the Government with any sinister design of violating the Constitution, but simply with ignorance of Constitutional and Parliamentary practice. The law protecting the finances of India had been violated, and the Chancellor of the Exchequer had deliberately repeated the offence for which he apologised so humbly at the time of the Abyssinian Expedition. Personally he was ready to place the whole forces of the Empire at the service of the Government to assert the right of Great Britain and Europe to have a voice in the settlement of the Eastern Question. But they would find the cordial co-operation of the House of Commons as valuable an assistance as an Indian contingent.—Mr. E. STANHOPE, who concluded the debate for the evening, remarked that if any excuse were desired by the Government for its reticence it would have been furnished by the proceedings of the last fortnight, and if they had made a communication to Parliament it was evident that they would have been overwhelmed with interrogatories and technical objections. The passing of such a resolution, he showed, would gravely hamper the Government and impair the strength of the country in dealing with emergencies; and the Bill of Rights, he contended, had never been intended to apply to any such danger as was now apprehended. The financial control of Parliament was sufficiently secured, for Parliament could even now send these troops back by refusing the vote which would be submitted; but to insist on the too strict application to technical rules was unwise and inexpedient.—The debate was adjourned on the motion of Mr. FAWCETT.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, May 21.—INDIAN TROOPS (Adjourned Debate).—Mr. FAWCETT desired to discuss the subject in its broad political aspect, and he thought he should be able to show that by what the Government had done a grave political issue was raised upon which the English people generally were competent to express an opinion. He denied that any case had been made out to justify the procedure adopted. He believed the act criticised was illegal. Even were it otherwise, it would raise a grave question on which he would await the decision of the country. He and his friends would not let the matter drop.—The ATTORNEY-GENERAL had no doubt that on a proper occasion the Government would be quite willing to enter into the question as to whether they had pursued the proper course or not, as also that of expenditure. He had now to consider the proposition contained in the motion before the House. After a long and able argument in defence of the Government policy, dealing with the scope of the Bill of Rights and Mutiny Act, the learned gentleman concluded his address by calling attention to the present state of European politics, and the necessity which devolved upon this country to take a firm and determined attitude, such as that assumed.—Mr. GLADSTONE charged the Government with acting unconstitutionally and illegally, showing cause for each accusation. The Government had also, he contended, violated the Indian Government Act, which limited the power of the Crown to move the Indian troops outside the frontiers. There had been no need of secrecy, and the action taken independently of Parliament was a sacrifice of our traditional liberties. Here are the concluding words of the reported speech:—If these things are to be done, they should be done in open day, and the majority in favour of these proceedings will be a historical fact of cardinal importance. It is our duty to run the risk of that vote; it will be a great evil, a national calamity; but there is one evil greater, one calamity deeper still, and that is that a day should come when the minority of the House should shrink from its duty and cease to use every effort to bring to the knowledge of the people the circumstances in which its liberties are being dealt with by its representatives.—Mr. BALFOUR did not acknowledge any danger to the Constitution in bringing the Indian troops to Malta, and held that no case had been made out for the undue restrictions on the prerogative proposed by the resolution.—Sir GEORGE CAMPBELL, confining himself to one view of this question, submitted to her Majesty's Government whether the expense for the transport of the Indian troops to Malta should not have obtained the sanction of the majority of the India Council? If they reserved to themselves a despotic control in the matter, how did they propose to act in future contingencies?—Mr. FORSYTH would vote for the amendment. The prospects of peace and a Congress were more favourable than they had been, and the hands of Government should not be weakened.—Mr. NEWDEGATE and Sir HENRY HAVELOCK condemned the procedure taken with regard to the Indian troops, and supported the resolution.—Mr. GRANTHAM, on the other hand, admitted only one possible error on the part of Government, which was that they had not earlier communicated their intentions to Parliament.—Mr. CHILDERS followed by criticising the action of Ministers. No sufficient reason had been given for secrecy; no diplomatic advantage had been gained by it; and economy had been disregarded. He further entered into detailed argument in reply to statements which had been put forward on the other side in the course of the discussion.—Mr. CROSS moved the adjournment of the debate until Thursday, and the House proceeded to other business.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, May 23.—INDIAN TROOPS.—Mr. CROSS resumed the debate on the employment of Indian troops. He justified the Government for not having proclaimed to the world prior to the Easter recess that they contemplated moving troops from India, for at that time there was an absolute necessity for secrecy. Negotiations were going on of the utmost importance, while information had been received—upon high authority, though it happily turned out to be untrue—which would have made it rash and foolish on their part to have then entered into exciting debates on the subject. He protested against the charge that Ministers had broken the Bill of Rights in any sense, or acted in an unconstitutional and illegal manner. The accusations against the Government were untrue, and had been raised in the most inconvenient form and at an inopportune time.—Mr. HERSCHELL would have been glad if the Ministers had declared that this was a case of emergency, and admitted that they had found it necessary to act to a certain extent outside the law.—Mr. ROEBUCK made a vigorous onslaught upon the conduct of the Opposition. He was at a loss to know where was the danger to the liberties of the English people. Several other hon. members having continued the debate, Mr. FORSTER commented on the amendment of the Colonial Secretary, which he pronounced to be an evasion of the question at issue.—The SOLICITOR-GENERAL continued the debate and was replied to at great length by Sir H. JAMES.—After a speech from the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER, some observations from Major NOLAN in support of the resolution, and from Mr. B. DAVENPORT against it, Lord HARTINGTON replied on the whole debate.—The House then divided, when the numbers were:—For Lord Hartington's motion, 226; against 347; majority, 121.

THE MADRAS PRESS ON THE PRESS COMMISSIONER.

A notification in the last Gazette of India says that, subject to the sanction of the Secretary of State for India, H.E. the Viceroy and Governor-General in Council is pleased to appoint Mr. Roper-Lethbridge, C.I.E., to be the Press Commissioner with the Government of India. Mr. Lethbridge is attached to the Foreign Department, and will rank with Political Agents of the First Class. In making this appointment Lord Lytton has kept the promise he made over a year, viz., to treat the Indian Press with more confidence than has been the wont in this land. On the occasion we refer to his Excellency said he preferred daylight to twilight, and soon after proved his sincerity by establishing, in a quasi-official manner, the Press Commissionership which is now gazetted. To the present time the arrangement has worked excellently, which is mainly owing to the admirable selection which was made in the Head of the Department. Mr. Roper-Lethbridge, C.I.E., was Principal of the Krishnagur College, when he was called up higher, but he was something more; he was editor of the Calcutta Review—the one Indian quarterly which has survived nearly forty years, which has done exceedingly good service to India, and is capable of doing infinitely much more if its scope be broadened so as to fit it to grapple with the larger necessities of the times. No man more fitted for the duties of Press Commissioner than Mr. Roper-Lethbridge could be found in the Indian services, and the great success which has attended the new agency is mainly due to his tact and discretion. We hope that this action of the Government of India will be imitated by the local Governments, and that it will, ere long, be possible for an editor to address a particular officer of the Government of Madras on matters of urgent general interest, and obtain replies which will be of service in enlightening the public at large. If such an officer could be found in this Presidency as Mr. Roper-Lethbridge has proved himself to be for the Empire, and a Press Agency were established here, the result could not be otherwise than satisfactory.—Madras Times Overland Mail.

SCHWEITZER'S COCOATINA

Anti-Dyspeptic Cocoa or Chocolate Powder.
Guaranteed Pure Soluble Cocoa of the Finest Quality, with the excess of fat extracted.
The Faculty pronounce it "the most nutritious, perfectly digestible beverage for Breakfast, Luncheon, or Supper, and invaluable for Invalids and Children."
Highly commended by the entire Medical Press.
Being without sugar, spice, or other admixture, it suits all palates, keeps better in all climates, and is four times the strength of Cocosas thickened yet weakened with Arrowroot, Starch, &c., and is IN REALITY CHEAPER than such Mixtures.

Made instantaneously with boiling water, a teaspoonful to a Breakfast Cup costing less than a Halfpenny.
COCOATINA A LA VANILLE is the most delicate, digestible, Cheapest Vanilla Chocolate, and may be taken when richer Chocolate is prohibited.

NOTES ON MUHAMMADANISM

REV. T. P. HUGHES, M.R.A.S.,

C. M. S., Missionary to the Afghans, Peshawar.

Opinions of the Press on the First Edition.

"Altogether an admirable little book. It combines two excellent qualities, abundance of facts and lack of theories. On every one of the numerous heads (over fifty) into which the book is divided Mr. Hughes furnishes a large amount of very valuable information, which it would be exceedingly difficult to collect from even a large library of works on the subject. The book might well be called a 'Dictionary of Muhammadan Theology,' for we know of no English work which combines a methodical arrangement (and consequently facility of reference), with fulness of information in so high a degree as the little volume before us."—The Academy.

"It contains multum in parvo, and is about the best outlines of the tenets of the Muslim faith which we have seen. It has, moreover, the rare merit of being accurate; and although it contains a few passages which we would gladly see expunged, it cannot fail to be useful to all Government employes who have to deal with Muhammadans, whilst to Missionaries it will be invaluable."—The Times of India.

"This small book is the most luminous, most convenient, and, we think, the most accurate, outline of the tenets and practices of Islamism that we have met with.
It seems exactly the sort of comprehensive and trustworthy book in small compass, on this subject, that we and many more have often looked for in vain. The author has evidently studied his subject in a faithful, laborious, and scholarly manner, and has not only studied but mastered it. The work is of great value for general students, and for men whose work lies among the Mussulman population, such as Civil Servants and Missionaries, it seems to be the very work that is wanted."—The Friend of India.

"In brief compass it contains a large amount of reliable information. Instead of theories and fancies, facts are placed before us. Muhammadanism is represented as it really is, not as it is supposed that it might possibly be. Instead of retailing the speculations current in literary society at home, Mr. Hughes furnishes us with brief but incisive statements, which, so far as they go, leave nothing to be desired."—The Church Missionary Intelligencer.

"It is manifest throughout the work that we have before us the opinions of one thoroughly conversant with the subject, and who is uttering no random notions. . . . We strongly recommend 'Notes on Mu-hammadanism.' Our Clergy especially, even though they are not Missionaries, and have no intention of labouring amongst Muhammadans or consorting with them, ought to have at least as much knowledge of the system as can be most readily acquired, with a very little careful study, from this useful treatise."—The Record.

"Its value as a means of correcting the common impressions about Islam will reveal itself to the most casual reader, while the author's evident scholarship and intimate knowledge of his subject bespeak for him
a patient hearing on points the most open to controversy."—Allen's Indian Mail.

By W. BRIGHT, Colour-Sergeant, 37th Middlesex R.V.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"Under this title, Colour-Sergeant Bright, of the 37th Middlesex R.V., has prepared an elaborate series of 'Test Questions' in all the matters in which a Sergeant of Volunteer Infantry has to be examined for his Certificate. The questions are very well framed, and very complete. Except in a very few instances, the answers are not given, but each question is followed by a reference to the Field Exercise, or the Rifle Exercises, from which the student will gain the information necessary to frame the answer. The book is interleaved with blank paper, so that the answers, when discovered, may be written out. Altogether the scheme is a very ingenious one, and we commend the new 'Red Book' to all Sergeants or intending Sergeants. We should add that the book contains a useful Appendix on certain points of military etiquette with which all Volunteers ought to be acquainted."—Volunteer Service Gazette, March 2, 1878.

"The object of this work is to enable a candidate for promotion to the rank of Sergeant in the Volunteer Infantry to acquire by heart a thorough knowledge of the subjects of his examination. . . . The questions are clearly framed, and . . . a very good method has been adopted for impressing the subject on the memory. A simple, handy book of the sort was much wanted, and the want has been supplied."—Broad Arrow, March 2, 1878.

"In this useful little manual of fifty-eight pages Mr. Bright has succeeded in making a 'royal road' for those members of the Volunteer Force who may desire to qualify themselves for the rank of Sergeant. . . . The 'Red Book for Sergeants' is a concise and practical guide, and should be in the hands of every Volunteer in the Kingdom."—Weekly Dispatch, March 10, 1878.

"The work is very carefully compiled and neatly got up, and seems well adapted for the end in view. . . . This 'Red Book' takes a comprehensive view of what all Volunteers, commissioned or non-commissioned, should know, and cannot fail to be of great value to all ranks of the Service. Some very useful information is given in an Appendix."—Military Record and Volunteer News, March 10, 1878.

"A compact, brilliant 'Red Book for Sergeants' appears very opportunely, as Volunteers are turning their thoughts to active service. . . . A most useful guide for Volunteers."—Lloyd's Weekly Newspaper, March 24, 1878.

OPINIONS OF VOLUNTEER OFFICERS.

The following is a copy of a letter received from Lieutenant-Colonel O. E. HOWARD VINCENT, Commanding Central London Rifle Rangers (4th Middlesex), President of the Volunteer Conference, and late of the 23rd Royal Welsh Fusiliers:—

"Lieutenant-Colonel Howard Vincent has read with great interest the 'Red Book for Sergeants,' compiled by Colour-Sergeant Bright, of the 37th Middlesex. The questions have been very carefully framed, and there can be no doubt that writing out the answers to them will impress the duties of Sergeants more on their memories than any other system. The publication of this book affords additional evidence of the successful zeal with which the Non-commissioned Officers of Volunteers apply themselves to their military duties—to the great gain of the entire Force.—Feb. 21, 1878."

One Officer (a Major) writes:—
"I have no hesitation in expressing my opinion that it should be in the hands of every Non-commissioned Officer in the Service."

Another (a Captain) writes:—
"It is likely to be of service not only to Non-commissioned, but all ranks in the Volunteer Service."

Similar approbatory letters have also been received from many other Officers of the Volunteer Force.

Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates.

Her Majesty's Representative, the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."

SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful."

SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.

For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor,

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are, 'from Bombay, May 13; Allahabad and Madras, May 11; Calcutta, May 10.

WE regret to observe that distress still continues in the North-West Provinces. The numbers on the relief works at Agra had increased on the 1st May to 9,050, and there were 1,343 paupers in the relief-house. From Maisur it is reported that several showers of rain had fallen, with a result favourable to agricultural prospects. According to the latest official account, “the rice that was withering has been almost everywhere saved; the tanks have got a fresh supply of water; prices have steadily though very slowly improved, and imports of grain have considerably decreased.” There had been much distress felt in the Hazara district near the North-West Frontier, which has been met by the employment of the poor people on relief works. But the most recent reports were to the effect that the situation had improved.

THE Daily News correspondent, writing from Alexandria on May 26, states that, up to date, nine steamers and eleven sailing ships had passed through the Canal; and that only three steamers and four sailing ships were due at Suez to complete the expedition. He admits that he was in error in supposing that a landing had been contemplated in Egypt; but excuses himself on the plea of being one of many others who had laboured under a similar impression.

WE learn, from the mail just received, that during the embarkation of the Expeditionary Force, lately despatched from Bombay, several weak points, productive of delay to the different departments working against time, presented themselves, and require correcting in case of a force being sent from this port on any future occasion. To investigate these matters a committee, composed as follows, has been ordered to assemble: President—Brigadier-General Aitchison, C.B. Members—Colonel Hancock, R.E.; Lieutenant-Colonel Hogge, Deputy Quartermaster-General; Lieutenant Brebner, Marine Department. Secretary—Lieutenant Baker, R.A. That the chief military authorities have been satisfied with the arrangements made by the Commander-in-Chief at Bombay, is the opinion evident from the following telegram addressed from Army Headquarters to Sir Charles Staveley:—“I congratulate you on the successful completion of the embarkation of the Expeditionary Force. Your arrangements have been admirable throughout. I beg you to assure all who, by their exertions, have assisted you, that their work is highly appreciated.”

AMONG the more notable movements in the official world of India, we notice that the Bishop of Madras was to have left for England, to attend the Pan-Anglican Synod, on the 18th May. Archdeacon Drury acting as his commissary. Colonel Colley had arrived at Simla and taken over the office of Private Secretary, Mr. Stewart Bayley, C.S.I., remaining attached to it until Col. Keatinge's departure from Assam; and General Chamberlain, commanding the Oudh division, was about proceeding to Simla.

A TELEGRAM, dated Simla, 8th May, announces that the Hon. Sir Richard Garth had applied for a month's privilege leave, in addition to his vacation, and the Hon. Louis Jackson, C.I.E., would act for him. The Hon. Justice McDonnell was to go on privilege leave, but this permission would not involve the necessity of any acting appointment to supply his place.

TWO sudden deaths at Bombay from heat apoplexy are mentioned by the Gazette as having occurred during the month of May. One is that of Mr. A. P. Hall, accountant to Messrs. C. Forbes and Co., and the other that of Lieutenant Donald McIntosh Smith, of the Adjutant-General's office. Lieutenant Smith's death occurred at the Boree Bandar Station as he was about to enter the train to go to Puna.

ANOTHER fine vessel has met with a disaster. On the night of the 9th May the P. and O.S.C. steamer China, which was to have carried the outgoing mail from Bombay, was found to be on fire. Some hours after it was supposed that the mischief had been arrested the flames again burst forth, and before they were fairly extinguished, the cargo had been entirely damaged, and the ship gutted from the forehatch to the stern. The loss to the Company is estimated at from £6,000 to £8,000.

THE following is extracted from the Government reply to a Minute forwarded by Sir George Couper in explanation of certain charges of mal-administration preferred in the Calcutta Statesman:—

I am to say that his Excellency the Viceroy in Council has read with much interest the convincing statement of facts set forth in Sir George Couper's Minute. No such statement, indeed, was needed to convince the Government of India that the Lieutenant-Governor had exercised forethought in his arrangements, and has shown humanity in his orders, throughout the recent crisis; but the Viceroy in Council is glad to have this opportunity of expressing his sympathy with the cares and anxieties by which the Lieutenant-Governor was surrounded, and his appreciation of and humane consideration for the people, with which these troubles had been encountered.

The Viceroy in Council cannot fail to share with Sir George Couper the deep and painful regret expressed by him at the lamentable mortality which in the early months of the year visited the distressed districts. This mortality was due in part to the unusual cold of the season, superimposed upon the privation caused by the total failure of the previous kharif crop; but the mortality, so far as it was directly the result of famine, was caused rather by the unwillingness of the people to leave their homes than by any want of forethought on the part of the Local Government in transacting business during the crisis. The Viceroy in Council unhesitatingly accepts the statement of the Local Government that no one who was willing to go to a relief work need have died of famine, and it is satisfactorily shown in his Honour's Minute that the relief wage was ample.

The next and final paragraph deals with the difficult question of drawing people from their villages to relief works.

It is now confidently stated that the Indus Valley Railway will be opened in the middle of June. At the time of the departure of the mail the last of the huge girders on the Satlaj bridge was in course of erection, and the last rivet was to be put in by May 25. The scheme for the Sakkar ferry was progressing actively.

We last week had occasion to remark on the many and various rumours spread about the health and temper of the Amir of Kabul, mentioning two in particular—of which one represented him seriously ailing, and the other most friendly in feeling towards the British. This week we are told by the Globe, that the Central Asian correspondent of the Golos reports a gloomy state of affairs in Afghanistan. The Amir, it is said, "has issued orders that all arrivals from India are to be strictly watched, and, if suspicious, to be turned back on the frontier. At the same time he treats with great severity the native Indian merchants who have taken up a residence in Kabul." We are quite at a loss to know the kind of arrival from India that would be looked upon as "suspicious," whether it be in the shape of a Shikarpur Banya, usually a meek man in a Muhammadan country, or a homeward-bound Pathan, who had accompanied the kafilas bringing wool and stuffs, dried fruit, dyes, or other articles to Sind. Afghan rulers were not wont to regard these as suspicious characters; but times may have changed, or the Golos may be mistaken.

BUT the Golos has more to say on the subject of the Amir. Most of his troops are, it appears, "massed at Kandahar, in expectation of an advance upon Kwettah, as soon as England is engaged in war in Europe." What would be done if the war did not take place is not stated. In the meanwhile—that is, until the pending suspense be terminated—it may interest many to learn that the "army in Herat has been fully raised to a war footing, and is well supplied with the artillery that Shir Ali has been manufacturing for some time past in Kabul."

WE see it stated that Colonel William Roberts, 1st Battalion 5th Regiment, and Colonel William Gordon, C.I.E., Bengal Staff Corps, Assistant Adjutant General and Chief Inspector for Musketry, have been appointed Brigadier-generals on the Staff of the Bengal Army, in succession to Major General John Ross, C.B., and Brigadier General H. T. Macpherson, V.C., C.B., who have left India with the contingent for Malta.

A REUTER'S telegram, dated Malta, May 24, announced the arrival, on that date, of the troopships Goa and Duke of Athole, with the 25th Madras Native Infantry Regiment. Another from the same place, dated the 25th, announced the disembarkation of the men. A third, of the 26th, stated that the transport ships Madura, with a portion of the 31st Bengal Infantry; Hospodar, with one battery of the Royal Artillery; and the Suez and Brambletye, with the 1st Bombay Lancers, had arrived. The Governor had inspected the 25th Regiment Madras Native Infantry, and would give a grand dinner in honour of the Queen's birthday. A fourth, dated Port Said, May 26, showed that the transport ships Marina, Trinacria, Seaforth, and Narcissus were passing through the Canal. The Kwantung had proceeded in search of a dhow cast off by the Trinacria in the Red Sea. A fifth telegram from Port Said, dated May 27, announced the arrival of the Macedonia, towing the Citadel and Aros Bay, both with troops on board. Another, from Port Said, of the same date, stated that the troopships St. Osyth, Scott, and Clydesdale, with native troops from Bombay, had proceeded to Malta. Finally, another of the same date, from Malta, announced that the Canara, with Sappers and Miners, and part of the 9th Bombay Native Infantry; the Baron Colonsay, with Cavalry; the Bangalore, with the remainder of the 9th Infantry Regiment; and the St. Mildred and the Hannibal, with the 1st Bombay Lancers, had arrived in the island.

THE Morning Post hears that "His Royal Highness the Field Marshal Commanding-in-Chief will shortly proceed to Malta to review and inspect the Indian Contingent which has been ordered to rendezvous in that island." Such a step would, no doubt, be gratifying to the sipahis, and should the result of the inspection be satisfactory, as we believe it would be, the Malta expedition, even though it begun and ended in Malta itself, would not be void of honour or distinction. Our Native troops might in such case return to India with a word of high approval, calculated to strengthen their known loyalty, and stimulate their abundantly proved zeal in the cause of the British sarkar.

WHEN an "Indian" member of Parliament speaks in the House on an "Indian" question, though he may not always command attention, he is tolerably safe to speak more to the point than those gentlemen who know India in the closet only. The few remarks made by Sir George Campbell on Monday last, before moving for his Select Committee, afford a good illustration of our argument. We are not at all disposed to admit with the speaker that the officers of her Majesty's Indian army are "somewhat overpaid," unless the application be to certain special cases only. A subaltern even in India can barely subsist on his present pittance; a captain is comparatively poor if dependant on his pay; and it will probably be found that in respect of civil appointments the military man often does the work required of him at a less cost to the State than if the incumbent were a civilian. But the honourable member for Kirkcaldy was, we venture to affirm, wiser than those around him when he suggested "that we should ascertain from the proposed inquiry whether for normal purposes, and as a rule, we could employ some of those Indian troops in our foreign stations; whether such employment was likely to be so successful as to be justified by the result; and, thirdly, if in time of great need we were driven to resort to India for an increase of our military strength, we could do so with advantage."

MUCH that follows in Sir George's reported speech on the Indian Troops question is so true and essential to be considered, that we reproduce it:—

He admitted, without putting faith in the gushing accounts we had seen, that so far the experiment had been successful. The troops had come forward willingly, without difficulty or demur. It was said by some that these were half-savage troops and that there might be difficulty in keeping them in order. He had no fears on that score. Our present Indian soldiers were taken from the plough, and, as far as regarded order, might be trusted to serve in any part of her Majesty's dominions. He thought something might be done for the relief of British soldiers by employing Indian troops in unhealthy stations; but, if they were so employed, it would not be fair to give them all the bad and none of the good. He would suggest that we might bring a few of the native Indian troops home, in order that we might see them, and that they might see us—(a laugh). He believed that contact with those troops would remove many of the prejudices entertained in this country; that when we knew them better we should find that they were not savages, but orderly, pleasant, and good-natured people, and that we should like them pretty well, while they in turn would like us. If an honorary detachment of those troops were brought to do duty at Aldershot and to attend her Majesty, the constitutional difficulty might be overcome provided only, the Government would condescend to get the authority of Parliament for a measure of that kind. When we became better acquainted with those troops he thought we should take a more favourable view of them.

NATIVE officers of Indian regiments are being discussed and criticised. The Pioneer states that the Army List in Bengal shows a large proportion of them to be men too old to be active or useful in campaigning. But it is naturally averse to placing them at once on the Pension List. Many of the oldest, it is argued, "are men of a certain status, without whose influence good results would not be forthcoming; and they exercise, moreover, a moral control over the men of their own class in the regiment. If, therefore, the native officer is to be superseded in any way whatever in the command of his troop or company, esprit de corps must suffer. The best men would no longer come forward for service, and the native army would deteriorate. One must allow, on the other hand, that it would be dangerous to trust worn-out veterans, unfamiliar with the military requirements of the present day, on responsible duty in time of war. They are then an encumbrance, though most necessary in time of peace. If Government wishes to see the native army thoroughly efficient, the difficulty must be solved some way, but no half measures will answer."

"YOUNG native gentlemen of family" are then spoken of as probable introductions to the commissioned ranks; but as it is held improbable that commanding officers would welcome them unless of proved value to the chosen profession, the establishment of a native military college is suggested, where candidates might "be instructed in the elements of their military career; be taught to ride and shoot, and encouraged in manly exercises." We are inclined to think that, however valuable the college training would in some respects prove, the class of "young native gentlemen" destined to supply the most fitting subjects for the commissioned ranks, should be composed of those to whom riding and shooting would be quite as familiar as to our own second Lieutenants fresh from England.

THE correspondent of a Swiss paper, writing from Tehran, gives an account of the summary punishment administered in that city to a score of unfortunate persons who resented the rude treatment of the Shah's escort, in forbidding them to present a petition to his Majesty. It appears that they had the temerity to throw stones at their aggressors, one of which missiles struck the Royal carriage. The offenders were thereupon seized, tried, and sentenced—ten to impalement and ten to the bastinado. What became of the first half need not be asked; of the second, three are said to have died under the infliction. But we believe that the case has been in some way exaggerated or misrepresented in the repetition or transcript; and if this be so, the story should at once be contradicted.

By inadvertence, the pleasant experiences of the Times of India correspondent in the Persian Gulf were omitted from our last issue, but to-day we transfer to our columns a portion of his later letter from Baghdad. The passage up the Tigris is described with much accuracy and appreciation. To speak plainly, however, the trip is a somewhat heavy one at best, and the charm of landscape must be sought for rather in retrospective association than in actual sight or sound. Dr. Birdwood is assuredly too hopeful when he says, in his unique and already popular handbook to the Indian Court of the French Exhibition, "The next generation will probably see all the old cities of the Tigris and Euphrates valley again rising from the dust and oblivion of ages; and Petra, Jerusalem, Palmyra, Tyre and Sidon, Aleppo, Antioch, and Tarsus once more participating in the returning prosperity of Egypt and Mesopotamia." Neither at Kurna, Kutu-l-Amara, Madayin (the cities of Kusru), or in Baghdad itself, or among the liquorice fields, marshes, and tumuli along the banks of the Dijla, can we detect any streak of light, any indications of dawn, any aspect whatever whence such results could be predicted or anticipated.

DAMASCUS, moreover, the seat of Government in Syria, a city of world-wide renown, full of serious interest to Christians as to Mohammedans, is said to be rapidly falling from its high estate. According to a recent report received in the Foreign Office and quoted in the Times, the Baghdad overland trade is virtually extinct; the Suez Canal has turned aside the formerly large consignments of European manufactures purchased in Damascus and sent to Baghdad; and the war has led Persian pilgrims to Mecca to go by the sea-route via the Persian Gulf. These pilgrims bought and sold to a considerable extent; and their non-appearance in the bazaar of Damascus must be regarded as a local calamity.

ACCORDING to the Times Calcutta telegram of the 26th May the judicial investigation into the Surat riots is still proceeding. And those officers of Government who have had acquaintance with native journals in the mufassal as in the Presidency towns will not be surprised to learn that two "editors" have been charged with very serious offences in connection with these riots. It is further stated that numerous persons have been already committed for trial.

THE Pioneer, commenting upon Mr. Beveridge's paper on Warren Hastings's career in Lower Bengal, in the Calcutta Review for April, thinks that if the writer does "not attempt to vie with Macaulay in picturesque description, he is able to correct the inaccuracies into which the great essayist often fell." But objection is taken to the opinion that Warren Hastings "was a great Bengali rather than a great Englishman." We quote the rest of the comment upon this particular head:—"Doubtless he was reserved, subtle, and fertile in expedients; unforgiving to his enemies, lavishly liberal to poor relations, vain, and fond of titles. These qualities are met with in Bengalis, as they are also in Europeans. But the grand features of Hastings's intellect—his masculine common-sense, his indomitable courage, his talents for command—prove his kinship to the great ones of the West. It might not be impossible to find a Hastings among the millions of Bengal; but if found, he would hardly be owned by his countrymen as one of themselves."

WE have received the fortnightly statement of the Executive Committee, on the Madras Famine, dated May 4. It shows that, on that date, relief operations were narrowing in all the Committees; and the majority of the local agencies were concentrating attention upon making money-grants for the purchase of seed grain to sow. Particulars are given of the efforts which had been made in this respect at Salem, where two (and in some places three) showers had fallen, and cultivation had commenced. The distribution of the Mansion House Fund had been entrusted in one Taluk to Mr. V. Subramanin Iyer, the District Munsif, who did not hesitate to carry on the good work during his holiday from Court, assisted by other members of the Salem Committee. It was hoped that at the end of May the whole of the money would have been distributed in all the Taluks.

WHETHER it be that the fashion of Western Europe is caught up by British India in a not unlikely spirit of imitation, or that pedestrianism and physical tours de force are as natural to the Indian as to the Englishman, we know not; but the Behar Herald has a hero who could do honour to the advertisement-covered walls and wooden inclosures of the Metropolis. We repeat the description:—

"A Rajput, named Umar Singh the other day, at the Sitamari Milla (or fair), in windy and freezing (sic) weather, walked nine and a half miles in one hour fourteen minutes and thirteen seconds for a bet of Rs. 2, carrying on his head a two-gallon stone bottle, neck downwards. The most wonderful part of the performance was that he never once touched the jar with his hand. This man is a big fellow of fourteen stone, and a marvel in his way."

"INDIA and the War" is the title of a short paper in the Indian Daily News, to which we revert because there is an under-current of sound reasoning in it which merits attention. The writer entertains the notion that Russia, in event of war with England, would seek an opportunity for making a sudden raid from the sea upon an Indian port, calculated to damage our prestige in the country and raise her own. "Even grave statesmen," are the words used, "might hope that such an insult to our coast, slight as it might seem, and casual, would in its effect prove a serious injury." From precedents in Russian policy and action there is likelihood in the supposed move, and it is well to think the matter over. To avert such possible mischief it is proposed to give less attention to protective measures than to bold assumption of the offensive—to concentrate "fleets," and attack the enemy wherever to be found. But we are more disposed to reflect on the contingency presented than to accept the measures suggested to meet it. "Fleets" in the plural cannot be considered always available in the neighbourhood of vulnerable ports; and therefore it would be well that these provide in some sense for themselves. That they will do so we have little doubt; but really their number is not very great, and the heavy surf, low shores, and uncomfortable roadsteads of the Eastern coast are not inviting to strangers, whether hostile or friendly. We think, however, that a vigilant admiral will do more for us than a reversal of Government legislation on the Vernacular Press, the disposal of which by the Executive, apart from the interference of Courts, is lamented with such apparent waste of energy.

AMONG the grievances and suggestions which are put forward by Press letter-writers at home or in India it is not often that we find a more practically useful and philanthropic proposal than that referred to by Dr. Tuson, of the 16th Bengal Cavalry, in a letter to the Pioneer. It is one which had been touched on in a prior issue of the same paper; and is to the effect that men in regiments ordered on service should be taught the minor branches of surgery. Dr. Tuson advocates, from personal experience, the instruction, to a certain number of soldiers, in "the art of bandaging, setting fractures, and controlling hemorrhage." He himself had taught, three years before, four defaders of his regiment all the details of minor surgery, and had found them so willing, that in a short time he was able to report them fully acquainted with the subject. We think the notion excellent, and should be glad to see it entertained in our own army. A knowledge of medicines and elementary surgery cannot but be highly useful, and add greatly to the value of the military officer, commissioned and non-commissioned, as to that of the missionary and traveller.

THE same paper has a smart article on the criticisms levelled against himself in which the Englishman in India is prone to indulge, when reviewing the question of the social gulf which divides Europeans from Natives. It is affirmed that it is "the conduct of cooks, Khansamans, saiyises, ayahs and the like which forms the basis" of his disquisitions, and that the real people of India have no bearing on the argument, for they are not in the least degree comprehended in it. It might be laid down as a very excellent rule, and one to be recommended most seriously for adoption by authority, that the opinion of no man on the Indian people, either in their integrity, or section by section and class by class, be accepted or trusted, unless his antecedents be such as to make him a competent judge. More mischief ensues than can well be imagined, or than history will ever register, from reliance placed on the superficial knowledge imparted by smart, pushing, and too often unscrupulous men, whose assurance gives them the prominence to which they have no legitimate claim whatever. Who can speak of the Indian raiyat better than those who have lived among the Indian peasantry; of the sipahi better than those who have mixed with the sipahi class; of the dwellers in towns better than those who have been magistrates of towns; of foreign sojourners in India better than those who have been in daily converse with foreigners, such as Persians, Pathans, Arabs, Baluchis, and frontier tribes? Our local rulers in India are wiser on their side. They do not ask the newly-arrived civilian his opinion on the defence of coasts, on towers and torpedoes; nor do they expect the second lieutenants in marching regiments to enlighten them as to the several opinions held at home on endowed schools and hospitals.

INDIAN HISTORY.

WE had proposed, ere this, noticing Colonel Malleeson's first volume of the "History of the Indian Mutiny," but time and space have both been wanting to give to the subject that attention which it deserves. There is no doubt that in undertaking the work in its present stage the task has not been easier for the new historian than had he stepped upon hitherto untrodden ground. We are not referring to the literary merit of Sir John Kaye's volumes, which is of a high order, but to the necessity of adopting a programme of narration the natural intricacy of which would be better met by independent action than restriction to another's design. That the author himself is fettered in this respect is clear from his own acknowledgment. "The plan of my narrative," he says, "has been very much affected by the necessity of adhering as much as possible to the general scheme of Sir John Kaye's work. Naturally, I should have preferred to form a grouping after my own taste."

In remarking on the short but suggestive preface to Colonel Malleeson's book we have no intention of forestalling a regular notice; only of treating one or two general questions which affect alike all historians and all modern histories of India. The history is said to be "based on letters, journals, and official documents, written at the time—in 1857;" and the historian states that he has ever distrusted, and now distrusts, "documents penned from memory after a lapse of twenty-one years. To the dead, as well as to the living, justice must be rendered." Or it may be read the other way: "to the living as to the dead"—for it is not unlikely that some natures are more kindly disposed to those who have passed away from among us than to those who can speak for themselves. That the particular justice signified can only be meted out after a rigid examination of letters and journals—not meant for publication—written at the time, is a statement which may need qualification, for there are letter and journal writers of many conflicting views and opinions. Are there no men who rise and fall in the battle of life whose deeds are misunderstood by their fellows, and whose actions are misrepresented by bias and ignorance, even supposing calumny or wilful distortion of truth were unknown terms? Are there not men who keep aloof from certain of their fellows because they have derived false impressions of them from others; who, if they knew the truth, would extend to them immediately the hand of fellowship? Are there no letters written under erroneous ideas, blackening, where is no taint; colouring, where all is pale; adorning, where all is blank and bare? It is to be feared that the Post-offices are even now replete with specimens.

That "it is not always possible to be impartial during the whirl of action" is indisputable; but whether the time has arrived to deal out "severe and strict justice to all" actors in the drama of a period found within the past quarter of a century we are not prepared to maintain. Colonel Malleeson's assurance that his "aim, hope and earnest desire" are "to render to all as they have deserved," breathes the fitting spirit for the occasion, and should command the sympathy of his readers. The belief has already been expressed with reference to Sir John Kaye's third volume, that the sooner the chronicle follows the event the better for facts, but that the characters and conduct of those whose sayings and doings are deemed worthy of traditionary record need, as a rule, the action of time for truthful comprehension. Special heroes of world-wide reputation, who could be named—men alike in the possession of marked individualities, however unlike in many distinctive signs of genius—have already had assigned to them niches in the gallery of the world's heroes, and need no new tributes of written laudation to enhance the honour in which their memory is held. "But"—and we repeat a former expression—"there is controversy in respect to some reputations, and where there is controversy there is doubt; and for the solution of doubts it may be that time has yet to disclose, to impart something to the history, whatever its literary merits, that stamp of definite truth which should be the sole warrant of permanence."

Personal knowledge of public men does unquestionably aid the literary limner in producing a faithful portrait; but where there are many portraits of the same individual, and all from a living model, it will rest with some appreciative critic to decide which of these should be accepted by posterity. And in arriving at a just decision in this respect we are not sure that there is any necessity for the critic to have seen the original in whom he is interested. It may be that he will judge all the better if guided by the plain rules of criticism, without any mixture of a personal appreciation often insensibly affected by personal bias or prejudice of some sort. So that it would matter little that the historian belonged to a century later than his history; he would be as capable of judging then from the records of the past put before him as if he had belonged to the period of which he has to treat. "Special correspondents" have, it is true, superseded in popularity the Froissarts and Monstrelets of our day; and are without the particular status or authority of the older chroniclers. But they are by no means void of serious uses in their independent callings; and as surely as, by dint of ability and enterprise, they have made their mark on the age in which they live, so surely will their work and writings become incorporated in future history. Briefly, then, the special correspondent or book-maker is the limner contemporaneous with the hero of the day; and the historian is the after critic of the portraiture: and as it is in the description of men so is it with events.

In Colonel Malleeson's disposal of proper names we recognise a praiseworthy attempt to do what is right without respect of custom, even if "Calcutta" do not share the fate of "Cawnpore" and "Lucknow," and be allowed to pass unchallenged. The glossary, (it may be the printer) is, however, inconsistent, and somewhat at fault in sundry instances. To take the A's only as examples, we observe a superfluous accent on the second syllable in "Allahabad," and the omission of "u" after the first "a" in "Arangabad;" while, though we prefer "Ambalah" to "Etawa," the final "h" should be given or taken away in both instances, and not made a partial measure. We purposely avoid encroaching in this place upon the book itself, or even scrutinising the contents of the chapters; but the subject of the volume is one of the highest interest and importance to more readers than those comprised in the category of old Indians.

Terrestrial Time: a Memoir. By Samuel Fleming, C.M.G., M.I.C.E., F.G.S., &c., &c., Engineer-in-Chief, Canadian Pacific Railway. (S. Boot, Gracechurch-street).

In this little pamphlet Mr. Fleming points out very emphatically the difficulties and inconveniences which are felt (more especially in these days of travel) in consequence of the universal system of indicating time according to the longitude of places on the earth's surface.

As one example he takes a case, familiar to our readers, of a person travelling from London to India. The traveller "starts with Greenwich time, but he scarcely leaves the shores of England when he finds his watch wrong. Paris time is used for the journey until that of Rome becomes the standard. At Brindisi there is another change. Up the Mediterranean ship's time is used. At Alexandria Egyptian time is the standard. At Suez ship's time is resumed, and continues with daily changes until India is reached. Arriving at Bombay the traveller will find two standards employed, local time and railway time, the latter being that of Madras. If he has not altered his watch since he left England he will find it some five hours slow. Should he continue his journey to China it will fall eight hours behind."

Mr. Fleming proposes for all these and similar complications an apparently simple and ingenious remedy. He suggests that, as at present, the mean solar day shall be adopted as the limit of measurement, but to avoid the confusion arising from the A.M. and P.M. distinctions, he would divide the day into twenty-four in place of two sets of twelve hours, employing letters instead of figures to indicate these divisions. He then supposes a standard chronometer to be stationed at the centre of the earth, the time hand of which is to revolve from East to West with precisely the same speed as the centre on its axis, so that this hand points directly and constantly towards the mean sun. Each of the twenty-four divisions into which the day is divided is to be assumed to correspond with certain known meridians of longitude, and the terrestrial or universal time of every part of the world is to be regulated in accordance with the imaginary Central Standard Chronometer. If, for example, the letter G indicates the meridian of Greenwich, the hour hands of all the clocks in the world ought to point to G when it is noon at Greenwich Observatory. The letter H would be applied to all places situated on a meridian fifteen degrees West of Greenwich, F to those fifteen degrees East, and so on. A man looking at his watch in any part of the world, and seeing the hands point to ten minutes to five, would be aware that in ten minutes time it would be noon at all places on the five meridian, that is to say, in New Siberia, Queensland, New South Wales, &c.

Mr. Fleming admits that for a long time to come the present system could never be wholly abolished nor seriously disregarded, and he proposes a variety of ways of altering or modifying the dials of the clocks and watches now in use so as to indicate both local and universal time. The several plans can be clearly understood by a reference to the diagrams with which the pamphlet is profusely illustrated.

We are inclined to think that the writer somewhat underestimates the enormous practical difficulties to be overcome before such a change as this, however desirable in itself, can be effected. The system now in use is ingrained in the understandings and nature of all civilised communities; and the introduction of so radical an alteration as that advocated by Mr. Fleming would assuredly be either strictly opposed or entirely neglected by the vast majority. The idea mooted is, however, in our opinion theoretically sound, and it might advantageously be submitted for consideration to the several conferences which periodically assemble for regulating the international systems of railways, telegraphs, and other communications. BURMESE LOAN.—A letter from Mandalay says that an Italian marquis, named Stephen, who has lately arrived there, is in treaty with the King of Burmah to lend his Majesty ten lakhs of rupees at 3 per cent., to be repaid in three years.

OFFICERS FOR NATIVE REGIMENTS.

The one fault of the Indian Expedition lies in the paucity of European officers, for without their courage and character, their strength of will and readiness for any emergency, the best native troops in the world can never be well led. We are, of course, anticipating that events will now rush on too rapidly to permit the Expeditionary Force to settle quietly at their official destination. We do not believe that any one on this side of India knows more of the matter than we do. But does not the very nature of the preparations that have been so admirably and so speedily made, forbid this thought of Malta as a final halting-place? We emphatically think so. As has been pointed out before, the full complement of scaling ladders and entrenching tools—such as pickaxes and shovels—and the various articles necessary for entrenching a camp, for making bridges, and for halting the troops, which the Ori flame is carrying for the expedition, all seem to contradict the Government order of a rendezvous at Malta. At Malta, too, it is difficult to see what use could be made of our artillery and our native cavalry. We have discussed the various ways in which our Indian Expeditionary Force might be employed, and need not refer to them again at present. Yet while all these implements of war are so many puzzles, if the native troops are only intended for garrison duty, it is still more perplexing to think of their parting pour la Syrie, or any other possible seat of war, with a mere peace complement of officers. If war be really declared, the casualties of the camp, and especially of active service, must soon reduce the number of officers present with the force; and we have not yet heard of any provision for immediately filling up vacancies thus caused. It should be recollected that sepoy officers cannot be made in a few days; cannot even be produced as quickly as officers fit to command Europeans may be manufactured, for there are the essential requirements of a knowledge of the vernacular and of the habits of the men, which are not to be speedily attained. An officer cannot be detailed from an European to a native regiment, in the same manner as he may be posted from one European regiment to another, or even from a native regiment to an European corps. We would desire to see, for every Indian regiment leaving for service, at least the same complement of officers that prevailed before the mutinies, or previous to the initiation of the present irregular system of officering the native army. In India, or in countries very near India, the irregular system has not broken down, for immediately one officer became hors de combat, another officer, acquainted with the language and habits of the men, was available. But this will not be the case on service, even in Egypt; and so much the less if the Indian force proceed from Egypt towards the front. If there are no sources from which ready-made sepoy officers may be drawn, there are many retired officers at home, who have already served in India, and who have already volunteered for service at the seat of war, wherever it may be. They would have the requisite knowledge of drill, as well as some practical acquaintance with the language and the people. But what is more to our purpose, there are plenty of young men in India who would willingly become sepoy officers, and who are well fitted for such employment. There are, for instance, the twenty or thirty gentlemen in our own Volunteer Corps who are only waiting for that encouragement from Government which the prospect, even after some service, of a commission to last till the campaign was over, would at once afford. There are others who would only be too glad to come forward under promise of permanent service. As we have recently pointed out, the Telegraph Department, the Customs Department, the Public Works, and other civil departments, are filled with the sons of Indian officers, who, had matters gone as in olden days, would now be officers of the native army in their fathers' places. But the fates have been against them. Numerous causes, such as depreciation of silver, competitive examinations, the rules of entrance into the Staff Corps, have tended, of late years, to thrust the sons of Indian officers away from the paths of their fathers, and they have been glad to find employment in any capacity they could obtain it. They are acquainted with the language; from the nature of their employments they must be of active habits, and they would gladly respond to a summons permitting them to follow in the more honourable footsteps of their fathers before them. . . . But it is not only in the matter of officers, that the Indian troops will be at a disadvantage in front of an European enemy. Their arms are not such as they should carry into active service. This, however, cannot be changed in a day; but if native troops are to be placed, shoulder to shoulder, with British regiments, they should, in common fairness, be armed in an equally efficient manner. This is perhaps a secondary consideration if the Indian troops are meant to remain in Egypt, where in all probability there will be no fighting, or if they are really bound for the stone walls of Malta, as officially intimated by the Government of India. But the arming of the men ceases to be a matter of minor import, when they are brought into active service against an enemy. They have other drawbacks in common with their English comrades. We need scarcely discuss the red coats of our troops. The "thin red line" has stood so firmly on so many a battle-field, that we suppose the red coat will hold its own to the end. Again, as our military correspondent pointed out, we think the military authorities might entertain the question of the desirability of leaving the colours behind, as, in these days of long ranges, they are good marks in actual warfare, and entail the services of several men to carry them. Also, we doubt the advisability of keeping our infantry officers mounted, as they are thus made more conspicuous to the enemy's marksmen. But whether it should fall to their fate to bear the colours or no, whether on foot or mounted, to meet the enemy, we think a fair sprinkling of Indian Volunteers would introduce a generous spirit, and add another motive of popularity to the part we have to play in a struggle which now seems inevitable.—Times of India.

Bengal, Upper India, &c.

MAIL ROBBERY.—The Englishman hears of another mail robbery having taken place in Behar on the 4th instant, the dak from Behar to Nawada having been robbed near Buttarpur.

THE total out-turn of the Topographical Surveys of India for 1876-77 amounts to 18,909 square miles. Since 1860, 291,354 square miles have been surveyed, and 321,097 square miles triangulated, at a cost of Rs. 5,883,134.

REVIVAL OF PAPERS.—It is said that all the vernacular papers in Bengal, which became extinct on account of the most arbitrary action taken by the local Government, will be revived, viz., the Som Prakash, the Sahachar, and the Bharat Shungskarak.

FAMINE.—During the past few days batches of men, women, and children, residents of Gwalior, have been coming into the metropolis, all travelling towards Eastern Bengal by the Grand Trunk-road. They say they left Gwalior after selling their all in consequence of the famine, which, by their account, is raging there with unabated severity.

DR. DUFF.—At a meeting of the committee of the Calcutta Improvement Association held on the 30th March last, the following resolutions were unanimously agreed to:—First, that it is desirable to take steps to commemorate, in some permanent manner, Dr. Duff's labours on behalf of India, more especially in the cause of education; secondly, that the members and friends of the association be appealed to for funds to enable the committee to carry out this object; thirdly, that at a future meeting of the subscribers, the form of the proposed memorial shall be considered.

SIPAH ZEL.—The Lahor paper says that in one of the native regiments that has just gone on service, two men were smuggled out of the hospital into the ranks on the day of departure. On their being detected down country they pleaded that they were perfectly well, and begged to be allowed to proceed, but were ordered back by the doctor, much to their disappointment. In the same regiment an officer's orderly has allowed the mem sahib he serves no peace, being ever before her with clasped hands, begging that he may still be permitted to join the regiment.

TELEGRAPH CONFERENCE.—Amongst the proposals which the Government of India are desirous of having brought forward at the Telegraph Conference, which is to be held in London in July next, is one which relates to the substitution of a letter for a word tariff. This, with other proposals, has been communicated to the Indo-European and other telegraph companies, who are decidedly opposed to it. It is objected that a letter tariff would result in serious loss of revenue to the companies, and that it would lead to a system of letter code and packing which would defy every tariff that it would be possible to impose, and ruin the companies for a series of years until they learned to overcome the difficulty. In fact, with their present experience, the companies do not desire to receive single letter telegrams at any price.

ACCIDENT IN PIG-STICKING.—The Statesman hears from Allahabad of a serious, and what has nearly proved a fatal, accident that has happened to Mr. Cruikshank, C.S. While out pig-sticking with a large party, a pig attacked his horse and brought both heavily to the ground, Mr. Cruikshank falling on his head, and then getting mixed up with the horse and boar. He was picked up insensible and conveyed in that state to Allahabad, where he did not arrive till next morning, and did not recover consciousness till late at night, and then only for a short time. He lies in a precarious condition, his consciousness returning at long intervals for a few minutes. He has fractured an arm, besides sustaining other minor injuries. The doctors, however, have every hope, have set his arm, and altogether the poor young fellow is in good hands. He is an ardent sportsman and very popular.

THE 31st N.I.—Once more the private affairs of the 31st Punjab Native Infantry must be referred to; for rumour, contradicted in one way, has run to another extreme of absurdity. There is no need, however, to repeat rumours here; the plain facts of the case are as follows:—Some little while before the regiment got its orders for foreign service, Colonel Langmore, Commanding, thought fit to remove a Pathan Subadar from a Pathan Company, and to put in the man's place a native officer of a different race—a Punjabi. A body of twenty-one Pathans remonstrated; they said the new subadar worried them; and the demeanour of the spokesmen being excited and disrespectful, the Colonel had three of them confined. The other eighteen thereupon threw off their accoutrements, and said they would be confined too. Their wish was gratified; they were sent to the guard-room, and the matter reported to Allahabad. All this happened before the order came down that the regiment was to go on foreign service. Shortly after that order was received at Cawnpore General Ewart, Commanding the Division, arrived. By this time Colonel Langmore had reinstated the Pathan Subadar; and the general found the offenders most penitent and humble. They had no cause for complaint, they said, and they had never meant to be disrespectful; in fact, they behaved all through just like big children; and Pathans always do behave like big children. General Ewart then told them that their offence was really serious; a view of the case which had quite escaped their notice. Finally, in consideration that their Commanding Officer had given them—shall we say the justice or the favour, they asked; that the regiment had lately been inspected by the General himself and found in excellent order; and in consideration that it had been selected for service abroad, General Ewart released the men, and the matter may be looked upon as ended, except for the needful reference to the Commander-in-Chief, and for the rumours already spoken of. It would be a pity to make a mountain out of a mole-hill, especially as there is an excellent spirit in the regiment.—Pioneer.

Madras.

COLONEL GIBB, commanding the 25th Madras Native Infantry, presented every man of the regiment with an extra pair of boots, at his own expense, previous to the regiment embarking.

NOVEL ROBBERY.—The thieves of Bangalore, according to a local paper, have turned their attention to robbing graveyards of their tomb-stones, committing such sacrilege with the greatest impunity.

THE G. I. P. RAILWAY COMPANY.—We learn from a Marathi paper at Sholapoor that all the native employes of the G. I. P. Railway Company are about to resign their respective posts in that department.

GRANT MEDICAL COLLEGE.—Surgeon H. De Tatham, M.D., M.R.C.S., has been appointed to act for Dr. A. H. Hughes as Presidency Surgeon, First District, and Professor of Midwifery, Grant Medical College.

MEDICINE AT MADRAS.—The science of medicine it seems is scarcely ever taken up by natives in the Madras University; though at present a few young men are qualifying themselves for the degree of Licentiate of Medicine and Surgery, but lately revived in that city.

EDUCATION IN MAISUR.—The Government expenditure on education in Maisur for 1876-77 amounted to Rs. 3,34,175. The unaided schools were seriously affected by the famine, and decreased from 1,350 to 935, and the scholars from 17,882 to 13,165. Of 68 works published during the year only one was in English.

NATIVE TROOPS FOR FOREIGN SERVICE.—The Madras Government has received instructions from the Supreme Government to prepare the necessary war equipments for two additional companies of Sappers and Miners. Orders have accordingly been issued to the authorities at the Arsenal in the Fort to put the work in hand at once, and a number of additional artisans have been engaged from this day to ensure the speedy execution of the work.

THE HON. SIR M. K. KENNEDY.—His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General in Council is pleased to extend for two years, from the 30th March, 1878, the period of service of Lieutenant-General the Hon. Sir M. K. Kennedy, K.C.S.I., R.E., Secretary to the Government of Bombay in the Public Works Department, and at present Personal Assistant to his Grace the Governor of Madras.

CULTIVATION IN NELLORE.—The area of land brought under the plough in Nellore up to January was less than the average cultivation of the corresponding period in the three years ending 1875-76 by 136,004 acres. The decrease appeared in all the taluqs. The collections up to the month amounted to Rs. 5,16,586, and exhibit a decrease of Rs. 12,24,545, or a little over 70 per cent. as compared with the average collections of the same period in the three years ending 1875-76.

SURAT.—Writing on May 6th, a Surat correspondent says that nineteen of the prisoners placed before Mr. Lely, the Special Magistrate, on suspicion of being implicated in the riots, have been committed to the Sessions on charges of attempt to murder, voluntarily causing hurt, being members of an unlawful assembly, and of committing riot and mischief. Their trial is delayed on account of all the papers relating to the magisterial inquiry not having reached the Sessions Judge. The total of prisoners released by Mr. Lely amounted to twelve.

PLOUGHS.—We learn that the Madras Government in January last forwarded some interesting reports home on the working capabilities of several Swedish ploughs sent out from England in 1875 to that Presidency. Some of the ploughs are stated to be decidedly efficient and suited to the varying conditions met with in the agriculture of the Presidency, but further trials with them have been ordered, after which a more decisive opinion of their practicability will be given. If these so-called Swedish ploughs (they are for the most part copied from English designs) are ultimately adopted, they will, if possible, be manufactured in India, as the expense of the carriage from England adds considerably to their cost.

THE SERVICES.—Mr. J. K. Spence, C.S., will, it is stated, act as Postmaster-General of Bombay during the absence of Mr. James, on leave to England.—Surgeon-Major C. T. Eves is appointed Officiating Sanitary Commissioner, Inspector-General of Dispensaries, and Superintendent of Vaccination of Hyderabad Assigned Districts.—Dr. John T. Denison MacKenzie, M.D., F.R.C.S., Senior Surgeon to the J. J. Hospital, and Professor of Surgery and Dental Surgery, Grant Medical College, has been permitted by H.M.'s Secretary of State to retire from the India Medical Service. Subject to the confirmation of her Majesty's Government, his Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General in Council is pleased to recognise the appointment of Mr. Francisco Muraglia to be in charge of the office of the Consul for Italy at Bombay during the absence of Monsieur Le Chevalier Charles Grondona.

CANARA FORESTS.—The introduction of saw machinery into the Canara forests, which is due to the recommendation of Colonel Peyton, Conservator of Forests, has been followed by most satisfactory results—practically as well as financially. Considerable economy is effected in felling, as there is no longer the waste in chips which resulted from the use of the axe. The machines also utilise much timber which the axe failed to bring into the market. The new system has also had the effect of lowering the price of timber in the neighbourhood, and there is said to be a considerable saving to Government in the cost of carrying the timber, which was formerly carried long distances in the rough. It appears that the capabilities of the machinery are equal to an annual outturn of 1,11,000 cubic feet of sawn timber, and that, in its present situation, there is enough timber to keep the mill at work for eight or ten years, at the expiration of which period the machinery can of course be moved to a new site. This contingency has not escaped the Government of India, nor has it overlooked the expediency of preparing a carefully considered working plan for the forests from which the timber is drawn.

QUICK WORK.—By the adoption of machine appliances in the Madras Carriage Factory, which were used at the suggestion of First-Class Conductor Robertson, of the above factory, the time occupied in the turning out of one hundred felines complete is half-a-day's labour of one saw-man and one day's labour of five carpenters, before the introduction of these appliances one saw-man and twenty carpenters were occupied the full day to turn out the same amount of work. In reading out the orders for the day on the 2nd inst. the Superintendent complimented Conductor Robertson on the success that attended his method of finishing such a large number of felines with such a large saving to Government. Artificer W. Spencer, a forgerman by trade in the same factory, was also complimented for showing a saving of Rs. 5-108 in each pair of gun-carriage wheels by turning them out in full under the steam hammer; before this the turning out of each pair of wheels engaged the services of a blacksmith for 2½ days, as they were turned out singly and then forged together. 1,000 pairs of wheels are now indented for, and under the new system they are expected to be finished in a very short time.—Madras Athenæum.

STATION TALK.

BAGHDAD, April 5.—A few miles above Kornah we come to a part of the river where two brothers are fighting for the supremacy over the Beni Lam tribe. . . . A few miles still higher up the Albin Mahomed tribe is misconducting itself. A sheikh of that tribe farmed the revenue of the country around from the Government for two years. He paid the first six months' collections in all right, but when he had collected the next six months' taxes, he deferred cashing up, and when he collected the following year's taxes he made off with the whole to the inland marshes. It is not easy to follow him there, and he has about £40,000 which the Ottoman Government does not see its way to recover. As he is in disgrace some of his countrymen, naturally think that whatever is done amiss in this region will be set down to him, so they have profited by the opportunity to rob the grain and other cargo boats going down the river. A fortnight ago they robbed a boat and killed nine men on board of her. A Government steamer coming up the river soon after this outrage had been committed, fired upon the perpetrators, but without much effect. Now cargo boats are afraid to venture down the river without a convoy. They therefore wait until forty or fifty get together, when they pay a Turkish steamer to escort them past the territory infested by the Alin bin Mahomed. At Erira's Tomb, a couple of hours further up the river, we saw a little fleet of cargo boats waiting for others to come down and join them, and the Turkish steamer lying close by until she was wanted. If good luck puts the Turks in possession of any of the Arabs who took part in these piracies they will certainly hang the delinquents. But it is not thought likely that they will just now take any active measures to bring the scoundrels to justice. The country is nearly denuded of troops. The last people that were hanged at Bussorah were the Arabs, who took part in an audacious attack upon the B.I. steamer Cashmere. They jumped on board her at night, struck the heads off a couple of the unfortunate firemen whom they met on deck, and got possession of a sum of Rs. 48,000, which they evidently had received certain information about. Nine of them were hanged, and river piracy received a check from which it is only now beginning to recover. Every ten or twenty miles along the banks we see Arab encampments of the rudest kind. The huts are built of reeds and mats, and are the creations of an hour. The Arab boys run along the grass, shouting to the passengers on the deck of the steamer, who throw them apples, onions, and cabbages to scramble for. When these gifts fall into the water the naked imps plunge in fearlessly, and swim after them, regardless of the swift current and the rush of the steamer. Sometimes the men, and even the women, join the boys in this exciting chase for the bikshish of the good-humoured passengers. The women, who would keep their faces veiled close doubtless on board the steamer, often throw aside their abbas or cloaks—their only garment—and dash into the river to swim after an onion or a head of cabbage, which they bear back, shouting in the exuberance of their satisfaction. In the lower regions of the river these Arabs appear to have herds of buffaloes only; higher up we see sheep and horses as well as cattle. The sheep do not always belong to the tribes. Wealthy natives of Baghdad are the owners of many of the flocks which they give into the charge of the Arabs for pasturage for fixed payments. Most of these Arabs are now amenable to the Turkish authority, and have dealings with the merchants of the towns. It is said that though they are not by any means incapable of a little business-like cheating, they will observe good faith on the whole in their bargains. If goods or money be entrusted to them they will conscientiously acquit themselves of the obligation incurred. They have all to pay tribute to the Government, which exacts one-third of the crops grown upon Government land, and one-fifth of those grown upon private property. A rent has also to be paid for land used for growing purposes. Thousands of acres are sown with corn or rice every year by the Arabs, and a good deal of grain is now exported. But nearly the whole of the land on either side of the river might be turned up with the plough to-morrow if only the ploughs and the ploughmen were here. Grass grows luxuriantly as far as the eye can reach, and when grass grows on these plains anything will grow. The patches of white earth where the saltpetre on the surface keep vegetation from growing are of no great extent, and sometimes for hours we see none of them. As we get further to the north, on the 4th and 5th of April, the banks become higher, and consequently irrigation becomes more difficult. The canals must be dug deeper, seven or eight feet instead of three or four—but in every other respect the country is as capable of profitable cultivation as along the Shat-el-Arab. As the summer advances the grass grows brown and withered, but there are patches which are always green, and on these flocks and herds graze. If irrigation were properly carried out, the whole of this vast and fertile territory would yield food for man, and abundant revenue for the State. If a couple of millions of Hindus were to colonise the banks of the Tigris! The country even now is improving. During the last fifteen or twenty years the Arabs have been brought into something like subordination, and cultivation is gradually extending. But on the five hundred miles of waterway between Bussorah and Baghdad there are only four places at which it is worth while for the river steamers to stop, even for a few minutes. For 150 miles before reaching Baghdad the steamer does not stop at all. And this, through the midst of boundless plains which are the most fertile and the most easily cultivated in the whole world. I send you this from on board the Blosse Lynch, at a point about 160 miles from Baghdad, profiting by the passing down on the river of the little marine steamer City of London. It has rained heavily all the morning, and the day is rather cold and raw. We expect to reach Baghdad to-morrow (Saturday), in the course of the afternoon.

Miscellaneous.

THE BANK OF BOMBAY has reduced its rates of interest and discount 1 per cent. all round.

H.E. SIR R. TEMPLE, accompanied by Dr. Waters and Lieutenant W. A. Plant, had left in the May Frere for a cruise on the coast. H.E. returned to Bombay from Alibaug on May 11.

MAJOR WATTS, Brigade-Major at Aden, has been ordered to proceed to Suez and report himself to Admiral Willoughby and join the force there, as none of the ships attached to the Expedition will touch at Aden.

DEATH OF MR. HALL.—On the 8th ultimo, Mr. Albert P. Hall, chief accountant to Messrs. Forbes and Co., of Bombay, died very suddenly at Mrs. Taylor's hotel, where he had been staying since his arrival from England about three months ago. At the inquest, death was attributed to heat apoplexy.

VISITORS TO ENGLAND.—The Hon. Mr. Mahomed Ali Rogay, late member of the Bombay Legislative Council, left for Venice on a travelling tour in Europe, by the last overland mail steamer. The Hon. Mr. Justice Melvill also left Brindisi on privilege leave for two months and twenty-four days.

MORE TRANSPORTS.—A number of Bombay regiments, in addition to those proceeding to sea this week, have been warned to be in readiness for active service. The Bombay Government, though not inviting tenders for more shipping, receives any that are sent in. We understand that arrangements have been made with the agents of the Ducal line of steamers running to Calcutta, to take up all these ships for the public service if they are wanted.

H.E. THE GOVERNOR.—The Governor of Bombay has done a great deal of good by subjecting the Commissariat Department to a very rigorous personal supervision, and introducing into it several outsiders who are not bound, as regards contractors, by the traditions of the Department. He has also completely outwitted some mercantile speculators in coals by arranging with the G.I.P. and B.B. and C.I. Railway Companies to supply the steamers of the transport fleet with coals at cost price.

RAGUNATH SAWANT BHONSLE, otherwise Baba Sahab, the young Chief of Sawant Wari, who has been in Bombay since the 23rd April, left early on the 30th April by the steamer Mahratta for Vingorla, whence he will proceed by land to Sawant Wari. The Chief, who is fifteen years of age, is a student of the Rajkumar College at Rajkote, and is now going home for the vacation. During his stay here Baba Sahab, escorted by Major Waller, v.c., the officer in "political charge," visited, among other places, the Dockyard and the turret-ship Abbyssinia.

MANUFACTURE OF ICE AT BOMBAY.—The Times of India tells us of a project which has been set on foot by Mr. Fred. Frank Egeron Cutler, senior partner of Messrs. Cutler and Co., which is to supply Bombay with better ice than that which comes from America. Will this ice be hard enough to be carried down the railway line to Poona is a question of interest to Poornaites. We are not anxious to sever our connection with Bombay in the matter of ice, but if the ice cannot be brought to Poona, we must needs set up an ice machine in Poona. We are now paying 4s. a pound, and in the best of times we pay 2s. We should think that the enterprise might be remunerative.—Daily Telegraph and Deccan Herald, May 9.

MUNICIPAL.—At a meeting of the Bombay Municipal Corporation on Friday Mr. Fazulbhoy Cassambhoy Ganjee was elected a member of the Town Council, in the room of the Hon. Mahomed Ali Rogay, who resigned his seat on going to England. Mr. Rahimtoola Mahomed Savani was also proposed, but secured four votes less than Mr. Fazulbhoy. The Municipal Corporation of Bombay have received from the local Government a resolution, directing that copy of the Commissioner's letter No. 2,929, dated 6th April last, with accompaniments, and copy of the Drainage Commission's Report, be forwarded to the Government of India with an expression of the opinion of the Government of Bombay that the work of draining this city is urgently needed, and with the earnest hope that it may be found possible to lend the Municipality the total sum asked for, sixty lakhs of rupees.

VERNACULAR PRESS ACT.—An enthusiastic meeting has been held at the Poona Town Hall, or Heerabaug, to memorialise the House of Commons against the Vernacular Press Act. The large hall of the building was crowded. Mr. Krishnaji, the ex-Dewan of Kutch, was called to the chair. The Chairman opened the proceedings by remarking that they had met there to memorialise the hon. the House of Commons against the Press Act, that he (the Chairman) had not the least doubt that the Government of India had passed the Act after great forethought and deliberation, having in mind the welfare of the people of this country, but that it did not meet with the views of the people, and hence it was the unpleasant duty of the meeting to appeal for redress to a higher tribunal. He (the Chairman) was quite certain that our laws as they stand are quite strong enough to crush anything that may appear like sedition in any indiscreet vernacular journal. After a few more remarks eight resolutions were placed before the meeting, and passed unanimously with great applause. Most of the speeches were in Marathi. After the resolutions were passed the memorial, which has been ably drawn up, was read. It was then proposed that this memorial, signed by the inhabitants of Poona, should be sent to Mr. Gladstone, and that he be requested to place it before the honourable House, and that Messrs. Gladstone, Fawcett, and others be requested to move the House in favour of their memorial. The greatest order and unanimity prevailed throughout the meeting. The meeting dispersed after a vote of thanks to the Chairman.

BRITISH BURMAH.

The Administration Report of British Burmah for 1876-77 furnishes some interesting accounts relative to that province. Murder, dacoity, robbery, and cattle theft decreased, but in dealing with house-breaking the police signally failed. The jails were crowded as never before, and in them the death-rate was much higher between the ages of sixteen and forty than between forty and sixty. The cattle-disease prevailed chiefly in the Arakan and Tenasserim divisions. In the former 60,000 head of cattle are said to have perished. Prospecting for earth-oil in the Akyab and Kyauk-phayoo districts has been prosecuted with an energy which promises success, and a well yielding 200 gallons a day has lately been discovered. Cholera appeared in an epidemic form at Akyab and Prome, and 3,678 deaths throughout the country were attributable to it. Deaths from small-pox, though below the average, were nearly twice as numerous as in the previous year. In February, 1877, a very alarming series of riots took place at Renoung. The Chinese, about 2,000 in number, who work in the tin mines, rose and murdered a number of Siamese, and set fire to some adjacent villages. They resisted in a body the attempt of the Siamese authorities to arrest six of the ringleaders, and finally drove the former into a small fort. Being ill-armed, however, they could do no more; and in the end, after 300 Chinese and thirty Siamese had been killed, the insurgents were compelled to flee in various directions. A village just within the northern border was attacked by a gang of Shandooos, and eight of the inhabitants were carried off captive, while three were either killed or wounded. Previous experience had shown that it was vain to seek satisfaction by peaceful means, so a party of a hundred men, well-armed, penetrated to the stronghold of the Shandooos, some days' march to the north, and the place being evacuated on the approach of the force, the village was destroyed. The captives were afterwards brought back by the headmen of the village tribe, who promised to amend their ways in future. On the occasion of a dacoity in June, 1876, in which £5,000 in silver specie were carried off, no assistance could be obtained from the Governor of the district. An outbreak in the Moulmein Jail was once commenced by five long-termed prisoners, who, while being locked up in a work-shed, seized some tools and with three others rushed out into the work-yard. The inner gate being open for a cart to pass in, offered no obstacle, and the eight men made their way to the outer gate. The turnkey outside threw the gate open and fled in terror. The convicts then made for the police guard-house, outside the jail, and the police running away, got possession of arms and ammunition. With these they returned to the jail, broke open the gates of three more work-yards, and tried to induce other prisoners to join them. Only eleven did so. In the meantime an alarm had been given, and a party of the 17th M.N.I. had arrived. On meeting them the prisoners fired on them, and the fire was returned. Two prisoners got back safe into the jail, two were recaptured unhurt, eight were severely wounded, and seven were killed. A month after this, Mr. Rundle, the jailor, was struck down by a prisoner armed with a piece of wood, but was rescued by the deputy jailor and a prisoner-warder. In the Rangoon Jail, on the 6th January, the deputy jailor, Mr. Cobie, was murdered by a European life-convict, already under sentence for murder. Cultivation is increasing year by year steadily and satisfactorily, considering that the country is thinly populated, and that labour is both scarce and dear. The number of births registered during the year was 57,007, or 20·10 per mille of population; that of deaths was 42,401, or 14·41 per mille. The population in 1875-76 numbered 3,010,662.—Times of India.

While on the subject of British Burmah, we notice that a recent Gazette contains a letter from Colonel Sladen, Commissioner of the Arracan Division, on Mr. Savage's fortunate discovery of oil on the Eastern Borongas. The distance of the spot from the shore is about thirty-five miles from Akyab. The well at its mouth was about fifteen feet in diameter, and had been dug out to a depth of some thirty feet. Here boring commenced, and when carried to a depth of thirty-six feet the workmen were surprised by a sudden outburst of gas and oil with loud subterranean noises. They had only time to make their escape to the surface by the ladders when the oil poured in large quantities. The oil is now bucketed out in native fashion with no more difficulty than if it was water. The morning the Commissioner saw it 250 gallons had been taken out. Mr. Savage's success has given a great impetus to other prospectors. The concessions by Government are liberal, a thirty years' lease of the land, the first three years free of charge, after that a five per cent. royalty on the value of the oil extracted. We must all hope with Colonel Sladen that this discovery may help to develop a new source of wealth in the Arracan Division. As the Government geologists have been so at fault in their opinion regarding oil at the Borongas, it is possible that they may have been equally so, with reference to gold in the Shoay Gyeen District.

COLONEL CARNEGIE, of the Marine Battalion, who was sent up the Persian Gulf and as far as Baghdad on a special mission some little time ago by the Indian Government, has returned to Bombay.

EAST INDIA PUBLIC WORKS COMMITTEE.

The committee reassembled on the 23rd ult., and Sir George Campbell continued his statements regarding the operations of the Public Works Department in extending their system of irrigation on the improved principles of recent years. The hon. member considered the subject in connection with the views he entertains of modes of averting droughts, scarcity, and the famines resulting from these causes. He described geographically the situation of the rivers of India, and as they had been applied to subserve an extensive canal system of irrigating the land. The nature of the cereals cultivated, and on what soils, was described—rice, not the most important grain, was grown on the Eastern and Western coasts, but it proved injurious to the land, and was not so profitable a cultivation as wheat and barley and other grains which were grown on the dry lands of the North-West Provinces, for instance. The rice districts were subject to drought, and in 1873 the rice crops of Bengal were destroyed by drought, and a famine arose. Rice famines in Bengal have been frequent. It is a sudden visitation, and the calamity the greater because the natives in rice districts cultivated nothing else, and it was almost their exclusive food. On the dry lands of the North-West Provinces a variety of grains are cultivated, and not rice to any extent; hence the populations, although subject to famine, do not find it so acute a visitation as the rice famines of Bengal proper.

The witness explained the practical modes of irrigation on high-water and low-water systems as applied in Southern India. The Godavery, Kistna, and Canvery Canals and anicuts were the most promising examples of irrigation by means of the overflow of rivers. The canals and anicuts of these districts, which control the water of rivers, were always well supplied with water, and consequently the soil was cultivated to every possible advantage. On the low-water system prevailing in the North-Western Provinces, Scinde, and the Punjab, wheat, barley, and other grains are grown. In the course of his remarks on the Godavery irrigation, Sir George Campbell paid a high tribute to the skill and energy of Sir Arthur Cotton as the engineer officer under whose direction these works as we now find them were constructed.

The witness next gave some account of the financial conditions under which canal irrigation proceeded, noticing that, although on the Godavery, Kistna, &c., the canals had proved profitable and successful experiments, the earlier attempts at this form of irrigation had proved unsuccessful and ruinously costly. The first fifty miles of the Ganges Canal was an instance, the cost of construction of which was enormous without the reproductive results occurring that were anticipated. The northern system of canals had proved far more expensive to construct than the southern system.

Sir G. Campbell next took the Ganges Canal as a test by which to ascertain the benefits to cultivation and the returns to revenue of this form of irrigation, and proved that from 4 to 2½ per cent., and not 7 per cent., on the capital was the just return if the debt incurred on the works were taken into the calculation. The canal passed through lands that had always been fertile; it had not, therefore, converted an impoverished soil into a fertile one. He argued that if a canal does not pay for its construction, this fact proved that it was not required.

Sir G. Campbell next adverted to the Saone Canal, which had been almost uselessly constructed and at enormous cost to the Government. He had advised the Government, when they submitted the estimates for this work to him as then Lieut.-Governor of Bengal in 1870, not to undertake the project without being provided with more engineering knowledge. Results proved that the Saone Canal should never have been constructed; it had been a complete failure.

After further statements regarding irrigation works, Sir G. Campbell reviewed the general operations of the Public Works Department, and gave it as his opinion that there was ample room for reform in the constitution of that establishment. It needed a better administrative system. He recommended for the further carrying out of irrigation works thoroughly and effectively, the appointment of a council or special tribunal to supervise the Public Works Department itself. The witness was in favour of the establishment of a Sinking Fund to meet the future cost of works, and prevent resorting to big loans.

The committee met again on May 30, when Sir G. Campbell's examination was temporarily suspended, and Colonel J. G. Fife, R.E., Under-Secretary of Irrigation to the Bombay Government, and who had acted as Chief Engineer for Irrigation Works in the Deccan, was examined. He gave evidence on the nature and character of the more modern works constructed in the Presidency; naming the works seriatim, and pointing out why they were designed, and how constructed, and carried out. He described the physical character of the country in the districts of the Deccan, and showed how necessary, and yet how difficult to construct without enormous cost, were the irrigation works required. The witness described the irrigation works in Sind. They are inundation canals, the names of the principal of which are the Narra, Gar, Bigarri, Sukkur, Shadapur, Futali, Aliwal, Mitrow, and the Thur. A mode of clearing these canals is adopted after the inundations. This is a practice resorted to the better to benefit by the next opportunity of filling the channels. It is an imperative process. The clearance of the channels has cost from £12,500 to £70,000 per annum. It has been known for the whole population of a district to turn out for the clearance of the channels. The irrigation derived from the inundation canal system has been much improved, and produces now one-fourth more business than it did a few years ago. But the losses to Government arising from the difficulty of constructing suitable irrigation works on the alluvial soil of Sind have been considerable, and the land revenue, therefore, suffers. The total capital outlay on the Bombay system of canals since British occupation has been nearly seven millions sterling (as we understood). Two millions have been expended on canals in Sind alone. The canal irrigation works of Sind, from producing £240,000 yearly, now produces about £340,000. It has been calculated that the works as they now stand pay 15 per cent. on capital. Colonel Dickens had deposed that generally irrigation works did not become remunerative until after they had been twelve years in operation. The Sind canals have some time since paid good percentage on capital. The cost of extending and keeping the canals in order is about £50,000 per annum. The witness said he advocated a much larger expenditure on extensions. The irrigation, although it has cost much, is of a serviceable kind, and the supply of water is ready to meet a great demand, while it seldom fails, and then not generally, but in some isolated place. After hearing the witness on a variety of other topics connected with the Bombay system of irrigation, the committee adjourned.

Miscellaneous.

H.M.S. "CROCODILE."—The Crocodile, Indian troopship, Captain Sharpe, made a commission trial of her machinery on Wednesday morning, under the superintendence of Mr. Icely, inspector of machinery. With a mean steam pressure of 27·37 lb. in the boilers and 18·587 lb. in the cylinders, and 53 revolutions per minute, the horse-power indicated amounted to 3,250·90. The speed realised was 13·36 knots per hour. The trial was perfectly satisfactory.

EXPORT OF SPECIE.—The Peninsular and Oriental steamer Australia has left with £243,920, of which £44,000 is in bar silver for Bombay, and £10,000 for Calcutta. The sums consigned to Penang and Shanghai in dollars amount to £80,440 and £57,810 respectively, and in addition £47,000 is in bar silver for the latter place. The balance is made up of some insignificant amounts of gold and silver coin.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The tenders for £400,000 in bills on India were received on May 29 at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were:—To Calcutta, £340,000, at an average rate of 1s. 8·387d., and to Bombay, £60,000, at an average of 1s. 8·375d. Tenders on the former Presidency at 1s. 8½d. will receive about 61 per cent., all above that price in full, while tenders on Bombay at 1s. 8½d. will receive in full. The Calcutta average rate is fractionally higher than last week, and the amount allotted at the above price being about 30 per cent. less than the present allotment is rather more favourable.

THE SUEZ CANAL COMPANY.—This Company have announced the dividends for 1877 that will be proposed at the annual meeting of shareholders to be held next month. The shares will receive, besides the interest of 5 per cent. on the capital, a supplement of 7fr. 98c. and a fraction, together 32fr. 98c. for the year, against 23fr.

55½c. for 1876, and 26fr. 88c. for 1875. The "actions de jouissance," or redeemed shares, will receive only the 7fr. 98c. The delegations get 11fr. 75½c. in addition to the 5 per cent. interest, or 36fr. 75½c.; the redeemed delegations, 11fr. 75½c. The founders' shares obtain a dividend of 436fr. 50c. net, after 200fr. 29c. for 1876, and 106fr. 17c. for 1875.

THE P. and O. COMPANY.—The directors of the Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company state in their report for the half-year ended March 31 last that the revenue, which last year showed an increase of £100,000 over the previous year, this time shows a falling off of £102,000. The expenditure is somewhat lower also, and the directors hope that the revenue for the remainder of the year may show an improvement. An interim dividend at the rate of 3½ per cent. per annum is recommended, as against a 4 per cent. rate at this time last year. It is stated that the debenture debt, which at the date of the last report stood at £414,500, will be reduced a further £78,500 by June 1, and it is hoped that by the end of the year this debt will hardly exceed £250,000.

INDIANS AT MALTA.—The Malta correspondent of the Daily News, in a letter dated May 16, says:—"The Indian troops will be disposed as follows:—Infantry, Jezirah Island and Fort Manoel; Sappers, Point Dragut and Fort Tigne; Cavalry, Marsa and Race-course. The Infantry and Sappers will be in good positions, plenty of fresh air, and what is most important, capital sea-bathing all around their camps. The Cavalry in the Marsa have also been well looked after, and the best part of the ground picked out for them. Borings have been driven, and at no point will there be less than thirteen feet down to water. These precautions having been taken, and our dry season having set in, it is to be hoped that the gallant fellows will be in some better galloping locality before a change of season brings a chance of fever."

INDIAN APPEAL.—Yesterday the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council gave judgment in the case of "The Maharajah Sing v. the Maharani Koer," in which an application was made for a rehearing, on the ground that the applicant, who claimed to be the heir, had not been represented when the Judicial Committee heard the application in July last. The property at Oude was said to be worth about "one million and-a-half sterling." Sir J. Stephen, Q.C., Mr. Doyné, and Mr. Ross were for the petitioner; Mr. Leith, Q.C., and Mr. J. Grattan on the other side, but were not called upon. Their lordships refused to allow the case to be reopened, and referred the applicant to the Indian Courts.

MADRAS IRRIGATION AND CANAL COMPANY.—In the report of the Madras Irrigation and Canal Company for the past year, which has just been issued, the directors state that they "are able to make the important announcement to proprietors that the negotiations with the Government mentioned in recent reports for establishing a system of navigation have progressed satisfactorily, and that there has been repaid to the company on account of the capital formerly expended upon surveys and works not included in the section constructed, the sum of £60,000 towards meeting the required outlay. The company will therefore soon be in the position of being able to make productive the large portion of its capital, amounting to £380,000 which was expended to render the canal navigable, and which hitherto the directors have been unable to make available for purposes of revenue." The report contains much detailed information derived from the reports of the officers of the company, which seem generally to show satisfactory development.

EASTERN BENGAL RAILWAY COMPANY.—From the accounts of the Eastern Bengal Railway Company which appear in the fortieth report, just issued, the gross receipts for the half-year ended Dec. 31 were £266,331, against £194,307; and the working expenses were £93,408, against £83,974; leaving the net earnings at £172,923, as compared with £110,333. The number of passengers carried was 929,672, against 825,919, there being an increase in every class except third-class travellers, who were nearly 10,000 fewer in number than in the corresponding period. The carriage of goods of all kinds figured for an increase, the total being 249,054 tons, against 179,509 tons. Calculating the rupee at 1s. 10d., the profit in excess of the guaranteed interest amounted to £99,601, and after deducting £2,612 as a contribution to the provident fund for the benefit of the servants in India, there was £96,989 to be divided between the Government and the company. The losses by exchange, amounting to £3,287, have still to be taken into consideration, and the available balance is then sufficiently large to enable a dividend of £2 to be paid to the shareholders in addition to the guaranteed interest of £2. 10s. At the ordinary half-yearly meeting of the shareholders, held on May 27, at the offices, 44, Gresham-street, Mr. John Farley Leith, Q.C., M.P., in the chair, the report was adopted.

CAPTAIN TROTTER, R.E.—At the meeting of the Royal Geographical Society, held on the 27th ult., Sir Rutherford Alcock in the chair, the President presented the Victoria (Patron's) medal to Captain Henry Trotter, R.E., for his survey operations while with the late Mission to Eastern Turkestan under Sir Douglas Forsyth, and for his additions to the map of Central Asia, by uniting his own work on the Upper Oxus with the exploration of the Mulla and Havildar further to the west, so as to give for the first time a nearly continuous delineation of the course of the river from its sources in the Pamir Lakes to the frontiers of Balkh. Captain Trotter, in acknowledging the honour, said that some of the pleasantest moments of the traveller in distant lands were spent in thoughts of home and of the welcome he might expect if he had the good fortune to return. It was not, however, given to all to realise that welcome, and his comrade, the late Dr. Stoliczka, who was his constant companion in all his wanderings in Central Asia, died a martyr to duty when within a few days of the end of their journey. Captain Trotter said it was a source of gratification to him to find himself supported on this occasion by Sir Douglas Forsyth, who had so ably conducted the Embassy to Kashgar, and to whose zeal in the cause of geography he was indebted for the opportunities which had led to the discoveries alluded to by the President.

THE NEW INDIAN NATIVE PRESS LAW.—Mr. Farley Leith, M.P., has just presented to the House of Commons a petition of the Bombay Branch of the East India Association, protesting against the new Native Press Law as a measure of an entirely retrograde character, quite out of harmony with the principles on which the British administration in India has hitherto been conducted; and that it is calculated to aggravate the very mischief which it is designed to prevent; one very serious objection to the main provision of the Act is that the power of interference with the Press is vested in certain executive officers, with an appeal to certain higher executive officers; and that the judicial courts are precluded from entertaining any jurisdiction in matters that may be alleged by local executive officials to fall within the scope of the Act. The petitioners point out that this stretching of the powers of the executive in India at the expense of the judiciary appears to be part of a furtively designed system, this being only one of several measures in which the object is aimed at; and it is equivalent to the introduction of the old system of administration by Government orders and proclamations, only in another and slightly disguised form. The petitioners add that the public feeling in Bombay against this measure is so strong that a meeting of the inhabitants to memorialise the authorities regarding it was generally desired, and has only been postponed for the present, in view of the unsettled state of the relations between the European Powers, and the consequent necessity for avoiding anything which might by any possibility embarrass the Government.—(Communicated.)

THE STAR OF INDIA.—The Hon. Ashley Eden, on whom her Majesty has conferred the honour of a Knight Commandership of the "Most Exalted Order of the Star of India," is the third son of Robert John, third Lord Auckland (sometime Bishop of Bath and Wells), by his marriage with Mary, eldest daughter of the late Mr. Francis E. Hurt, of Alderwasley, Derbyshire. He was born in the year 1831, and was educated at Rugby and at Haileybury College, from which he entered the East India Company's Civil Service on the Bengal Establishment in 1852. Having held several inferior posts, he acted as Secretary to the Government of Bengal from 1860 down to 1871, and was a member of the Council of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal during the two last years of his tenure. He was appointed Chief Commissioner of British Burmah in 1871, and was promoted to the Lieutenant-Governorship of Bengal in the course of last year. Sir Ashley Eden married Eva Maria, daughter of the late Vice-Admiral Rowley Money, C.B., but was left a widower in 1877.—Among other representative Indian officials who have obtained the high honour of the Star of India, Mr. James Bellot Richey may be especially mentioned. This gentleman, who was a member of Exeter College, Oxford, and took his degree in 1855, passed into the Bombay Civil Service by competitive examination the year before the Indian Mutiny. He was more than once officially commended for the discharge of important duties during that agitated period, and afterwards went through the grades of civil employ with unflinching credit until the breaking out of the troubles at Baroda, in the settlement of which he bore a very prominent share, displaying as much intrepidity in face of the disturbances which occurred in the city as skill and judgment in the management of the political question. Since that time Mr. Richey has presided over one of the most important Commissions ever issued in India—that, namely, upon the "Deccan Riots;" and the Official Report issued by him, in conjunction with Messrs. Lyon, Colvin, and the Rao Bahadur Sumbhooprasad, is beyond dispute the most valuable State document as yet published upon the pressing questions of famine and peasant-indebtedness over Western India.

INDIAN AGRICULTURE.—Mr. F. C. Danvers read on the 17th May, at the Society of Arts, an elaborate paper on "Agriculture in India," in which he attempted to show in detail how famines might be averted by improved husbandry, and more especially by the importation of English methods and implements. In conclusion, he pointed out that, besides the benefits that would accrue to India herself from the introduction of improved methods of cultivation by increasing her food supplies available for export and for home use, and by rendering the crops more secure against failure in unpropitious seasons, this country also has most positive interests, direct and indirect, in the successful attainment of this object. India now supplies this country with over 3½ million cwt. of wheat, or between 1-13th and 1-14th of its total imports of that grain, and, with the exception of the United States of America and Russia, it furnishes us with a greater amount of wheat than any other country. The advantages that would follow a vast increase in the exports of wheat from India to England would be shared by our merchants and shipowners, as well as by the growers, while the demand that a more scientific system of agriculture would cause for improved implements and machinery would also benefit the manufacturers of this country. Exclusive of Bengal and Assam, the area of British India under cultivation amounts to 119,523,596 acres, while there remain 316,427,764 acres uncultivated. It would thus appear that after allowing ample margin for towns, pastures, forests, fallows, and other lands not immediately available for cultivation, there must yet exist immense areas capable of being brought under the plough, and awaiting only the industry and energy necessary to cause them to bring forth fruits for the service of man. In the discussion which followed, Sir Arthur Cotton dwelt upon the evil of burning the manure in India as fuel, and said that cheap transit enabling the peasants to be supplied from the coal mines and forests was the only thing that could put an end to so ruinous a practice. He also condemned the method of charging for irrigation by the acre, instead of by the cubic yard. Almost all India, he continued, is virgin soil. It has never been cultivated more than two or three inches deep. Deeper ploughing, when tried by way of experiment on one of the model farms, gave marvellous results. The model farms were in his opinion most valuable institutions, and there should be one in every district in India. The natives were exceedingly intelligent and incomparably more teachable than Englishmen. Cheap transit irrigation, deep cultivation, and plantation, these four things would make India a garden. Mr. Dutt, an Indian gentleman, said Indian rice was a surface feeder, and would not grow if the land was ploughed deep. He spoke strongly in favour of plantation. Mr. Cotton, of the Bengal Civil Service, who in a Government report had expressed his own views as well as those of the Bengal Government (Sir G. Campbell being Governor at the time) against model farms, now said that they had had many model farms in Bengal, but all had failed, both agriculturally and financially. He knew no instance of successful scientific agriculture in India. If the Indians once saw that it paid them, they would accept any improvements we could offer, but they were already very skilful agriculturists. Dr. Balfour said that the forests were year by year receding further from civilised man and the price of fuel increasing. He could not but think that with greater care of the small tanks the situation would be improved. Mr. C. Walford, Mr. Collins, late Government Economic Botanist at the Straits Settlements, Mr. Elliot, and Rajah Rambal Sing, also addressed the meeting. In moving the thanks of the meeting to Mr. Danvers for his interesting and instructive paper the Chairman, Mr. Caird, C.B., said that, though he often heard India spoken of as a poor country, the broad fact that she maintained to the square mile a population greater than that of either France or Germany, both of which had other important industries besides agriculture, seemed to show either that her soil was unusually rich, or her agriculture by no means so defective as was generally represented. There was, indeed, no plant of value which could not be produced in India, and in this country we, during the last three unproductive years, had experienced the advantage of her agriculture, both in the direct supplies and the consequent check to the rise of price, through the increasing quantities of wheat she had been able to send to us, and which in 1877 reached one-ninth of our total foreign imports. With a fertile soil, an abundant supply of labour, extensive railway communication on all the main lines of travel, and vast works of irrigation already executed, India under good government and with time must prosper. If he should have the good fortune to return from India he might be able to speak from personal knowledge of the subject, one branch of which, as a member of the Famine Commission, it would be his duty to investigate. That the elements of prosperity were there was unquestionable, and this country had undertaken a responsibility for their proper use which could not either with safety or honour, be neglected.

India in Parliament.

INDIAN TROOPS.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FRIDAY, May 24.—In reply to Mr. WADDY, Mr. E. STANHOPE stated that the terms and conditions of service of the native forces remain precisely what they were when Acts 21 and 22 Vic. cap. 106 were passed. There had been a slight alteration in the form of attestation only, made by the Governor-General of India in Council in 1869.—In reply to Mr. FAWCETT, the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER explained that no portion of the revenues of India had at any time been devoted to defray the expenses of the transport of Indian troops to Malta, and therefore no such expenditure could be sanctioned by the Council of the Secretary of State for India.

Mr. FAWCETT gave notice that on Monday he would ask the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether it was not provided by the Government of India Act, that no grant or appropriation of any of the revenues of India could be allowed without obtaining the assent of the majority of the Council of the Secretary of State for India, and whether such a grant or appropriation must not be made when the money of India was advanced to defray those expenses.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, May 26.—CAPTAINS IN THE INDIAN ARMY.—In reply to Colonel ARBUTHNOT, Colonel STANLEY said the regulations were not quite clear, but would be made so, as to whether captains serving in India who might complete twenty years' service would be compelled to defray the cost of their passage to England, and that of their successors to India? It might be necessary to consult the India-office on the subject.

THE RECENT FAMINE IN INDIA.—In reply to Mr. B. POTTER, Mr. E. STANHOPE stated that his attention had been drawn to a statement in the Times of the 15th instant, that the mortality caused by the recent famine in Madras, Bombay, and Malsur was not far short of six millions; and that so soon as full information reached the Government it would be laid before the House. Great as had been the mortality, he could not suppose it such as represented; and the diminution of the population must be attributed in some measure to a large emigration from the distressed districts.

INDIAN TROOPS.—Mr. E. STANHOPE, in reply to Mr. O'DONNELL, said that no official information had been received on the subject of an alleged act of insubordination in the 31st Regiment of Bengal Native Infantry, but that there appeared to be no reason for attaching any importance to the proceeding.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER, in reply to Mr. FAWCETT, * said there had been no appropriation of the revenues of India for the movement of Indian troops to Malta, and consequently no case had arisen for referring to the Secretary of State in Council for assent.—Mr. E. STANHOPE, in reply to Major NOLAN, explained that while the wives of European soldiers ordered to Malta remained in India they received free quarters and subsistence allowance if European, or in some cases of mixed descent, at eight rupees a month; if otherwise, at six and a-half rupees a month; their children under sixteen, at two and a-half rupees a month. The wives and children receive, in addition, half and quarter rations respectively free.

Mr. FAWCETT, in reply to Mr. DILLWYN, said he should not bring forward his motion on the Indian Army that evening; and gave notice to postpone the motion until an early day, or until the Indian Budget.

On the question that the House resolve itself into a Committee of Supply, Sir GEORGE CAMPBELL moved that "a Select Committee be appointed to inquire into the cost, direct and indirect, of her Majesty's Indian troops serving within the old Indian limits east of the Cape of Good Hope."—Colonel STANLEY offered no objection on the part of Government to an investigation of the kind proposed; but it must be deferred to a later period of the Session. The War Office had intended to appoint a Department Committee of its own so soon as the movement was completed.—Mr. C. B. DENISON thanked the Government for assenting to the inquiry.—Mr. HAYTER pointed out that the Committee of 1867 had already made it clear that Indian troops could only be employed at a very great cost.—Mr. RYLANDS was stopped by the SPEAKER from discussing the general policy of the measure under consideration.—Sir E. COLEBROOKE was favourable to the experiment, but thought that the army should first be put upon a particular footing to make it opportune.—Sir H. HAVELOCK predicted that the result of an inquiry would prove that Indian troops could only be employed in great emergencies; while Mr. A. MILLS expected from it totally opposite results.—Mr. CHILDERS asked for further information as to the exact points which the new Committee was to go into; after which Sir G. CAMPBELL's amendment was negatived without a division.—Mr. RYLANDS then resumed his speech, and stated at length his objection to the policy of menace and demonstrations; and Mr. E. JENKINS condemned the employment of Indian troops as likely to raise the jealousy of Europe and to create dangers in India.—Mr. GLADSTONE repeated his reasons for believing the measure to be illegal, and contended that the Government had broken the Common Law by increasing the standing army without the sanction of Parliament, and had violated the 41st, 55th, and 57th sections of the Government of India Act.—Mr. E. STANHOPE showed that the 57th section did not restrict the services within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the old East India Company.—Sir A. GORDON, on the other hand, insisted that the Indian Native Army was not liable to serve out of those limits.—Mr. MUNTZ said he felt so strongly on the constitutional point that he must with regret vote against the Speaker leaving the chair; while Sir GEORGE BOWYER denied that any constitutional difficulty existed, and ridiculed the suggestion that the Bill of Rights extended beyond the Kingdom.—Mr. HORWOOD and Dr. LUSH spoke against the Vote, and Mr. B. COCHRANE deprecated the renewal of the constitutional issue which had already been decided; but Mr. NEWDEGATE insisted on explaining once more his reason for believing that the Government had broken the India Act of 1868.—Mr. JACOB BRIGHT insisted that no emergency had been shown or in fact existed; while Mr. HARCASCADE rejoiced in the measure as showing that India, instead of being a source of weakness, was a strength to the Empire.—Lord HARTINGTON said that if the opposition to the Speaker leaving the chair were pushed to a division he could not take part in it, because it was unprecedented and could lead to no practical result, except postponing the Estimates until Thursday. There had been so much mystery and so many irreconcilable statements in justification of their policy that, until the Government could lay its full case before the House, it was impossible to discuss it. At the same time, lest the granting of this Estimate be interpreted as a vote of confidence, he pointed out that all that Parliament had done was to sanction the policy of preparation, and warned the Government against presuming upon this to commit the country to war.—The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER replied that the Government had never at any time wished to plunge the country into war; on the contrary, they believed that their measures—and this among others—were calculated to avert war and to bring about a peaceful and permanent settlement. He agreed that this was an inconvenient opportunity for challenging the policy of the Government, but admitted that it would be within the competence of Parliament to express its opinion on it at some future time.—After some remarks from Mr. O'DONNELL and Mr. FAWCETT, who declined to follow the course recommended by Lord Hartington, the House divided, when the motion that the Speaker do leave the chair was carried by 214 to 40.

* Denotes that these questions, or notices of them, will be found in the present, or a previous number of Allen's Indian Mail.

The House then went into Committee of Supply, and the two votes in the Army and Navy Departments, for the Indian contingent, were agreed to.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, May 30.—THE SHAH OF PERSIA.—In answer to Lord E. FITZMAURICE, Mr. BOURKE said the Shah of Persia does intend to visit this country. His Majesty's visit will be, by his own desire, incognito, his wish being to visit various institutions and manufactories and study them in detail. His Majesty's wishes, therefore, will be carefully respected.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FRIDAY, May 31.—INDIAN BUDGET.—Mr. STANHOPE informed Mr. Arthur Mills that in the present state of public business it was impossible for him to fix a day for making the annual financial statement relating to India.

FEUDATORY STATES IN INDIA.

The weekly telegram of the Times, dated Calcutta, May 26, contains the following statement. It is interesting and significant:—

The military strength of the principal feudatory States has engaged rather prominently of late the attention of the Indian Government. The result is the circulation among subordinate Governments and administrations, and among political officers, of a very important despatch declaratory of the Government policy. Feudatory armies are required henceforth to be limited to numbers sufficient for internal protection. No number in excess of this requirement can be permitted. It is said that, with due regard to the safety of the Empire, the Governor-General has, after much consideration, arrived at the conclusion that the utilisation of the feudatory armies for Imperial defence is at present impracticable, though no doubt would be felt as to the propriety of so utilising these forces if a practical scheme were devised. The reduction of forces in excess of internal requirements is to be insisted upon, save in certain exceptional circumstances, such as where the Imperial garrisons would be required were it not that their duty is performed by feudatory troops, or, again, where these troops perform police duties only. It is further required that great caution should be exercised in permitting feudatory troops to be drilled by European officers. The Government directs that arms of precision are not to be supplied, and is desirous of being kept fully informed as to the numbers, organisation, equipment, and discipline of these forces, as it wishes to dispel all mystery in reference to feudatory armies and to encourage the native chiefs to treat the Government with perfect confidence in this matter. The duty is also enjoined of periodical inspections not only of the feudatory troops, but also of the various State arsenals. To endeavour as much as possible to curtail extravagant military establishments, military operations, it is said, ought to be confined to the object of the personal security of the chiefs and the security of internal peace. The immediate necessity of this despatch is said to have been occasioned by the difficulty which has been felt in dealing with the applications from native States for improvement in their armaments, in regard to the equipment of troops, the importation of arms, and the services of European officers for instruction and drill.

SKULL OF A WHALE.—About a fortnight ago the skull of a whale of the Rorqual tribe, the largest of the whale tribe, was washed ashore on the Clifton beach. The length of this skull from the end of the jawbone to the bone connecting it with the body was sixteen feet, and the width at the base about eight feet. Several vain attempts were made to drag the skull to the Kurachi Museum; but at last Captain Burgess, of the Royal Artillery, organised a body of fifty lascars, who, with the aid of half-a-dozen pairs of bullocks, quantities of tackle, and an ordnance cart, brought this curious deposit from ocean depths, and it now adorns the Kurachi Museum, and has astonished large numbers of natives ever since.—Beacon, April 29.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE FOR INDIA IN COUNCIL HEREBY GIVES NOTICE that the Government of India have informed him that it is their intention to issue the following NOTIFICATION in India on this date:

Simla, May 27, 1878.

Notification.—By the Government of India, Financial Department.

His Excellency the Right Honourable the Governor-General in Council has resolved to borrow two and a-half crores of rupees for the public service, in the following manner:—

2. Promissory Notes will be issued for the said amount, bearing interest at the rate of four and a-half per cent. annum, payable half-yearly, on the 15th day of March and the 15th day of September. The form and conditions of these notes will be, mutatis mutandis, those of the transfer loan of the 1st of May, 1865, except as to rate of interest, and that they will not be discharged before the 15th day of September, 1893. No note will be issued for less than 100 rupees, or for any amount not being a multiple of 100 rupees.

3. Tenders for the whole or part of the above-named sum of two and a-half crores of rupees will be received by the Comptroller-General from this date to noon of Monday, the 24th June next.

4. Each tender must be addressed, in the form annexed to this Notification, to the Comptroller General, Treasury Buildings, Calcutta, and enclosed in a sealed cover superscribed "Tender for Loan."

5. Tenders will be opened at the office of the Comptroller General in Calcutta, at noon on Monday, the 24th June next.

6. Accepted tenders must be paid, in three equal instalments, on the following dates:—

One third on Monday, the 8th day of July, 1878.

One third on Thursday, the 8th day of August, 1878.

One third on Monday the 9th day of September, 1878.

But the whole or any part of any tender may be paid at any time after its acceptance is notified.

7. Interest upon each payment will be paid in advance, from the date when such payment is received, to the 15th September next.

8. Payment of any accepted tender may be made to the account of the Government in one of the Presidency Banks of Bengal, Madras, or Bombay, or in any branch of any of the Presidency Banks, or into any Government treasury or treasuries in India that may be named in the tender.

9. Each tender must be accompanied by a receipt from one of the Presidency banks of Bengal, Madras, or Bombay, or one of their branches, or from an officer in charge of some Government treasury, or by a cheque on a banker in Calcutta, Madras, or Bombay, or by Government promissory notes made payable to the Comptroller General, for not less than one hundredth, or if the tender be for less than five lacs of rupees then for not less than one fiftieth part of the tender; this deposit of one or two per cent. will be treated as in part payment of the last instalment, and will be forfeited if the allotment is not fully taken up; a cash deposit may, after the tender in support of which it is made is accepted, be replaced by a Government promissory note.

10. Scrip receipts for instalments paid will be given by the Presidency Banks of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay, or their branches, or by the officers in charge of the Government treasuries at which payment is made; these receipts will, as soon as possible, be exchanged for promissory notes.

11. The minimum rate at which tenders will be accepted will be recorded under the signature of the Comptroller General, and placed upon the table, in a sealed envelope, when the tenders are opened, but will not be declared unless some tender is rejected only because it is below the recorded minimum.

12. The rate stated in a tender must not contain a fraction of an anna; if a rate containing a fraction of an anna is inserted in any tender such fraction will be struck out, and the tender treated as if the rate did not contain such fraction of an anna.

13. Tenders at the recorded minimum rate, and at rates above the recorded minimum, will be accepted in the order of the rates tendered, beginning with the highest rate; the amount allotted at the lowest rate at which tenders are accepted will be divided amongst those who have tendered at this rate, in proportion, as nearly as may be found convenient, to the amounts of their tenders.

14. The names of the persons whose tenders are accepted in whole or in part will be posted, for general information, at the Presidency Banks of Bengal, Madras, and Bombay.

I hereby tender for rupees _____ of the Loan advertised in the Notification published in the Gazette of India Extraordinary, dated the 27th May, 1878, and agree to pay for the same, subject to the conditions notified, at the rate of rupees _____ annas _____ for every hundred rupees allotted to me.

I enclose a deposit receipt for rupees _____, and engage, if my offer be accepted, to pay to the account of the Government at the Presidency Bank of _____ [or at the Branch of the Bank of _____; or into the Government treasury at _____ as the case may be] the first instalment on or before Monday, the 8th day of July next, and the several later instalments on or before the dates fixed by the Notification, as follows:—
One third on Monday, the 8th day of July, 1878.
One third on Thursday, the 8th day of August, 1878.
One third on Monday, the 9th day of September, 1878.

Notes.—(1) A separate tender must be made at each rate tendered, and a separate deposit must accompany each tender. In order to avoid mistakes, it is desirable that the tender, or, at least, the name of the tenderer, and the amount and rate tendered, should be written in English.

(2) This Notification will be published simultaneously by the Secretary of State for India in London.

By W. BRIGHT, Colour-Sergeant, 37th
Middlesex R.V.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"Under this title, Colour-Sergeant Bright, of the 37th Middlesex R.V., has prepared an elaborate series of 'Test Questions' in all the matters in which a Sergeant of Volunteer Infantry has to be examined for his Certificate. The questions are very well framed, and very complete. Except in a very few instances, the answers are not given, but each question is followed by a reference to the Field Exercise, or the Rifle Exercises, from which the student will gain the information necessary to frame the answer. The book is interleaved with blank paper, so that the answers, when discovered, may be written out. Altogether the scheme is a very ingenious one, and we commend the new 'Red Book' to all Sergeants or intending Sergeants. We should add that the book contains a useful Appendix on certain points of military etiquette with which all Volunteers ought to be acquainted."—Volunteer Service Gazette, March 2, 1878.

"The object of this work is to enable a candidate for promotion to the rank of Sergeant in the Volunteer Infantry to acquire by heart a thorough knowledge of the subjects of his examination. . . . The questions are clearly framed, and . . . a very good method has been adopted for impressing the subject on the memory. A simple, handy book of the sort was much wanted, and the want has been supplied."—Broad Arrow, March 2, 1878.

"In this useful little manual of fifty-eight pages Mr. Bright has succeeded in making a 'royal road' for those members of the Volunteer Force who may desire to qualify themselves for the rank of Sergeant. . . . The 'Red Book for Sergeants' is a concise and practical guide, and should be in the hands of every Volunteer in the Kingdom."—Weekly Dispatch, March 10, 1878.

"The work is very carefully compiled and neatly got up, and seems well adapted for the end in view. . . . This 'Red Book' takes a comprehensive view of what all Volunteers, commissioned or non-commissioned, should know, and cannot fail to be of great value to all ranks of the Service. Some very useful information is given in an Appendix."—Military Record and Volunteer News, March 13, 1878.

OPINIONS OF VOLUNTEER OFFICERS.

The following is a copy of a letter received from Lieutenant-Colonel C. E. HOWARD VINCENT, Commanding Central London Rifle Rangers (4th Middlesex), President of the Volunteer Conference, and late of the 23rd Royal Welsh Fusiliers:—

"Lieutenant-Colonel Howard Vincent has read with great interest the 'Red Book for Sergeants,' compiled by Colour-Sergeant Bright, of the 37th Middlesex. The questions have been very carefully framed, and there can be no doubt that writing out the answers to them will impress the duties of Sergeants more on their memories than any other system. The publication of this book affords additional evidence of the successful zeal with which the Non-commissioned Officers of Volunteers apply themselves to their military duties—to the great gain of the entire Force.—Feb. 21, 1878."

One Officer (a Major) writes:—
"I have no hesitation in expressing my opinion that it should be in the hands of every Non-Commissioned Officer in the Service."

Another (a Captain) writes:—
"It is likely to be of service not only to Non-Commissioned, but all ranks in the Volunteer Service."

NOTES ON MUHAMMADANISM!

REV. T. P. HUGHES, M.R.A.S.

C. M. S., Missionary to the Afghans, Peshawar.

Opinions of the Press on the First Edition.

"Altogether an admirable little book. It combines two excellent qualities, abundance of facts and lack of theories. . . . On every one of the numerous heads (over fifty) into which the book is divided Mr. Hughes furnishes a large amount of very valuable information, which it would be exceedingly difficult to collect from even a large library of works on the subject. The book might well be called a 'Dictionary of Muhammadan Theology,' for we know of no English work which combines a methodical arrangement (and consequently facility of reference), with fulness of information in so high a degree as the little volume before us."—The Academy.

"It contains multum in parvo, and is about the best outlines of the tenets of the Muslim faith which we have seen. It has, moreover, the rare merit of being accurate; and although it contains a few passages which we would gladly see expunged, it cannot fail to be useful to all Government employes who have to deal with Muhammadans, whilst to Missionaries it will be invaluable."—The Times of India.

"This small book is the most luminous, most convenient, and, we think, the most accurate, outline of the tenets and practices of Islamism that we have met with. It seems exactly the sort of comprehensive and trustworthy book in small compass, on this subject, that we and many more have often looked for in vain. The author has evidently studied his subject in a faithful, laborious, and scholarly manner, and has not only studied but mastered it. The work is of great value for general students, and for men whose work lies among the Mussulman population, such as Civil Servants and Missionaries, it seems to be the very work that is wanted."—The Friend of India.

"In brief compass it contains a large amount of reliable information. Instead of theories and fancies, facts are placed before us. Muhammadanism is represented as it really is, not as it is supposed that it might possibly be. Instead of retailing the speculations current in literary society at home, Mr. Hughes furnishes us with brief but incisive statements, which, so far as they go, leave nothing to be desired."—The Church Missionary Intelligence.

"It is manifest throughout the work that we have before us the opinions of one thoroughly conversant with the subject, and who is uttering no random notions. . . . We strongly recommend 'Notes on Muhammadanism.' Our Clergy especially, even though they are not Missionaries, and have no intention of labouring amongst Muhammadans or consorting with them, ought to have at least as much knowledge of the system as can be most readily acquired, with a very little careful study, from this useful treatise."—The Record.

"Its value as a means of correcting the common impressions about Islam will reveal itself to the most cursory reader, while the author's evident scholarship and intimate knowledge of his subject bespeak for him a patient hearing on points the most open to controversy."—Allen's Indian Mail.

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are, from Bombay, May 20; Allahabad and Madras, May 18; Calcutta, May 17.

HER Majesty has telegraphed to the Viceroy her great satisfaction at the loyal and spontaneous offers of troops made by many of the native princes and chiefs. Volunteering was still the order of the day among natives and Europeans. The Coorg planters had resolved to form a mounted corps, and seventy men had already joined; it was hoped that the number would soon rise to two hundred. A Parsi corps was to have been raised at Bombay; but the Governor could not sanction the step without instructions from the Supreme Government. Among the reports of the famine, we read that prospects were improving in Kashmir; from Sholapur, that three-fourths of the people had exhausted their stock of grain, and were subsisting on grass-seeds; from Madras, that the general prospects were somewhat improved, and prices showed a slight tendency to fall.

ACCORDING to the Bombay Times, the latest Maisur Relief Report states that rain has fallen generally in the province, but more is wanted, and no decided improvement had occurred in the prospects of the season. On civil relief works there are above ten thousand persons employed, or 138 more than in the previous week. A few works were completed, and the total number employed under professional agency was 37,350, against 38,901 in the previous week. In relief camps and hospitals there were 2,330 inmates, showing a decrease of about 202 as compared with the previous week. There are eight thousand poor people in the receipt of grain doles. The interim report dated 11th May states that prospects are improving.

THE Pioneer informs us that reports from the various districts of the N.-W.P., coming down to the 4th of May, show that the weather continues unseasonable, and that injury has been done by rain to grain on the threshing floors, and by hail to crops in the Hills. A slight fall in prices is observable in Rohilkhund, but this is due to a check in the export trade, caused, in its turn, by difficulties of railway transport. The numbers are approximately as follows:—For the N.-W.P. for the week ending the 4th of May, 17,921 on relief works, and 3,153 in poorhouses, (against 14,362 and 3,315 in the previous week). In Oudh the numbers are 6,393 on relief works and 2,027 in poor-houses (against 4,414 and 2,538). It appears that the chief, and perhaps only anxiety of Government is lest the rains should not come at the proper time.

AMONG the recorded proceedings in connection with the Indian Famine it is very gratifying to find that a resolution of Government and minute of the Governor of Bombay had borne such high testimony to the value of the Railway to the State, and to the services of its agents and staff, as contained in the following extract:—"To the Agents, Mr. H. P. Le Mesurier, C.S.I., and Mr. G. A. Barnett; to the Traffic Manager, Mr. Henry Conder; to the Locomotive Superintendent, Mr. S. Jackson, and to the servants of all grades of the Great Indian Peninsular Railway Company, the Government and the country are under the greatest obligations for their unflagging exertions day and night, in the time of trouble, to carry the food grain for the famishing people. The wear and tear of body and mind caused by such sore and long sustained effort will be fully known only to those who witnessed it. The vast quantity of grain carried by this railway has been already stated. It is difficult to measure the value of the railway at such a time as this, or the magnitude of the calamity which, without it, must have supervened. If these events had happened before the construction of this railway, the misfortunes of the people and the responsibilities of Government would have been indefinitely aggravated."

THE Times telegram of the 9th June, from Calcutta, gives the latest Indian intelligence from the North-West, where there had been decrease in the number of persons on relief in Agra and Farrukhabad, but increase at Muttra, Lucknow, and elsewhere. It was stated that orders had been issued directing the Commissioners of such divisions of the North-West Provinces as had been affected by famine to institute a searching inquiry into the cause of the large abnormal death-rate caused by the returns. The winter months' reports from Madras are said to exhibit very little change; there were still 207,755 persons in relief. The crops in some districts were suffering considerably from ravages of locusts.

FROM the same source we learn the report that Major Sandeman had returned to Khetta, having visited en route the Khan of Kelat; that the Sardars were on friendly terms with the Khan; and that the whole of Baluchistan was in a tranquil condition. It is to be hoped that this unusually pleasant state of things will continue, and that advantage will be taken of the quiet to draw the Khan's attention to the consolidation of his Western frontier.

THE Times telegram further acquaints us that the Queen's birthday had been appropriately made the occasion for opening the Dacca Waterworks, executed at the cost of the munificent Nawab Abdul Ghani, in memory of the recovery of the Prince of Wales from his dangerous illness of 1872. The foundation stone had been laid by Lord Northbrook; and the Nawab and his son had expended 150,000 rupees on the whole construction. As Dacca had long suffered from the consequence of its bad water, the present arrangement will be a great boon to its inhabitants. The Times correspondent considers the absence of pure water to account for almost every description of typical illness in India; and cites as an example the present healthy condition of Calcutta which is the result of a pure water supply. He truly adds: If other native Princes would follow this noble example and devote their surplus wealth to the mitigation of the miseries of life induced by the climate, instead of lavishing it on mere idle ostentation, as most of them are in the habit of doing, Indian towns might be rendered in a comparatively short time almost healthy.

THE following is given as a translation of the Nawab of Bhawalpur's letter, addressed to the Lieutenant-Governor of the Panjab:—"I am always anxious to render services to Government like my predecessors, more especially as I have been brought up under the patronage of her Most Gracious Majesty the Empress of India. The Council and other officials of the State have now held a meeting and made me a representation, which is entirely in accordance with my views. It is to the effect that as the British Government has ordered detachments of its troops to be ready for duty and despatched, some of them, to proper posts, the services of a battalion consisting of 500 foot and a troop consisting of 100 horse (regular) may be placed at the disposal of Government. I therefore beg to submit the above proposal for acceptance. The contingent of the State can be produced as soon as the Government acceptance is notified, and another of the same strength can be prepared and produced after a suitable interval."

IN addition to the mere announcement that the Indus Valley Railway has been fairly opened for traffic, we are informed by telegraph that a special service for the occasion was held by the Bishop of Lahor. Sir Andrew Clarke, who appeared as the Viceroy's delegate, performed his task with great ceremony. The bridge over the Sutlaj at Adamwahan is considered one of the greatest engineering triumphs in India, and has been authoritatively named the "Empress."

ALTHOUGH we know nothing of "the nurseries maintained by Mrs. Carmichael's Committee," which Rumour from Madras represents as likely "to resolve themselves into an orphanage," the account given of them in the Supplement to the Friend of India should induce the liberal and wealthy persons in this country, to whom an appeal on their behalf is made, to give them substantial assistance. "There are," it is said, "many poor children, without parents, to be provided for, and it is intended to start an orphanage where the boys will be taught the duty of bricklayer, carpenter, cook, horse-keeper, or any such. Most of these waifs are pariahs, who are likely to make good domestic servants." Independently of the good work in British India, some institution of the kind should, we think, be found in all colonies where there is any large number of Indian immigrants; and in foreign colonies, if possible, as well as our own.

IN the Monday telegram of the Times, dated Calcutta, June 2, it is stated that the Sessions Judge had given judgment in the second Surat riot case, which had extended over seven days. Three prisoners had been sentenced to transportation for seven years, five for five years, and four for two years; three of these had also been fined 500 rupees with six months' additional imprisonment in default. Two had been imprisoned for two months, four discharged, and one had, unfortunately, died in jail.

THE same paper states that not very long before the occurrence which cost Mr. Cooper, our Political Agent at Bharno, his life, the bazaar chaudhari of the place, a Chinaman, was met in the streets by a rollicking party of the Resident's guard, who smothered him in abir, the red powder in common use among celebrants of the Holi. The chaudhari complained of the affront to Mr. Cooper, and the offenders were very severely punished. The above incident is vouched for by a well-informed correspondent in Birmah, who seems to lay great stress upon it, as probably connected with the eventual affray which ended so fatally.

LATER accounts of the catastrophe at Ahmadnagar, supplied by the Times of India, state that the Mandup in which the performance was being given by a Parsi theatrical company was burnt down in a few minutes. No less than thirty-two dead bodies were dragged from the flames, nine persons subsequently died in the hospital, from five to seven in the native town, and fifty more were seriously injured. One-half of the victims were native soldiers, and in several instances a family has lost two and even three of its members.

WITH regard to the Railway Conference which is to assemble in Calcutta in November next, it is said that delegates will attend from every local government in India and Burmah, and from every railway company. The Chambers of Commerce of the three Presidencies are invited to send representatives as well as the leading merchants, European and native, of the principal towns. In fact, every one having an idea in connection with the Indian railway system will be free to ventilate it. Meantime we are told that the programme of subjects already notified for discussion is both exhaustive and exhausting.

By a Reuter's Telegram in the Times of this morning, dated June 10, we learn that her Majesty's despatch vessel Helicon proceeded to Marseilles yesterday, in order to convey the Duke of Cambridge to Malta, where his Royal Highness will inspect the Indian contingent. The health of the native troops quartered in the island is reported to be satisfactory.

THE sentence passed on the Pooree Rajah has been confirmed by the Calcutta High Court; also the sentences passed on two of the man's accomplices. Two others, however, have been acquitted—the Bench considering that their identity had not been proved.

THE Turkmans from about Marv are reported to have lately made a raid upon the north-western frontier of Afghanistan, in the direction of Maimana, and to have been driven back with considerable loss.

The Dombay Gazette states that the P. and O. steamer China was raised during the week, and now lies at her moorings, having her cargo unloaded, previous to going into dock for repairs. The internal fittings of the vessel, and the cargo, consisting of cotton, seeds, &c., have been very much damaged.

Fun has compelled us, nolens volens, to tender our spontaneous felicitations to its artist. There is something very provocative of laughter in the cleverly depicted "Congress Races" accompanying the last number of this periodical; "John Bull on Jingo winning the Dare-by" tells its own tale and the Sipahi, wild with enthusiasm, is a powerful adjunct to completeness in the picture. We recommend it as exceptionally good of its kind, and a wholesome antidote to spleen and morbidity.

SINCE our last summary of arrivals of troops and transports at Suez and in the Mediterranean, we have to notify a Reuter's telegram, dated Malta, May 28, stating that the Bengal transport, towing the Oriflamme, and the Nankin towing the Kilkerran, had entered port at 3.10 p.m. A second, dated Port Said, May 29, announced that the Trinacria, Marina, Macedonia, Seaforth, Narcissus, Aros Bay, and Citadel had proceeded towards Malta. A third from Malta of the 30th May, intimating the arrival of the Malda and Maraval, and departure for Port Said of the Goa, gave the further pleasing intelligence that the appearance and condition of the Indian cavalry were highly satisfactory. A fourth, dated Malta, June 2, reported the arrival of the St. Osyth, Helen Scott, and Clydesdale with Indian troops; adding that the last-named transport was to be detained for seven days in quarantine owing to the breaking out of cholera on board, since departure from Bombay. There had been a review of nine thousand men on the 1st inst. A fifth telegram, dated Malta, June 4, stated the arrival of the Trinacria, with the Bombay Lancers; the Seaforth and Narcissus with some Bengal cavalry; and the Marina with the 26th Bombay N.I. Lastly, another telegram, dated Malta, June 5, reported the arrival of the Macedonia, Aros Bay, and Citadel with the remainder of the 9th Bombay cavalry."

ALL accounts from India tend to confirm the first impression made on the public mind in this country that the despatch of native troops Westward has been a great success. The correspondent of the Indian Daily News at Rawal Pindi had conversed with some sipahis there on the subject; and the result of the conversation had convinced him that their enthusiasm was a genuine manifestation of loyalty to Government. He mentions that native soldiers were daily rejoining their regiments from furlough, delighted at the prospect of possible foreign service in the quarter contemplated, and so strong was the desire among the subject warlike tribes in that part of India, to serve under the banners of the sarkâr, that rumour was busy about a suggested formation of second battalions. As to the Sikhs, the Lieutenant-Governor had had many petitions for their enrolment in the British ranks.

MAJOR-GENERAL MAXWELL suggests that a small picked body of Indian horse and foot should be permanently attached to the body guard of the Sovereign. He adds:—"Such a body, selected for stature, appearance, bravery, and good conduct, would be a picturesque and ornamental addition to the pageantry of the Court and the metropolis. It would provide an honourable reward for meritorious Indian soldiers. It should be constantly but gradually changing by the operation of periodical relief of individuals. It would thus prove an educational engine of incalculable value, continually sending back to India men who had beheld the resources of this country, and each one of whom would be a sort of centre whence true notions on that subject would radiate among the people. Finally, it would be a perpetual sign and symbol of our empire in the East." We have elsewhere alluded to this subject, and further extracted from the letter to the Times, whence we obtain the above. The writer thinks that a more imaginative people than ourselves would have acted long since in the spirit of the suggestion now repeated. But the "people," if not naturally imaginative, are amenable to guidance and education.

By a telegram of the 5th June, it appears that General Sir T. Van Straubenzee, G.C.B., had left Malta for Syracuse, on his way to England. The carriage containing his Excellency was drawn by people the greater portion of the route to the quay, where an address was presented to him. Great enthusiasm prevailed, and his Excellency ultimately embarked amid the music of bands playing national airs.

ALLUDING to a telegram in the Times, dated Calcutta, 2nd June, and received via Tehran, the latest crop reports state that in Madras the prospects are unchanged, and prices fluctuating, with a slight upward tendency. Total number on relief works, 124,661; gratuitously fed, 78,541. In Maisur there are shown to be on relief, 46,283; gratuitously fed, 10,111. It is stated that distress is still great in the north-west; and that in the Southern Deccan more than one-third of the entire population had died off in the twelve months which ended July, 1877.

UNDER the head of "Indian Missions," a short paragraph in the Times of the 7th instant informs us that Monday in Whitsun week would be observed throughout the diocese of Madras as a day of thanksgiving for the religious movement in Tinnivelly, "where 18,000 natives are under instruction for baptism." The Bishop of London, referring to the telegram which intimated this resolution, has appealed through his clergy to the members of the several congregations in the metropolis, to the effect that, although time be wanting for the celebration of a general thanksgiving, they should not fail, on the day appointed, to join their brethren in Madras in prayer and praise, whether in public, or family, or private devotions. Since his return to India in 1875, Dr. Caldwell has devoted himself with renewed zeal to missionary work; and although the famine in one sense arrested his labours, it appears to have conduced to its rapid furtherance in another. He was one of the almoners of the relief bounty derived from England, and in this capacity it is but natural that many hearts should have been drawn towards him, spontaneously, and without admixture of selfish interests. We learn from the Madras Times that, in seven months, more than 16,000 souls had placed themselves voluntarily under instruction with a view to baptism; and that "the movement is still spreading, so that it is impossible to surmise how far it will reach."

THE Pioneer mentions the following as the names of the survivors of the old garrison of Lucknow, still serving in India:—Sir G. Couper, Bart., G.C.B., K.C.S.I.; Mr. W. Capper, B.C.S.; Lieutenant General Barwell, G.C.B.; Colonels W. H. Hawes, 9th N.I., H. Forbes, Bhopal Battalion, J. F. Watson, 87th N.I., and O. L. Smith, Oudh Police; Lieutenant Colonels F. M. Birch, civil employ, D. McFarlan, R.H.A., C. W. Fletcher, 7th B.C., B. R. Chambers, 6th P.I., A. Tulloch, 42nd N.I., and E. B. Ward, 36th N.I.; Majors W. Cubitt, V.C., 16th N.I., C. W. Campbell, 2nd B.C., G. L. Hewett, 3rd B.C., and W. Campbell, 14th N.I., Lieutenant-Colonel J. J. Innes, V.W., R.E.; Surgeon-Majors Partridge, and C. Birch.

WE observe a report that the committee appointed to investigate the grain robberies on the Great Indian Peninsula Railway have discovered most extensive frauds at Sholapore. One of those engaged in the frauds has confessed, and it is stated that several native merchants, transit agents, policemen, and railway employés are implicated.

It is stated in the Academy that Captain Richard Burton, who has returned to Trieste, hopes to be able to visit England shortly, in order to superintend personally the examination of the specimens which he has brought away from the mines of Midian.

IN our issue of the 27th April we took account of a remarkable article which appeared in the outer sheet of the Times on the subject of the Turkmans of Persia. The same journal has promised us more particulars of an interesting character about the region of the Tekkes, and we learn that, among the chiefs of the tribe, there has been "a chiel takin' notes," which if he does not print will no doubt become known to the public through the agency of the Geographical or some more fortunate Society. Captain Butler, of the 9th Regiment, is returning from the frontier of Khurasan, "after attaining," it is said, "complete success among the Turkmans." The above officer, we are told, during the year 1876, "explored, in the disguise of a Chinaman, the course of the River Atrek, and he was understood to have also formed a certain amount of intimacy with several of the chiefs of the Tekke clan." On his return to India his narrative was not published, nor has it been since, and for a time his adventures were quite forgotten. Now all this is, to say the least, exciting, if not very serious; and the statement that the telegram announcing Captain Butler's arrival is from Aleppo, makes it, moreover, perplexing. If he be returning from Mashhad and Khurasan to the Mediterranean through that city, he will have most probably skirted the Lake Urumia and taken the route by Mosul, Diarbekir, and Urfa. In any case the journey will be full of interest.

OF the nature of Captain Butler's mission we give the explanation contained in the following extract:—

In May last year he was suddenly summoned to Simla, to give an account of what he deemed during his explorations, to the Viceroy, and after this interview nothing more was heard of him, either of Captain Butler or of his discoveries. That he had been entrusted with some kind of mission, or encouraged to repeat his previous journey was considered to be certain, and rumour at one time designated him as the "English" agent, who had been appointed by the Porte at Cabul. It would now appear that his second journey was in a similar direction to his first, but in order to understand its exact purpose and the result, which we are assured, has been completely successful, we must await further information. It is just possible that Captain Butler may have had some share in the recent reconciliation between the Turcomans and the Persian Government, a reconciliation of which the motive was not by any means clear. At all events, we shall have the satisfaction of learning shortly from an English source the full extent of that interesting arrangement and the degree of stability of the newly-cemented friendship between the Tekes and the Persians.

PERHAPS among all the many conventional delusions of the age, none is more mischievous than the practice of "getting up" testimonials. Men whose material remains are laid in Westminster Abbey, or whose success in this world is commemorated by a statue, should be, and usually are, fairly worthy the honour; but the ordinary testimonial, unless thoroughly spontaneous, is, in nine cases out of ten, mere tinsel, even though it serve a purpose of professional or social advancement. India presents, unfortunately, too many instances of this kind of charlatanism; and it is therefore all the more refreshing to recognise a tone of serious meaning in the account of the farewell address of the wakils to Mr. Justice Kemp, and that gentleman's reply. Whatever may be said of its incidental allusions, the staple of the latter is good enough to be recommended to the attentive perusal of the younger members of the Bar, or Civil Service; or to those who aspire to a seat, at some future period, on the Indian Bench.

THE Bombay Gazette, remarking on the common idea that the Ficus elastica, from which India-rubber is produced, did not grow south of north latitude 24 degs., finds that samples of india-rubber, pronounced by competent local judges to be of a good average quality, and valued in Calcutta from forty to forty-eight rupees per maund, had been brought to Akyab from the Hill tracts of Arakan, which are much further south than the degree named. These have lately been submitted to the Bengal Chamber of Commerce for opinion and valuation.

THE Madras Times notices a Hindustani pamphlet on the subject of "Foreign Policy," written by a son of Sir Sharfu-l-Umrah, formerly Member of the Legislative Council. If the author be a somewhat decided anti-Russian, and see no cause to find fault with Turkish misrule, he is not exactly the kind of advocate that an intelligent Ottoman would choose. For he declares—though without mentioning his authority—that the Russians have made a secret treaty with the Turks, and that, in case of a war with England, Russia will at once occupy Constantinople, the Bosphorus and the Dardanelles, the Sultan and his Government retiring to Broussa. Let us add that the Nawab is well satisfied with, and loyally supports, the policy of Great Britain.

MAKING THE MOST OF MALTA.

SOME years ago there was a clever double-illustration in the Dehli Sketch Book, showing, in the first place, a simple, talkative and well-disposed young civilian confiding to his Sarishtadar some particulars of his home belongings, and especially describing the nature of his father's duties and status as an Admiral in the British Navy. Secondly, and in a separate division of the sketch, was the outward semblance of the young man's father as presented to the mind of the Sarishtadar. And this is the way in which it was presented:—An elderly person in a cocked hat, but otherwise attired in the very scant clothing of a catamaran or masulah-boat man, sitting, or rather squatting, in the stern of a canoe, exemplified the native official's mental embodiment of the respectable gentleman described to him. The fact is, that the word Manjhi, which in Hindustani means the "master of a vessel" or "sailor" generally, had been used to express the nautical profession, and the qualifying word bara, or "great" had been prefixed, to enhance the dignity signified; but the description was insufficient for an unprepared audience.

Now, however broad the caricature, there was much truth underlying it. Misapprehension was, under the circumstances, more than probable, though not necessarily in the form so humorously portrayed. The Indian mind, even that of a shrewd Sarishtadar, must need a certain training and association, independent of ordinary school teaching, to grasp the reality of the picture produced for its comprehension. Without it, all "social" talk, in the way we talk to our fellow-countrymen and usual companions, is vain; and as with the civil servants of a Kachahri, so with the native officer or rank and file of sipahis. So, indeed, with all classes of Indians who have not tasted of the more thorough education which is now imparted to second and third generations of native students in the higher English schools.

We are led to these reflections by a discussion which has emanated from the recent movement of Indian troops to the West, appertaining whereto are two letters in the Times of the 7th instant—one recommending that a small representative body selected from the Native Contingent at Malta be sent over for a brief run to England, the other, inferentially discouraging such a measure on account of the unavoidable scenes of drunkenness and depravity which would meet the eye of any visitor to these shores. We are rather inclined to favourable consideration of the proposals contained in the first, than to fear the bad results foreboded in the second letter. The many and various bazaars in India are full enough already of the characters dreaded by "Anglo-Indian" to render superfluous a voyage to England for additional enlightenment. A drunken European, in the streets or gin-shops of Bombay or other Indian town or cantonment, is a no whit less offensive object than the same character in London or Liverpool. And if a woman chance to be the principal figure in the disagreeable picture, we prefer to see it in England than exhibited for the edification of Asiatics in the Far East.

The sipahis now stationed for the time at Malta will no doubt understand that the island to which their Kismet has conducted them is not like England, nor is it a fair specimen of Europe. That is to say, it will no doubt have been explained to them by their officers that they have only come to the place at all because of its convenient geographical position, and that it is necessary to disembark them somewhere under the British flag. Whether it would be well to tell the story of the Ionian Islands and their transfer to Greece, is a question which requires mature consideration; for it is not likely that the native mind would readily apprehend the disinterested policy which caused the cession. They might, perhaps, refuse to give any credence to the account, and put down to some stern exigency a generous and spontaneous act. But if there be one of the gallant band of new comers sufficiently educated to understand that honest and unselfish policy may be the best for nations to pursue as well as individuals, then certainly to him may the tale be told.

In no case should Malta be the absolute terminus of the present expedition in respect of the whole Indian Force. The inspection of H.R.H. the Commander-in-Chief—and we venture to think that approval will follow inspection—should be productive of excellent results; but it is desirable that, if possible some of the Native officers and smarter and more intelligent men—who will naturally be found mainly in the Non-commissioned ranks—should be allowed to see something more like Europe than Malta; otherwise they will never be able to realise what Europe is. Why should they not, indeed, visit England? Our good friends across the Channel would, we are sure, afford them every facility for a transit through France, if thought proper; and they would then be enabled to do Paris and its Exhibition en route to the land of their acknowledged sarkar. A long sea voyage would not be so pleasant; but by incurring it they would have ocular demonstration of Gibraltar, and understand the advantages and prestige of its possession.

It must always be borne in mind that the sipahi, whether of a "fighting caste" or naturally warlike race, or a peaceful tiller of the fields is, in respect of other than professional matters and incidentally, not of the same way of thinking as his employer or officer. He has been cast in a different ideal mould, and reared amid prejudices of which the latter knows comparatively nothing. In taking him to Europe we must neither treat him as a child, nor put him on our own level. If he were pleased at a pageant, it would not be with the innate pride and loyalty of an English spectator, at the sight of the great or the good in whose honour he has merged his own, but from curiosity and regard to outward show: if he were interested in a play or pantomime, it would not be at the business of the story, the tricks of the clown, or jokes which he could not understand, but at the strangeness of the whole scene before him.

There must be a kind of medium course adopted by the Mentor, calculated to maintain a wholesome interest in the hearer and, above all, to whet his loyalty, and convince him that the Government he serves is one which is not only strong in riches and material, but in right and truth. Distinguished Orientals who come to this country—be they princes or potentates—require a special treatment equally with the humbler sipahis. Perhaps we are too much inclined to conventional practices in our reception of these guests; and in searching for prescribed things and precedents we forget the truer lessons of the every-day world around us. For instance—an afternoon or evening congregation, such as usually found at St. Paul's or Westminster Abbey, on at least half the Sundays in the year, is a sight unknown to most Oriental visitors to London, and, if obtained, might give them a different notion of the English character than they possess at present.

Round about the Carpathians. By Andrew F. Crosse. Wm. Blackwood and Sons. 1878.

For generations the "Eastern Question" has baffled the wisest statesmen of their day; political theorists have, it is true, at times propounded learned and impracticable, it might almost be said in some cases ridiculous, solutions of the difficulty, but it yet remains for any leading mind to determine a means of reconciling the bitter animosities of the races which range themselves under the respective standards of the Cross and Crescent, or even to assuage the little less deadly antagonisms of the numerous peoples who come within the generic designation of Christians. Nor will a perusal of Mr. Crosse's account of his wanderings in the Carpathian districts impress the reader with a conviction that the Eastern problem is easy of solution. What an incongruous mass of races is crowded within the area of a few thousand square miles! Magyars, Germans, Servians, Croats, Roumanians, Jews, and Gipsies, all of whom are "unsatisfied people with aspirations—no two are agreed." The characteristics of these varied nationalities are thus quaintly described by an old German writer:—"To the great national kitchen the Magyar contributes bread, meat, and wine; the Rusinack and Wallack salt, from the salt pits of Marmaros; the Slavonian bacon, for Slavonia furnishes the greatest number of fattened pigs; the German gives potatoes and vegetables; the Italian rice; the Slovak milk, cheese and butter, besides table-linen, kitchen utensils, and crockery ware; the Jew supplies the Hungarian with money; and the Gipsy furnishes the entertainment with music." Discreetly, though perhaps not altogether naturally, Mr. Crosse leaves the Eastern Question to be settled by diplomats, and confines himself to an account of his wanderings—jotting down things day by day just as they occurred, without any particular attempt at polish or finish. On the whole, travelling in Hungary does not appear very inviting—at any rate, the weather experienced by Mr. Crosse during his stay in the country seems to have been even more fitful and unsettled than in our own "neat little tight little island." Nor are the people, as a rule, desirable acquaintances for an unarmed and unprotected traveller; fighting, quarrelling, robbery, and violence in every shape seem to come natural to a large circle of the humbler classes, though, of course, there are many exceptions, even amongst the lower grades; while as regards the "upper ten" hospitality is unbounded, and courtesy most polished. The scenery in the plains is comparatively but little inviting; but amongst the hills the views are striking and varied; the luxuriance of foliage also produces a most picturesque effect, while "nothing can exceed the beauty of the wild vines, so frequent on the banks of the Danube. They fall in graceful festoons from the trees; sometimes they reach across to the trees on the other side of the road, forming a complete arch of greenery. In the autumn the vine leaves turn to a glowing red, like the Virginian creeper, and then the effect of this mass of rich colouring is indeed glorious."

Amongst the numerous medicinal waters which have recently been introduced into this country is one bearing the somewhat peculiar name of Hunyadi Janos; the label, which is ornamented with a romantic looking portrait of the individual in question, does not throw any light as to who he was or whence he came, and not improbably the large majority of persons who buy the water would be somewhat puzzled to state from what it derives its name. Mr. Crosse sets the matter at rest; it appears that the said Hunyadi Janos, or, as we should say, John Hunyadi, was Hungary's, or perhaps, more accurately, Wallachia's, greatest hero. The story of his birth, about the year 1400, is romantic; his mother was said to be a beautiful Wallack girl, called Elizabeth Marsinai, with whom King Sigismund had an intrigue; on his departure he left her a ring, which she was to bring to him in Buda, if she gave birth to a son. In due course of time a child of the "male persuasion" made its appearance, and the joyful mother, accompanied by her brother, set off walking to Buda, taking with her the infant and the ring as a credential. When resting by the way in a forest, while the child was playing with the ring, a jackdaw pounced upon the shining jewel, and carried it off to a tree. The brother at once took up his bow, and shooting the bird, recovered the precious treasure. The story was duly narrated to the King, who evolving out of the incident an omen of the boy's future greatness, had him brought up at Court, and bestowed upon him the town of Hunyad and sixty surrounding villages. Young Hunyadi soon distinguished himself by a series of victories over the Moslems, and forced them to relinquish Servia and Bosnia, both of which provinces he placed under the vassalage of Hungary. Hunyadi's son, Matthias Corvinus, who rivalled his father as a champion against the Turks, was elected King of Hungary, and reigned for forty-two years. "King Matthias is dead, and justice with him," is a common saying at the present day.

There is much to amuse in Mr. Crosse's diaries, and an odd "half-hour" may be worst spent than in accompanying him for a while in his wanderings round about the Carpathians.

A View of the Hindu Law as Administered by the High Court of Judicature at Madras. By J. H. Nelson, M.A., sometime Fellow of King's College, Cambridge; of the Madras Civil Service, of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law, District Judge of Cuddapah, &c. Madras, Higginbotham and Co.; Calcutta, Thacker, Spink and Co.; Bombay, Thacker, Vining, and Co.

Mr. Nelson, in the course of his judicial experience, found that the customs of the natives of his district (Madura) were very different from those popularly supposed to be proper to Hindus, and judicially recognised by the Madras High Court. Hence he was induced to observe very carefully the usages that came under his notice, and he was led to the belief, not only that the High Court often misconstrues the law, but that there is not really such a thing as Hindu law in existence. After this it is a small matter to say, as he does later on, that there are no "schools" of Hindu law, for how can there be divisions when it is admitted that there is nothing to divide? We cannot but think that Mr. Nelson, with all his vigour and industry, shows, in this part of his book, a slight confusion of ideas. Without going so far as Prosonno Coomarr Tagore, who, in his introduction to a well-known translation, gives a glowing picture of hypothetical assemblies from which he assumes the law of Mithila to have issued, we must needs give the name of law to a system which we found recognised as such, and we can see no particular harm in applying the term "schools" to the principal varieties of that system. If Mr. Nelson had said that the primary authority of Hindu law is unknown, and that its five schools were originally distinguished only as the doctrines of different writers, he would, we think, have been nearer the mark. It may be perfectly true, as Mr. Nelson says, that there are more tribes in India than is generally supposed who have never really been Hindus; and that is a point to which the attention of observers on the spot may be usefully directed. It may be true also that the High Court of Madras has sometimes mistaken the doctrines of the very law that it professes to administer, and that certain English writers who have been looked upon as oracles have made very singular mistakes. Mr. Nelson does good service in pointing out errors of both these descriptions; and we may hope that, if he and others persevere in this useful and practical course, the ingenious method of avoiding the wear and tear of real inquiry by falling back on the "paramount authority" of some half-informed English writer will gradually go out of fashion. Mr. Nelson may himself some day show an example of better things on the Bench; in the meantime his little book must necessarily help to stir up thought and to compel investigation.

Correspondence.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—Among veterans who have received but scant acknowledgment for services rendered to the State in their day, and, I may say, their generation, as more than half a century has elapsed since he entered his country's service, is General James Abbott, C.B., of the Royal (Bengal) Artillery.

This gallant officer is one of five brothers whose names are household words in India. What old Indian does not know of the late General Augustus Abbott, also of the Bengal Artillery, whom the late Field-marshal, Sir George Pollock, once described to the writer as the finest artillery officer in India? Who, again, has not heard of the eminent services rendered to the State by Sir Frederick Abbott, of the Bengal Engineers, whilom Governor of Addiscombe, who distinguished himself in the first Burmese war of 1824-26, and again in the Sikh War, when he bridged the rivers of the Punjab? The name of Major General Saunders Abbott, who, when serving as Aide-de-Camp to the late Lord Hardinge, was wounded in that sanguinary action of Ferozeshah, where the fate of India hung in the balance, is synonymous with gallantry and geniality, as all can aver who know him, and the youngest of these brothers was not less popular as Consul-General at Tabriz and Odessa, where he was drowned. General James Abbott fought at Bhurtpore in 1826, and in the Afghan war, and in 1840 while Assistant to the late Major D'Arcy Todd, our Envoy at Herat, proceeded on a mission to the Court of the Khan of Khiva, and carried terms of accommodation thence to St. Petersburg. How well he fulfilled his mission, its dangers, hardships and difficulties, and how he was cut down in a night attack on the shores of the Caspian, and escaped with his life by a miracle, are well and modestly told in his admirable work on Khiva, of which a Times reviewer says that it still affords the best materials we have for forming an idea of the country and people. Lord Palmerston thanked Captain Abbott for his conduct of this mission, and Captain Burnaby relates in his well-known book, that he left behind him in Khiva many friends. But the most important service he rendered his country was during the Punjab Campaign. When Chutter Singh, the Sikh Governor of Hazara, declared for Moolraj, with a large force of regular Sikh troops, Major Abbott actually raised some raw levies among the mountaineers of that Alpine province, and, though he was for several months cut off from all communication with the British troops and dependent upon his own resources, being the only British officer who had neither retired nor been taken prisoner, he not only beat and baffled the superior forces of the Sikh Sirdar, but marched upon and occupied with 1,500 matchlock men the Marquella Pass, which 16,000 Sikh troops and 2,000 Afghan horse were preparing to threaten. For this very important service, rendered at a critical time, he received the thanks of both Houses of Parliament. Able and fearless as a soldier, he possessed not less the qualities of a statesman, as is proved by his administration of the province of Hazara, which he found a hot bed of lawlessness, and left a contented and loyal province of the Punjab, a change due in no small degree to his purity of life and character, and the personal regard he inspired among the Chiefs and all classes of the people, a large deputation from whom, on the occasion of his departure, escorted him to the foot of the hills with many touching marks of regret. A man of genius and a shrewd observer of character, the late Sir Henry Lawrence, has placed on record his opinion of James Abbott in the following terms:—"He is one of a thousand. In his principles, like L—, he has a most pleasing manner and very superior talent. We may not meet again, but I will not soon forget one whom I greatly admire. As pure and as true as the day."

I would humbly suggest, Sir, that the rolls of the Order of the Bath, however "honourable," or of the Star of India, however "exalted," would only gain increased lustre by the addition of the name of James Abbott.—Yours obediently, Chelsea. C. R. L.

THE services of the heads of departments and others engaged in the recent despatch of troops from Bombay have been acknowledged in Government resolutions issued on the 4th May.

CROP PROSPECTS.

The abnormal nature of the present season must be causing anxiety in many quarters. Over a large part of these provinces the hot weather of 1878 is very much the hot weather of 1877. There has been the same unseasonable heavy rainfall, and the same absence of seasonable heat. The wheat crop, which promised to be admirable, is in many districts but a poor average. High winds and heavy rains have injured both stalk and grain. Gram has very generally failed altogether. In other respects prospects are still less satisfactory. Meanwhile, in a few days the people will be called on for the rabi instalments of land revenue. The mango crop, which last year was exceptionally large, will this year be proportionately small. Stocks are greatly reduced, and individual resources almost exhausted. Prices show little tendency to fall. The mortality among cattle has been less only than the mortality among men. The demand for labour has almost ceased with the harvesting of the spring crop, and a large part of the labouring population will, in all probability, be again thrown on the hands of the Government during the next six weeks or so. The local Government, it is known, has taken measures to provide public labour; and so far as projects and instructions on that head are concerned, but little remains to be done. But in view of the whole position, much is needed in other directions. Beside the question of labour there is the question of food. The former has been dealt with; but we should like to learn what steps are being taken to collect reliable data as to the latter point. The experience of the last six months will have impressed on the local Government the necessity, not of issuing orders only, but of keeping itself and the public informed as to the results in practice of those orders, and as to the daily progress of events. There may be every reason for hoping that the rainfall this year will be seasonable, but as yet there are grounds for apprehension. We saw last year a good illustration of the uncertainty connected with statistics in regard to stocks, when the commissioners of adjoining divisions at the same moment assured Government, the one, that stocks were approaching exhaustion, the other, that they were practically inexhaustible. We may find ourselves again face to face next month with the pressing need of an answer to the stock question; and the interval should be employed in collecting the best data possible. As yet nothing of the kind, we believe, has been attempted. At a later date, hurried orders may issue; but statistics of this kind cannot be hurried. It would be well that by June 15th next, for instance, the public should know what our available stocks are put at; on how much we may rely for importation; and what prospect there is, in the event of war in Europe, of a sudden increase in exportations. On the last two points the aid of the Government of India, and the advice of those engaged in commerce, is no doubt needed. But the first point lies within the province of the local Government. Nor is it as easy as it seems. We have our village papers, it is true; but they contain one only of many factors which are needed for answering the problem. The full force of the difficulty has already been felt elsewhere. Mr. Elliott has recently attempted to form an estimate of the outturn of the crops grown in the Mysore Province for 1877-78. To do this, he had first to make an estimate of the proportionate outturn—the ratio, that is, which it bears to the outturn of an average year. Then there was to be ascertained the area under cultivation; next, what may be considered the outturn of an average year; and finally, the estimated population. Now, of all these points, the village papers help us thoroughly in one only. They give us, pretty accurately, the cultivated area; but the real difficulty only begins here. Mr. Elliott's account of his experiment shows the labour which his inquiries in the matter of the relative and average outturn cost him. It was increased no doubt by the fact that he was a stranger to the province; but, at the best, the labour must be considerable. Now that the crop is still on the threshing-floor, there should be facilities, which will soon be lost, of ascertaining what the actual outturn this season in villages of varying capacities has been; while the inquiries and reports of settlement officers will have given a clue, it may be hoped, to the average crop outturn in the several districts. Of the present state of population we know nothing, except that a grievous number have died; and that there has been in parts excessive migration, and here and there some emigration. But if the storm breaks on us again next month we must be prepared with an answer to all these questions. In the upper districts especially the need is pressing; and so far as the Agra and Rohilkhand divisions are concerned, may soon be absolutely indispensable. Considering how long the distress has lasted in the North-West, it is strange how little is known about it. The weekly reports which appeared in the local Gazettes during the Bengal and Bombay Famines at once assured the public mind, and silenced the objections of hostile critics. The wisdom of such a course is obvious; and the misapprehensions which arise from neglect of it are the more to be regretted. We have lately seen a contemporary complaining, for instance, with warmth that the whole of the kharif land revenue instalments were collected in these provinces by order of the local Government. This is untrue; but it is an untruth which it would be better to have prevented. More light is required as regards the public and the Government; and the example set by other Governments in this respect may well be followed by our own.—Pioneer.

Miscellaneous.

NEW STEAMSHIP COMPANY.—A Chinese firm at Singapore is, it is stated, about to start a line of steamers to run between the Straits and Rangoon.

THE COORO PLANTERS have resolved to form a mounted volunteer corps. Seventy men have already joined, and the number is expected soon to come up to two hundred.

ARMS ACT.—In Calcutta they are already putting the Arms Act into force. Five native shop-keepers are to be summoned for neglecting to enter sales of sulphur properly.

RAILWAY SCHOOL.—It is calculated that amongst the employes of the East Indian Railway there are nearly fifteen hundred children likely to avail themselves of the benefits of the school about to be opened by the Company at Masuri.

SPECIAL PENSION.—The Secretary of State has, as a special case sanctioned a pension of Rs. 1,200 per annum to Mrs. Moore, widow of Mr. F. E. Moore, late Deputy Commissioner of the Rhotak district, Punjab, who was murdered some time ago.

BURMAH.—Fires in Rangoon have been very frequent of late, and it is feared incendiarism is at work. The Dhobies' lines were burnt down just before the mail left; the police saved a quantity of clothes.—In consequence of the alarming increase of crime in the Rangoon district, it is now proposed to increase the police force, especially in Pegu.

NEW RAILWAY.—The official notification for taking up a strip of land, fifty-nine miles in length and from 100 to 600 feet in breadth, for the construction of a line of railway from Bankipore to Gya, and another strip of land, four and a half miles in length and from 100 to 600 feet in breadth, for a branch from the said line to the Barakur hills in the Gya district, is published.

TEMPERANCE.—A public meeting, in connection with the temperance movement, took place at Muradabad on the evening of the 30th ult. The gathering was held in the compound of the Rev. E. W. Barker, Muradabad, and was very largely attended. Fifty-five persons enrolled themselves as members of a local Temperance Society.

NAUSHAHRA.—A Naushahra correspondent states, as a local rumour, that a few days ago an exciting chase took place on the Atak Bridge after a native whom the police wished to capture. Two British officers and a score of sepoys were present, and many shots were fired. At last one of the officers put a bullet through the poor wretch's leg, and he was captured.

VOLUNTEER COMMISSARIAT.—The Patriot says that fifty Bengali gentlemen have offered themselves as commissariat assistants in connection with the Indian contingent to Malta, and that their services have been accepted by Government. They are engaged for eight months; and they will be provided with free quarters and rations, and paid liberally.

MR. JUSTICE KEMP.—The members of the Calcutta Bar entertained on the 4th May Mr. Justice Kemp to a farewell dinner at the Town Hall. Covers were laid for sixty-two gentlemen. On the cloth being removed, the Advocate-General, in a most eloquent and clever speech, proposed the health of Mr. Justice Kemp, which was enthusiastically drunk by the whole company.

COURT MARTIAL.—At a general court-martial at Ambala, on the 17th of April, Private William Smith, of the 1st Battalion 12th Regiment of Foot, was charged with having been drunk and with insubordination, accompanied with personal violence, in having used violence against Lance Corporal William Austin, of the same battalion, by striking him with his clenched fist upon the face, and lifting him up and throwing him violently on his back. The Court sentenced the prisoner to suffer penal servitude for the term of five years, and to be fined one pound.

FIRUZPUR.—Captain C. C. O'B. Horsford, District Superintendent of Police at Firuzpur, has proceeded on furlough to England, and has been succeeded by Mr. D. McCracken. Captain B. J. Goldie, R.E., Executive Engineer at Firuzpur, has also, we regret to learn, been compelled by ill-health to proceed to England. The prices of grain in the Firuzpur district are very high this year. As a test we mention that of grain, which is now selling at eighteen seers per rupee, about one-third of the normal price. Barley (jav) is selling at the same price. In some places wheat has fared better, but on the whole the crop is a very bad one, and much distress will be the certain result.

CHAPLAINCY OF AGRA.—Upon his quitting the chaplaincy of Agra the Rev. Mr. Lamert has been presented by the Church committee and communicants of St. George's Church with an address engrossed on vellum and enclosed in a silver case, accompanied by a piece of silver plate. Mr. Lamert also receives an expression of regret at his departure, signed by the Church committee and every member of the congregation of St. Paul's (the Civil Church), together with a handsome French clock. At the same time the residents of the station, to the number of some hundreds, including the merchants, railway and telegraph servants, and military of various religious denominations, present Mr. Lamert with a neighbourly farewell address.

THE BANK OF BENGAL.—The Bank of Bengal minimum rate is now four per cent., while in 1869 and 1874 it was seven per cent., and in 1875 nine per cent. The present rate of exchange again forms a topic of earnest discussion. The paramount necessity of taking the matter in hand and of endeavouring to devise some remedial measure is urged upon the Government. It is suggested, with a considerable degree of plausibility, that if the Government were to suspend for a time the coinage of silver on behalf of private persons and to stop advances on silver bullion, the rate of exchange would rise immediately, inasmuch as remittances to India largely exceed Council drafts, as is evidenced by the heavy shipments of specie to India. The pressure is greatly felt by all classes.

TIRHOOT SETTLERS.—The Englishman hears that an Egyptian gentleman, Mr. Youssuff Artin Bey, a Colonel in the Egyptian army, and aide-de-camp to the Khedive, who last year visited India as a traveller, has taken up his residence in Tirhoot, and intends investing considerable capital in indigo. Mr. Artin is, we are told, a linguist, speaking and writing fluently almost all the principal European languages, besides Persian and Arabic, and he is now engaged in studying Bengali, Hindustani, and English simultaneously. He was educated at a military school in Paris, served all through the Egyptian and Abyssinian campaigns, and is decorated with Russian, Austrian, and Italian orders, besides several medals for his various field services. He is at present the guest of Mr. Abbot at Jaintpore Factory, and is learning all the routine of indigo manufacture as an assistant. He has not a very exalted opinion of the Grand Duke Nicholas of Russia, with whom he stayed six weeks during last year, describing him as rough and overbearing in manner, and by no means liked by his officers.

PLEADERS AND ADVOCATES.—The Lahore paper says:—"Mr. E. P. Henderson, C.S., Officiating Government Advocate, under instructions, we believe, from the local Government, moved the Chief Court by petition on the 3rd instant, that it should exercise the power which he alleged it possessed under Act XVII. of 1877, and enrol him as an Advocate of the Court. The whole question was one of the construction of Section 43 of the Statute above referred to. Mr. Henderson contended that the advisability of giving the Chief Court power to enrol its own Advocates (other than those already Advocates of a chartered High Court) was brought prominently to the notice of the Legislative Council when Act XVII. of 1877 was being debated. It might therefore be assumed either that the express grant of this power was intentionally omitted, or it was believed that the words of the section sufficiently expressed that power. It was pointed out in support of the petition that as the new Act gave the Chief Court, under Chapter 6, authority to appoint Pleaders, and absolute negative power, as regards Advocates and Attorneys, &c., so it might also be intended to give that Court positive power. The Bench seemed, however, to hold that Section 43 did not apply to the Chief Court as regards the original enrolment of Advocates; and further, that whatever may have been brought to the notice of the Legislative Council, the Court could only judge of its intentions were they actually expressed in the words of the Statute. Judgment, however, was reserved."

Madras.

THE LORD BISHOP.—The Bishop of Madras leaves Madras for England by the P. and O. steamer of the 18th May. He hopes to be back in November. Archdeacon Drury will act as his Lordship's Commissary.

POSSESSIONS IN INDIA.—MM. Joubert and La Barbe, the Commissioners who were sent out to inquire into the general administration of the French possessions in India, have arrived at Chandernagore from Pondicherry.

FAMINE.—There is a mango famine in Madras. Both at Bangalore and Salem, where the best descriptions of the fruit are to be had, the majority of the trees show no signs of any yield. The same remarks apply to Madras, where very few trees have hitherto blossomed.

MARRIAGE OF A NATIVE PRINCE.—The marriage ceremonies of the Maharajah of Mysore are now definitely fixed to commence on the 26th May, and to continue to the 4th proximo. The last two days will be reserved for entertainments to Europeans. His Highness is sixteen years of age, and his bride a little older.

EMIGRANTS TO PORT NATAL.—Emigration to Port Natal is so active that the agent, Mr. G. H. Ross, is sending regularly one ship-load of coolies every month. The ship Dumphaile Castle was surveyed yesterday by Dr. Thompson and Mr. Melville, the Protector of Emigrants. The coolies, numbering 313, will embark to day, and the ship will sail either on Sunday or Monday morning. Mr. I. Fonseca proceeds in medical charge.

THE NAPIER PARK.—The Municipal authorities are evidently doing their utmost to make the Napier Park as attractive as they possibly can; a short time ago the date grove and the old Band Stand were turned into an agreeable place of recreation, which would have been better appreciated if a few seats were provided. Now a beautifully laid flower garden and promenade to the north of the Park is being made; but it is a pity that this new place of recreation is in close proximity to the Sewage Irrigation Farm.

SMILES AND TEARS.—A Bangalore paper thinks it worthy of note that, whereas on the occasion of a native regiment leaving Bangalore to garrison the Andamans, Singapore, and other foreign ports, the local railway platform was the scene of great lamentation and weeping, on the other hand, the Sappers and Miners went away to join the Indian expeditionary force with light hearts and shouting urrahs.

25TH M.N.I.—The 25th Madras Native Infantry—the regiment which is now en route to Malta, as part of the Indian contingent—sustained a great calamity in May 1854 on the eve of our last war with Russia. On the 10th May of that year the Lady Nugent, transport-ship, sailed from Madras for Rangoon, with 350 rank and file of the corps, twenty women and children, the staff officers, and a crew of thirty seamen. She was never afterwards heard of, nor any portion of her wreck identified. It was generally thought she went down with all hands on board during a severe gale which swept across her path about fourteen days after leaving Madras.

PONDICHERRY RAILWAY.—We hear that a telegram was received in Pondicherry two days ago from Monsieur Jules Golin, the Deputy for French India, in the National Assembly, stating that the convention between the French Government and the South Indian Railway Company for laying the railway between Pondicherry and Villapooram has at last been signed, and that the railway authorities will, without delay, begin the work they have undertaken to perform. We believe that the South Indian Railway authorities knowing full well the advantages that will be derived by bringing the capital of French India in direct railway communication with the Southern Presidency, have the materials ready to lay out the line. The French Government at the outset promised to construct the line on their own territory with the aid of their own engineers; now, however, it seems that they have abandoned their original intention and have allowed the railway authorities to complete the line. The surveys have been completed. — Standard.

THE LATE MR. R. C. CALDWELL.—The Madras Athenæum regrets to record the death of Mr. Robert Charles Caldwell, eldest son of Bishop Caldwell, which melancholy event took place at the Copper House Hotel, on the evening of May 2. Mr. Caldwell was connected with the Press for several years, and in 1872 edited the Madras Athenæum. He was an able penman, and at home contributed to the Daily News, Contemporary Review, Athenæum, Illustrated, and other papers. He also contributed several valuable papers to the Indian Antiquary, and was the author of the Chetney Lyrics. He was a great linguist, and always took a deep interest in the study of the vernaculars. Mr. Caldwell returned to India in a shattered state of health, about eight months ago, and broke down gradually. Notwithstanding his illness, he contributed a series of light articles to one of the Madras dailies and the Indian Charivari. He died suddenly, from heat apoplexy. His remains were interred, on Sunday, the 3rd May, in St. George's Cathedral.

THUNDER-STORM.—Writing about the thunder-storm that lately visited Mangalore, the correspondent of the Madras Standard gives the following particulars:—"The lightning struck the barracks, damaged portions of the roof and walls, destroyed two stands of arms, besides fourteen muskets and pouches, and killed a cow which was lying in the verandah. It also struck the building between the Magazine and the solitary cells, in which the tents of the 34th Regiment are kept. One of the sentries was struck dead, and another, who is now recovering, was stunned into unconsciousness. The lightning cut the walls in several places. In one place it made a hole right through the wall, a little below the roof. Fortunately there were few tents in it at the time, the greater part having been pitched out some days before, for the use of the 34th Regiment. These tents, now ready for foreign service, were found this morning lying on the ground and covered with mud. A vessel in the roads, with a cargo of kopra or dried cocoa-nuts from Cochin and bound to Bombay, was struck, and five out of the nine men forming the crew were killed and three injured."

THE INDIAN CONTINGENT.

We made some remarks last week upon the reasons which caused some delay in despatching our Indian Expeditionary Force from Bombay. We made them in no captious spirit, for, all said and done, we think the energy inspired by our indefatigable Governor has been rather understated than overstated. But we were looking forward to the despatch of a still larger body of troops from Bombay, and were anxious that a reputation for smartness and celerity so well established should be thoroughly maintained to the end. We are now gratified to find that our suggestions have, to a very great extent, been adopted at head-quarters, and that, with a view to strengthen the weak points which were obvious when the different departments were worked against time, it has been resolved to appoint a committee to investigate all the details connected with the despatch of the expeditionary force. The Committee which has already been ordered to assemble will be composed of the following officers:—President: Brigadier General Aitchison, C.B.; Members: Colonel Hancock, R.E.; Lieutenant-Colonel Hogg, Deputy Quarter Master General; and Lieutenant Brebner, Marine Department. Secretary: Lieutenant Baker, R.A. The following are the special points towards which H.E. the Governor directs inquiry: 1st. What is the best size for iron tanks; what numbers could be made up in, say, a fortnight; what would be the capacity of tanks so made up, estimated in gallons? 2nd. Irrespective of the number which can be made available within a fortnight, what are the most advisable means for arranging for a future supply in the event of possible requirements for foreign service? 3rd. What number of wooden casks could be made up with advantage in Bombay? 4th. How long will it take to make new wooden tanks serviceable by soaking, and what is the respective cost of wooden and iron tanks? 5th. How many water barges with steam pumps can be made available in Bombay? How much water could be daily supplied to transports, consistently with the ordinary requirements of the harbour; and with the means existing for the supply of water on shore, how can these means be augmented? 6th. Can the water supply for transport be taken from some point nearer than the main pipe at Mazagon? 7th. Can a Commissariat pier be constructed immediately near the Commissariat head-quarters? Can the supply depot be established near such a pier? Would this arrangement greatly facilitate the despatch of supplies to troopships? 8th. Can any mechanical contrivance be quickly constructed for use between decks of ships carrying horses, for better ventilation? 9th. How many steam launches are available immediately in the harbour? Are these sufficient for the rapid despatch of a force? If not, how can the number and strength be rapidly increased? 10th. What is the number of barges for embarking horses available in Bombay? Is the number sufficient? If not, how can the number be increased and maintained? The Committee has been reminded that in respect to many of the above questions the aspect of affairs will be greatly modified by the opening of the Prince's Dock next year. We are unable now to discuss the value and relevancy of these searching questions, but the mere fact of their having been put in such a regular and persistent form would evidently suggest the despatch of a second and larger expedition long before ever the Prince's Dock is opened "next year," were it not for the expressed determination of the English Government to send no more troops just at present. And we are glad to note that our Government are going about the preliminary preparations with such sterling good sense.—Times of India.

Miscellaneous.

THE REV. MR. WATSON.—The appointment of the Rev. A. B. Watson to be an Assistant Chaplain of the Church of Scotland on the Bombay establishment, has been approved.

CHOLERA.—There have been three cases of cholera on board H.M.S. Teazer at Bombay. The men attacked have been removed to the European Hospital.

CIVIL SERVICE.—Lieutenant Donald McIntosh Smith, chief clerk in the office of the Adjutant-General, Bombay, died suddenly of heat apoplexy at the Boree Bunder Station on Thursday before last.

THE CONTINGENT.—Colonel Hancock's Committee on the improvement of the means of equipping an expedition for sea at Bombay has already completed its report, and forwarded it, along with notes of the evidence taken, to Government.

SURAT.—Of the thirty-one rioters under trial before Mr. Lely, twelve were discharged, and the remaining nineteen committed to the Criminal Sessions, on charges of attempting to commit the murder of Mr. Scannell and others, causing grievous hurt to public servants, committing mischief, rioting, &c. There was a third case, in which three of the nineteen prisoners already committed, and two new ones, are charged in connection with the riot at the Surat railway station.

COMBINATIONS.—It is rumoured that all the native metal merchants have combined not to buy or send orders for metals through any of the mercantile firms in Bombay for two months certain. In the event of their making any purchases, they will only do so with joint consent. The object of this combination is to compel the mercantile houses in this city to sell or order out metal at the rates which the native metal merchants shall determine.

DARING ROBBERY.—The Deccan Herald says that on the night of the 26th April a gang of men committed a most daring robbery in the house of one Govinda Rao Pranzpaye, a wealthy banker of Jamkhandis. They entered the premises between eleven and twelve in the night, and after a slight resistance from two old men, one of whom was the banker himself and the other his uncle (who were wounded), the thieves succeeded in making away with booty which amounted to from Rs. 20,000 to Rs. 40,000. Some Rs. 10,000 have been recovered.

LICENCE TAX COMMISSIONER.—Mr. W. G. Pedder, the Licence Tax Commissioner in this Presidency, has been travelling in connection with his work in the Surat, Broach, Ahmedabad, and Kaira Zillahs, and proceeded on Sunday last to the Rutnagherry talooka, with the intention of visiting Dharwar, Canara, Belgaum, and other Zillahs. His work will probably extend over six months, during which he will be paid at the rate of Rs. 2,900 per month.

STATEMENT OF SILVER BALANCE IN THE MINT.—The value of silver in the Mint on the morning of the 6th May was Rs. 2,04,81,919, add silver received during the week, Rs. 2,84,724. The sum of Rs. 19,00,000 in new coin was paid during the week; Rs. 38,70,081 was remitted to Calcutta; the balance left was Rs. 1,49,96,612. There is in addition bullion valued at Rs. 4,77,601 belonging to private individuals deposited in the Mint vaults and awaiting assay.

WAR ENTHUSIASM.—A singular scene was witnessed the other day at Poona, when the 26th N.I. were starting for Bombay en route to Malta. Several hundred European soldiers belonging to the 2nd Queen's and the 11th went down to the sepoy's lines, helped the men of the 26th on with their new equipment, then saw the men fall in, and marched them off to the railway station, cheering them, patting them on the back, and singing at intervals the now familiar chorus "We don't want to fight." So great was the crowd of British soldiers, and so determined their good-will towards the 26th N.I., that the officers of that regiment could not get near their men, and were obliged to let them march off in charge of their British comrades.

S.S. "HUTTON."—The Bombay Government have chartered the s.s. Hutton, Captain Hodges, as a transport in the event of a second contingent being despatched from this country. She is a vessel admirably adapted for carrying troops, having exceptionally high between decks, which run nearly the whole length, and is well ventilated. She was used as a trooper in the Abyssinian Expedition. The Hutton went into the dock on the 3rd inst. to have the necessary alterations made in her. It may be added that the Dock-yard authorities are still very busy repairing all the leaky and rejected water-tanks, testing, and storing them. Several hundreds of these reservoirs will therefore be ready in a few days.

A SOMNAMBULIST.—On the night of the 8th May an accident happened at Kurrachee to Mr. W. Sivewright, Assistant Engineer of the Indus Valley State Railway. He was sleeping in the upper story of his bungalow, and, finding the night warm, he opened the door of the front verandah. Afterwards he got up in his sleep, and, walking through this door, fell a distance of twenty feet below, on his way striking the roof of the sunshade of the lower verandah, which caused him to turn over and fall on his head. The fall roused his friends, Mr. Lang and Mr. Knox, who ran down and found Mr. Sivewright insensible. Dr. Henderson arrived within a few minutes, and found Mr. Sivewright had broken his right thigh and jaw. He is still in a critical condition, but hopes of his recovery are entertained.

EXCITED SIDI.—On Saturday last an exciting scene took place at Bazaar Gate-street Fort, Bombay, caused by a Sidi, a noted character, who has been imprisoned several times. It appears that he was seen suddenly to enter a shop in the above street, where ammunition and arms were sold, and snatching up a sword which was in its scabbard, he returned to the street; here he drew the sword from the scabbard, and wielded it in a threatening manner, as if he would cut anyone down who attempted to approach him. On seeing a Parsee priest, named Jiwanji Shapurji, who was passing by at the time, he ran towards him, but he made off with a fleetness that the Sidi was unable to imitate. Unfortunately a poor basket coolie, who was in the crowd that had collected, happened to receive a deep cut over the left shoulder, on seeing which the desperado fled, sword in hand, into Modi Khana-street, and entered a house occupied by one Haji Muhammed Rajab. Here the fellow hid himself. In the meantime information had reached the police, when Messrs. Whitten and Atkinson, European police officers, proceeded to discover the Sidi, and on making a search found him on the second floor, under the staircase, covered over with a number of gunny bags and amongst firewood. On being made a prisoner he said that he was excited to this outrageous conduct in consequence of a Parsee lad having abused him and his religion.

Official Papers.

THE COINAGE IN ASSAM, &c.

Circular No. 63, dated Shillong, April 5, 1878, from the Deputy-Accountant-General, Assam.

A Deputy-Commissioner has inquired whether coins bearing the head of King William the Fourth should be withdrawn from circulation, under the operation of this office Circular No. 61, dated Feb. 1 last. Perhaps other officers also may be doubtful as to what action they ought to take with respect to these coins.

2. The Financial Resolution upon which the circular in question is based, calls in, with effect from June 1 next, all silver coins coined and issued before the 1st day of September, 1835. The "King William Fourth" rupee was issued under Act XVII. of 1835, which Act became law upon Sept. 1 of that year. And, consequently, these rupees have not been called in, and should not be withdrawn from circulation.

3. To prevent any mistakes, it may be well to mention that the following coins only have been called in, viz.:—Bombay silver coins, Madras silver coins, Furukabad silver coins, Sonat silver coins, and Calcutta Sicca silver coins, and all silver coins issued by the East India Company bearing inscription in native character. These will cease to be legal tender on and after 1st June, 1878; the only silver coins which will then remain legal tender will be those bearing the device of the head of the Sovereign in whose reign they were coined.

4. As already intimated, the above coins will continue to be legal tender until the first day of June next. But they should only be received by you in payment of Government demands, and be freely exchanged for coins of recent date, as ruled by the Government of India, "under the conditions which now apply to them." This means that they should be received at par, subject to the provisions of Sections 16 and 17 of the Indian Coinage Act of 1870, i.e., if they have not lost more than 2 per cent. in weight by reasonable wearing, or are not counterfeit, or are reduced in weight, otherwise than by reasonable wearing.

THE Calcutta Court of Appeal has upheld the conviction of the Raja of Pooree and two of his servants, but quashed it in the case of the other two men.

THE Indus Valley railway bridge over the Sutlej was opened for traffic by Sir Andrew Clarke on the 8th June.

SERIOUS accounts have been received of the cholera in the 62nd Regiment at Morar. Colonel Hay and Lieutenant Golding are among the victims.

WE understand that the Secretary of State has sanctioned the increase to the administrative and police staff of the Punjab, lately approved by the Government of India. The cost of the increase is put down at Rs. 2,950 per mensem.

THE Railway Conference is to meet in Calcutta in November next.

EAST INDIA PUBLIC WORKS COMMITTEE.

The Committee met on Friday, May 31, Sir George Campbell in the chair, to resume the examination of Colonel J. G. Fife, late Chief Engineer for Irrigation Works in the Bombay Presidency. The inquiry was continued into the revenue system of Sind and the Deccan. The present revenue is what is termed the consolidated land revenue, being derived from cesses on the land and a water rate, both being collected by a numerous staff of collectors. The cost of collection causes the Public Works in Sind to be only moderately remunerative. It is at the maximum only about five (not fifteen) per cent. A larger capital fund is required to enable the canal system of the provinces to completely succeed. The charge of collecting the revenue is more than twenty per cent. on the returns. The revenue is derived from two classes of the people; there is the less numerous class of cultivators who are well to do, and from these the revenue is good; but when the class is poor—as the population generally is—the revenue falls short of the standard which ought to repay capital. Until the status and material prosperity of the population improve, the public works must be carried on with small results to revenue. But, as in other parts of India, Sind and the Deccan must benefit with improved means of communication and improved cultivation.

It may reasonably be anticipated that what is now an uncertain return of five per cent. on capital will rise in future years.

In answer to a question by the Chairman, the witness was understood to say that the mode of procedure in carrying out irrigation works in the Bombay Presidency is, that the Bombay Government adopt the projects for works laid before them, and indent on the supreme Government for the means of carrying them out through the Public Works Department.

The committee proceeded to examine Colonel Fife on the products of the land in Sind, with a view to ascertaining the adaptability of the irrigation as applied to a dry soil. The witness stated that the products of Sind are principally rice, wheat, and barley. The sugar-cane also is grown extensively. The value of the produce has been much increased by the present means of irrigation. From personal experience the witness said he felt quite satisfied with the irrigation works of modern construction. They had proved well suited to the development of the resources of the land as far as its limited capacities would allow. He repeated that time alone was required to perfect the works and improve the cultivation. Meanwhile, he recommended that the whole question of revenue and its collection should be submitted to a commission of inquiry.

In reply to further questions, Colonel Fife said that cotton had been experimentally grown in Sind on the plan adopted on the banks of the Nile in Egypt. A model farm had been tried in Sind, but the soil is arid and impregnated with salt, and does not therefore possess the fertilising nature of the soil of Egypt. Some years ago he had visited Egypt for the purpose of studying the canal system in vogue there. He found the Nile more suitable to irrigation than the Indus, for the reasons stated.

Colonel Fife referred to a Blue-book handed to him of the date 1873, containing some statements derogatory to the inundation canal system of Sind. It was asserted that the canals are unproductive of results to revenue in consequence of their rude state and imperfect condition. This did not accord with his own experience, and he had corresponded with the Government on the unfair statements of the Blue-book.

In answer to questions by Mr. D. Onslow and other hon. members, Col. Fife replied that the inundation canals in use have in their time averted scarcity and unhealthiness arising from the occasional floods, which latter, on receding, produce malaria and fever, and sometimes also scarcity, although not actual famine. The operations of the Public Works Department in Sind have been so far successful that in the last fifteen years the population has become better off, while immigration has increased labour and thus rendered the land more productive. Productions and exports have increased as the irrigation system has extended. The witness agreed, at the invitation of the committee, to supply a report on the fiscal arrangements of Sind since the canal system had developed the resources of the country.

In reply to Mr. Fawcett, the witness said he was aware that the Public Works Department's operations in the Bombay Presidency had been interfered with by the Government some seventeen years ago, and that the works in Sind had been temporarily stopped; but the works themselves, he repeated, were meritorious and creditable to the Department. No doubt the establishment was open to reform, and he had all along advocated reform. The entire system of irrigation works in Sind required the closest inquiry.—Adjourned.

Miscellaneous.

AN INDIAN VISITOR.—On Friday, the 24th ult., there arrived in London a young Indian Prince, the Maharajah of Kuch Bahar, who is making a twelve months' tour of Europe; after two months' stay in London he will visit the principal manufacturing towns of England. He is accompanied by his guardian, Surgeon-Major B. Simpson, and Mr. H. St. J. Kneller, his tutor and joint guardian. Two cousins have come over with him, with a view to being educated in this country.

THE LATE LORD HOBART.—Lady Hobart has published, in the form of a pamphlet (Macmillan), the official correspondence of her late husband, when Governor of Madras, on the question of "The Salt Tax in Southern India." The views he expressed are calculated to confirm his reputation as a painstaking administrator and a sympathiser with native opinion. At the same time they are a severe condemnation of the policy adopted by the present Indian Government in raising the duty upon salt in the tracts recently stricken by famine, under the pretext of an equalisation of the rates ruling in the different provinces of the peninsula.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The tenders for £400,000 in bills on India were received on June 5 at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were:—To Calcutta, £311,146, at an average rate of 1s. 8.387d.; to Bombay, £71,000, at an average rate of 1s. 8.375d., and to Madras, £17,854, at an average rate of 1s. 8.458d. Tenders on Calcutta and Madras at 1s. 8½d. will receive about 7 per cent.; all above that price in full. Tenders on Bombay at 1s. 8½d. will receive in full. According to these results there is a further improved tendency in the allotment, the proportion allotted at the above rate being considerably smaller, and the average rate rather higher than last Wednesday.

OUDE AND ROHILKUND RAILWAY.—The report and accounts of the Oude and Rohilkund Railway Company for the half-year ending December last show that the total earnings were £434,180, against £341,142 for the corresponding period of 1876; and the expenses £227,421, against £206,807—leaving as profit £206,759, against £134,335. The percentage of working expenses, amounting to 58.07, was, it is stated, enhanced by a sum of Rs. 45,072, the net charge to revenue on account of relaying the road between Shah-gunge and Malipore, and also by the whole of the home establishment charges being, for the first time, debited to revenue.

PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL STEAM NAVIGATION COMPANY.—The half-yearly meeting of this company was held on Tuesday, at their offices in Leadenhall-street, Mr. Faue De Salis presiding. The secretary (Mr. A. M. Bethune) having read the notice convening the meeting, the report, a brief notice of which has appeared, was taken as read.—After some discussion the report was adopted, and the dividend declared.—The meeting was then made special, for the purpose of altering the deed of settlement, so as to enable the directors to invest the company's funds in Metropolitan Board of Works Stock and other substantial securities, excluding foreign investments, and a resolution to that effect was adopted.

MADRAS IRRIGATION AND CANAL COMPANY.—The ordinary general meeting of the Madras Irrigation and Canal Company was held on May 30, at the offices, Coleman-street. Mr. J. Thomson, the Chairman, presided, and in moving the adoption of the report, an abstract of which appeared in our last, said he wished to direct their attention to three satisfactory features relating to matters of considerable importance in the interests of the company, and for which they had been long struggling. As to irrigation, there had been a small reduction in that of wet land, but irrigation of dry crop showed a considerable advance. The yield from crops irrigated by their canal, as compared with crops irrigated by the rainfall, showed both in quantity and quality a very considerable excess; and the ryots themselves admitted that the water from the canal contained so much nourishing and enriching matter that it saved them the necessity of manuring the soil.—Lord Kinnaid, in seconding the motion, said in three months they might expect three boats to be in a position to enter on their trial.—The report was adopted.

THE ANNUAL INDIAN NAVY DINNER, held at the Criterion, on the 4th of June, was an occasion of unusual interest, owing to the presentation of a testimonial by the officers of the service, to Lieutenant C. R. Low, author of "The History of the Indian Navy." The testimonial consisted of an elegantly illuminated and framed vote of thanks, with a purse of one hundred and forty sovereigns. The presentation was made by Captain Frushard in appropriate terms, and was responded to by Mr. Low, in an address which was heartily applauded by his brother officers. Among those present, thirty-five in number, were Captains Frushard, Campbell, Rennie, C.B., Draper, Adams, Giles, Davies; Lieutenants Sconce, Templer, Wilson, Wetherall, Hewison, and Surgeon General Vaughan.

THE INDIA OFFICE AT THE CIVIL SERVICE SPORTS.—The India Office probably has won more events since the commencement of these sports, fifteen years ago, than any other branch of the Service. At the present meeting but two men entered from the department, but these well sustained its reputation; C. L. Lockton (Library), winning the 100 yards, 220 yards' challenge, and being second in the 120 yards' hurdle race, having vainly attempted to give Evan-son fifteen yards, and gaining the long jump with a fine spring of 22 feet 3½ inches. W. H. Beighton (Stores) was second in the 300 yards handicap, six inches separating him from the winner, to whom he gave twelve yards; second in the 220 yards challenge, and third in the 100 yards. The tug of war is now the feature of the sport, and the India Office team has never been beaten since this popular sport has found a place in the programme. This year seven teams entered, the Post-office and Audit being the heaviest. In the final hauls the India Office beat the Audit Office twice running. The tugzers were W. Lindsay, H. D. Mackintosh, E. G. Burls, R. Friend, L. Tennyson, and C. Grey.

BUDDHISM.—On the 28th May a paper on Lahoul and Spiti-Tibetan districts under British rule, with observations on Buddhism in Little Tibet, was read at the Anthropological Institute, St. Martin's-place, by Colonel E. Paske, late Deputy-Commissioner of Kangra, Panjab. After a brief description of the route through the Kangra and Kulu valleys to the high mountain passes leading into Lahoul and Spiti, the paper supplied particulars of the physical features of those countries, their products, &c., with some account of the habits and customs of the people, concluding with observations on Buddhism. Colonel Paske gave an explanation of the modified form of Buddhism prevalent in the provinces of Little Tibet, and brought to notice the ritual and religious customs of the Lamas or Buddhist priests—described his visits to Buddhist monasteries, exhibiting specimens of Buddhist ritualistic instruments and other curiosities, with a small painting representing the triumph of Buddhism, executed by a Lama recently arrived from Lhasa; and in conclusion he gave an account of the Moravian Mission Settlement at Kaichang, in Lahoul, dwelling upon the noble efforts of earnest German missionaries who devote their lives to the good of the people of the wild tracts of Lahoul and Spiti.

INDIAN APPEAL.—THE MAHARAJAH PERTAB NARAIN SINGH v. THE MAHARANEE SUBHAO KOER AND OTHERS.—In this suit, which was an important appeal from a decree of the Court of the Commissioner of Fyzabad, Oudh, and which was, as was then supposed, finally decided by their lordships in the course of last year, a petition was presented by one Trilokinath, for the re-hearing of the appeal, by reason of his not having entered an appearance as respondent, and of the appellant (the successful party) failing to take the usual steps to give him notice of the suit or to compel his appearance. Their lordships, after hearing counsel for the petitioner, expressed the jealousy with which they regarded any attempt to question the finality of their judgments, confirmed as this had been by an Order in Council. To re-open an appeal once decided by that Court was a very rare proceeding indeed, and the result of the authorities on the point seemed to be that it could not be allowed, unless by some accident, without any blame or default on the part of the person himself, a material party had not been heard. Their lordships reviewed the proceedings in the present case, and stated that they certainly understood throughout that the petitioner was one of the respondents in the matter, his name being inserted upon the heading of the decrees, and if, as was now alleged, he was not represented and knew nothing about the suit, there had been gross carelessness, to say the least of it, on the part of the solicitor for the respondents. They thought that the application for a re-trial ought more properly to be made in the Indian Courts, since what the petitioner desired was not a mere re-hearing of the case on the evidence as it stood, which would probably be of little advantage to him, but a new trial on fresh evidence. Should a new suit ever be brought and the decision of the Indian Courts be pronounced upon it, there would then be, as on any other question so raised, an opportunity to appeal to the Judicial Committee. Their lordships, in the end, intimated that they would advise her Majesty to dismiss the petition, with costs.

ROYAL COLONIAL INSTITUTE.—At a meeting of this society held on the 4th inst. at the Pall-mall, Regent-street, two papers were read—1, by Mr. Gavin Gatheral, H.B.M.'s Vice-Consul at Angora, on the Angora or mohair goat, and its naturalisation in British Colonies; and 2, by Mr. S. M'Bean, C.E., on the proposed Ramiseram ship canal between India and Ceylon. In the absence of the Duke of Manchester, the chair was taken by the Earl of Dunraven. In the latter paper the lecturer began by referring to the proposals which had been made since the appointment of Sir James Elphinstone's Select Committee of the House of Commons in 1862 with a view to shortening the ocean communication between Europe and the West Coast of India by avoiding the dangerous circumnavigation of the Island of Ceylon. Mr. Townshend, Superintendent of Plymouth Breakwater, had proposed to deepen an intricate and tortuous channel seven miles in length between the island of Ramiseram and Point Tonitori at a cost of £1,386,000. Mr. M'Bean proposed instead to cut a direct canal through the low island of Ramiseram at a point one mile and a quarter east of Paumben at a cost of only £550,000. This would give a highway less than three miles in length, from 30ft. soundings on either side of the island, capable of taking ships of all classes. He proposed that the canal should be 176ft. wide at the base, giving room for vessels to pass one another, and with an average depth throughout of 27ft. The entrances to the canal he would make 350 yards wide, with 30ft. depth of water, which would be amply sufficient for the safety of a vessel in rough weather. The nature of the cutting was sand, gravel, and soft sandstone, which could be excavated without difficulty at an economical rate, either dry or by dredging. The advantages which he considered were offered by this plan were its greater safety for all kinds of vessels in either monsoon, approached from north or south, the shortening of the route both logically and generally, saving of time in construction, greater reliability always, and less danger from silting up by cross currents ; complete shelter from monsoons, and facility of passage at all seasons ; and the fact that the best possible site for docks, railway stations, quays, &c., would be obtained ; and, lastly, that this scheme would not necessitate the closing of the Paumben passage and the consequent serious interference with the coasting trade. The Ramisera Canal, as a work of great general utility, would give occupation to many thousands of starving coolies, and no better time than the present could be chosen for beginning the work, and this might also be said of the construction of a railway to unite the Indian and Ceylon systems. To make a secure harbour at Madras would cost millions ; but on the Ramisera Island, as an extension of the works of the canal an outlay of £250,000 more would be sufficient to make docks of twenty-five acres in extent easily accessible at all times. He thought there should be no further delay on the part of the Government in undertaking what it had been incontestably proved would be beneficial in every way to the local trade of India and Ceylon and the general trade of Europe with India. In the course of a discussion which followed, Mr. Campbell Johnston expressed his regret that Sir James Elphinstone, who had wished to be present, had been prevented from attending by the necessity for being present at a large meeting of his constituents at Plymouth. Mr. Frederick Young, honorary secretary, hoped the ventilation of the subject would draw attention to the great importance of shortening the route to Madras and Calcutta. Sir Charles Stirling said that one advantage which the lecturer had not taken credit for in his proposal would be that passengers for Madras might disembark at Ramisera to complete the journey, about 200 miles, by rail, and thus avoid the loss of time and dangers of the surf attendant on debarkation at Madras.

ENGLAND AND INDIA.—Lecturing on Friday last, at the United Service Institution, on "The Native States of India in Subsidiary Alliance with the British Government," Colonel G. B. Malletson, C.S.I., said that the assertion of the English mastery by the assumption by her Majesty of the title of Empress, in 1876, was a measure not only politic, but imperatively necessary. The more it was brought home to the native princes that England intended to be master in name as well as in deed, the greater would be their respect for this country—the more solid their conviction that they were not independent, but vassal princes. It was the absence of this direct mastery that had encouraged men to rouse in the native princes aspirations to which they had no claim. The splendid stand made by England during the last four months against the threatened aggression of Russia would go far to impress the extent of our power upon their minds ; whilst the employment of native troops in Europe would tend to cement together the bonds of the severed branches of the great Aryan race. He was convinced that every succeeding year would increase the loyalty of the native princes, and their desire to uphold the vast Empire of which they formed a valuable and necessary part.

OUR INDIAN TROOPS.—Two letters under this heading appear in the Times of the 7th instant. Major-General Patrick Maxwell says :—"Whatever decision may ultimately be arrived at on the general question touching the employment of Indian troops out of India, and however such decision may be arrived at, one thing seems eminently desirable in the meantime, and that is, that a small representative body be selected from the Indian troops now at Malta and sent forward to this country for a brief season, for what might be called mutually spectacular purposes—to see and to be seen,—

This course would have a threefold benefit. It would be highly flattering to the individuals so selected and to the Indian forces generally. It would tend to educate them to a wholesome sense of our power, toning down any possible over-estimate of their own importance. Finally, it would enable the people of this country to form an idea of the character and appearance of those troops, and thus provide an important factor towards the decision of the general question." On the other hand, let "Anglo-Indians" be heard on the subject :—"If the Sepoys come to England, they will doubtless be very much impressed, though in a manner somewhat different from the expectation of some sanguine M.P.s. What will be the chief novelty they will witness ? They will see for the first time Englishmen and Englishwomen of the degraded type characteristic of our town masses. To their amazement they will find themselves surrounded by myriads of stunted beings, the like of whom for white men have never entered their imagination. Puny Sahibs who pick pockets, or if brave kick their wives, or if very courageous (and ten to one) kick a policeman ! Filthy Sahibs, whose persons are never cleaned ! Raddled Mem Sahibs, who reek of gin and walk the streets in rags in the hope of selling their loathsome embraces. Everywhere dirt, drunkenness, disease, dishonesty, and riot. The stately Rajput, whose personal habits are as refined as those of the highest gentleman in the land, who scarcely ranks a drunkard as a human being at all, and who admires nothing but strength and comeliness and physical daring—what an idea he will carry away of the "Imperial race," whose members he has hitherto felt no shame in acknowledging as masters !"

India in Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, June 3.—PRESS COMMISSIONER.—In reply to a question from Sir GEORGE CAMPBELL, Mr. G. STANHOPE stated that the duty of the officer appointed to superintend the working of the Vernacular Press Act was described to be to make himself thoroughly acquainted with the legitimate wants and aspirations of the Press ; to receive and reply to references and complaints from editors ; to act as the referee of the Press in its communications with the Government on the one hand, and on the other as the responsible adviser of the Government in its dealings with the Press under the new law. It would also be his duty to read and revise the proofs submitted by those editors who might desire to withdraw themselves from the restrictive provisions of the law.—The papers relating to this subject had been laid upon the table of the House, and it could be seen that the Secretary of State in Council had requested the Government of India to refrain from putting that portion of the Act into operation which relates to the examination and revision of proofs by a Government officer. As regards the question whether papers would be laid on the table containing the dissents on the subject by members of the Council of India, in accordance with the provisions of the law, the proceedings and speeches in Council had usually been treated as confidential, and it was not disposed to regard them in any other light upon the present occasion.—Sir G. CAMPBELL said he would take the first opportunity which presented itself to move for copies of the papers in question.

TROOPS OF INDIAN PRINCES.—Mr. E. STANHOPE, in reply to Mr. O'DONNELL, said :—"It is not in contemplation to interfere with the number of troops in native States in India as defined in treaty guarantees. The issue of improved arms to the troops of native States is in no way regulated by treaty, but is entirely dependent on the discretion of the paramount Power."

THE MAHARAJAH OF KUCH-BAHAR.—In reply to a question from Mr. O'DONNELL, Mr. E. STANHOPE said :—"The Maharajah of Kuch Bahar is a minor. He is a voluntary visitor to this country and was in no way forcibly removed to England under an armed escort. His visit to England was an object which his father had much at heart during his life time, and which the Maharajah himself has been determined to carry out. No copy of the petition stated by the hon. member to have been addressed by the Rani of Kuch Bahar protesting against the alleged forcible removal of his Highness to England, had been received by the Home Government."

HOUSE OF LORDS, THURSDAY, June 6.—THE ARMENIAN CHRISTIANS.—The Earl of SHAFTESBURY—representing that the number of the Armenians in the world was estimated at four to five millions, "of whom about three millions inhabit the Ottoman Empire, one million are under Russia, and the rest are scattered over Persia, India, Java, Europe, and Armenia,"—put forward the question before announced, whether the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs would undertake that in the coming Congress "the case of the Armenian Christians shall be heard as well as the case of the other Christians under the Government of Turkey ?"—The Marquis of SALISBURY, after referring to the necessity of distinguishing between large Armenian communities and Armenians scattered here and there in Muhammadan countries, expressed his assurance that the case of Armenia would be examined by European Powers with great sympathy for its people and a desire to ameliorate their lot. Indeed, the Article of the Treaty of San Stefano, by which the Sultan promised certain reforms and protective measures, rendered its consideration by the Congress imperative.—Lord CARNARVON expressed his satisfaction at the statement of Lord Salisbury. He believed that there was no population who deserved more consideration than the Armenians.—Lord GRANVILLE also expressed the satisfaction with which he had heard Lord Salisbury's statement.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, June 6.—THE TANNA CASE.—In reply to Mr. GORST, Mr. W. H. SMITH stated that the Secretary to the Treasury had already laid on the table the papers relative to the hanging of a native of Tanna on board H.M.S. Beagle ; and he hoped they would be in print soon after the Whitsuntide recess.

THE PERAK EXPEDITION.—Mr. E. STANHOPE, in answer to Sir C. DILKE, who asked questions as to the employment of troops partly despatched from India during the operations in Perak 1875-76, said,—"Some disbursements are actually being made at the present time on account of this expedition for personal allowances to officers and men, and there are still further payments to be made. The claims of the Indian Government against Imperial revenues on account of disbursements in connection with this expedition amount to something less than £40,000, but this does not represent the whole cost. These claims have not yet been adjusted with the Colonial Office and the War Office. Some portions of the expenses have, I understand, been already charged against Army votes, and it is at present impossible to say whether any supplementary estimate for the Army charges will be necessary."

PENINSULAR AND ORIENTAL COMPANY.—Mr. ANDERSON asked the Postmaster-General if he had any reason to believe that the Peninsular and Oriental Company was the chief of some associated companies who, by stringent rules among themselves, were endeavouring to establish a monopoly of the carrying trade to India; and whether, in the interests of the public service, he would at once advertise for tenders for the mail service at present performed by the Peninsular and Oriental Company.—Sir H. SELWIN-IBBETSON was aware that delay in such matters as that to which the question related was of very serious importance, and efforts were being made to minimise as much as possible the consequences of that delay. It was not within the knowledge of the Post-Office department that the companies alluded to were connected with one another in the way to which the hon. gentleman referred. The advertising for tenders, as had been already explained, had been postponed in consequence of its having been deemed desirable to consult the Indian Government with regard to certain points in the new tenders. The Government had telegraphed the other day with the view to expediting an answer from India, and he was informed, though he had not yet seen it, that a reply had arrived at the India Office, which would probably be laid before the Treasury on the 7th inst.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, FRIDAY, June 7.—PERAK AND INDIAN TROOPS.—Sir C. DILKE asked the Secretary of State for the Colonies whether his attention had been called to an article in the London and China Telegraph of May 27th, 1878, in which the writer, after commenting upon the estimates for the State of Perak recently framed by the British resident, Mr. Low, and upon the wisdom of a decision of Mr. Low, "who, acting under the advice of the Government of the Straits Settlements," declined to sanction a proposed new tax, goes on to remark, in conclusion, "that as Perak matters seem to be all regulated by the Governor at Singapore, it would be better and more straightforward at once to announce the annexation of the country, and not to keep up a state of affairs which is farcical and far from creditable;" and whether, looking to the fact that on the 1st June, 1876, Lord Carnarvon expressly declared that "government of the country by British officers in the name of the Sultan (a measure very little removed from annexation) could not be allowed," he would lay upon the table further papers showing for the information of the House, the policy, instructions, and authority under which the proceedings of British Residents in Perak are now regulated; and in what respects the present condition of Perak differs from that of an annexed province, and the functions of the Residents there from those proposed for the Commissioners appointed by Sir William Jervois, but subsequently set aside by Lord Carnarvon. The hon. baronet also mentioned that the Indian troops were employed in an expedition against Perak, and the money so spent had not yet been repaid to the Indian Government.—Sir G. CAMPBELL wished to know whether a policy of annexation was to be carried out or not.—Sir M. HICKS-BEACH said there had been no doubt considerable delay in bringing this payment of the troops under the notice of the House, but that was due to the difficulty of settling accounts in the different departments. As to the statement quoted, Perak was not governed from Singapore. No doubt the residents had greater power than that of merely advising native rulers, but, as Lord Carnarvon had said in his despatch quoted, government of the country by British officers could not be allowed. If any instructions had been sent out subsequent to that date, he would look them over.

PROFITABLE GRUBS.—We hear that a well-known doctor in Bombay has been threatened with an action for having given a Mahomedan quack into custody. It appears that this Mahomedan professes to cure a certain painful disease, by extracting from the patient a little thing about an inch and a half long like a grub. He was about to perform this operation on a railway official, when a friend of the patient fancied he saw something in the mouth of the Mahomed. Suspecting something wrong, he forced open the operator's mouth, and found one of these grubs, which it was evident he intended to palm off upon the patient as having come out of him. Upon searching him, more of these grubs were found on him. Before he undertook the operation, the quack induced the patient to sign a promise to pay Rs. 100, which promise was endorsed by the friend of the patient who was present when the operation was about to be performed. Notwithstanding the exposure, the quack had the impudence to call on the patient's friend and demand payment of his fee. The doctor above-mentioned happening to be there at the time was consulted on the question, and on his advice a police sepoy was called in, and the Mahomedan was arrested and taken before Mr. Vincent. The latter, however, said that owing to some omission in the law he was unable to take any steps in the matter. The party arrested was accordingly released, and has since instructed his solicitors to file a suit for damages against the medical man in question, unless a sum of Rs. 2,000 be paid as compensation.—Bombay Gazette.

RED BOOK FOR SERGEANTS.

By W. BRIGHT, Colour-Sergeant, 37th
Middlesex R.V.

*• Includes new System of Attack, Musketry Regula-

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

"Under this title, Colour-Sergeant Bright, of the 37th Middlesex R.V., has prepared an elaborate series of 'Test Questions' in all the matters in which a Sergeant of Volunteer Infantry has to be examined for his Certificate. The questions are very well framed, and very complete. Except in a very few instances, the answers are not given, but each question is followed by a reference to the Field Exercise, or the Rifle Exercises, from which the student will gain the information necessary to frame the answer. The book is interleaved with blank paper, so that the answers, when discovered, may be written out. Altogether the scheme is a very ingenious one, and we commend the new 'Red Book' to all Sergeants or intending Sergeants. We should add that the book contains a useful Appendix on certain points
of military etiquette with which all Volunteers ought to
1878.

"The object of this work is to enable a candidate for promotion to the rank of Sergeant in the Volunteer Infantry to acquire by heart a thorough knowledge of the subjects of his examination. . . . The questions are clearly framed, and . . . a very good method has been adopted for impressing the subject on the memory.
A simple, handy book of the sort was much wanted,
and the want has been supplied."—Broad Arrow, March 2, 1878.

"In this useful little manual of fifty-eight pages Mr.
Bright has succeeded in making a 'royal road' for those members of the Volunteer Force who may desire to qualify themselves for the rank of Sergeant. . . .
The 'Red Book for Sergeants' is a concise and practical guide, and should be in the hands of every Volunteer in the Kingdom."—Weekly Dispatch, March 10, 1878.

"The work is very carefully compiled and neatly got up, and seems well adapted for the end in view. . . .
This 'Red Book' takes a comprehensive view of what
all Volunteers, commissioned or non-commissioned,
should know, and cannot fail to be of great value to all ranks of the Service. Some very useful information is given in an Appendix."—*Military Record and Volunteer

OPINIONS OF VOLUNTEER OFFICERS.

The following is a copy of a letter received from Lieutenant-Colonel C. E. HOWARD VINCENT, Commanding
Central London Rifle Rangers (4th Middlesex), President of the Volunteer Conference, and late of the 23rd
Royal Welsh Fusiliers:—

"Lieutenant-Colonel Howard Vincent has read with great interest the 'Red Book for Sergeants,' compiled by Colour-Sergeant Bright, of the 37th Middlesex. The questions have been very carefully framed, and there can be no doubt that writing out the answers to them will impress the duties of Sergeants more on their memories than any other system. The publication of this book affords additional evidence of the successful zeal
with which the Non-commissioned Officers of Volunteers apply themselves to their military duties—to the great gain of the entire Force.—Feb. 21, 1878."

One Officer (a Major) writes:—
"I have no hesitation in expressing my opinion that it should be in the hands of every Non-Commissioned Officer in the Service."

Another (a Captain) writes:—
"It is likely to be of service not only to Non-Commissioned, but all ranks in the Volunteer Service."

Similar approbatory letters have also been received from many other Officers of the Volunteer Force.

Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates.
Her Majesty's Representative, the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."
SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful in a tumbler of cold water. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.
SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.
For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor,

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are, from Bombay, May 27; Allahabad and Madras, May 25; Calcutta, May 24.

THE accounts of the weather are varied. Showers had occurred in almost every part of India except Berar; but more rain was needed in Madras. Rain had been general in Bengal and Assam; in some parts of Bengal, excessive. Throughout Oudh and the North-West there had been frequent hail-storms, damaging the fruit crops; they were accompanied by east winds and unseasonably cool weather. In the Panjab there had been no wet; but it was otherwise with Hissar and Rawal Pindi; and the hill stations had been deluged. Fair weather was much wanted at Simla. This day's Times has a Calcutta telegram dated yesterday, reporting the continued depression of trade. "Produce," it is said, "is both scarce and dear; and eighty vessels (sic) now in port, carrying 10,788 tons, are unfreighted."

ACCORDING to a telegram in the Daily Telegraph, his Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge disembarked last night at the Duchess landing steps, and was received by the Governor of Malta and a numerous staff, and a guard of the 1st Royal Scots. At the palace, where the Duke is to reside, a guard of honour had been drawn up. A review was in prospect for Tuesday (to-morrow).

THE correspondent of the Standard, writing from Paris on the 15th inst, states as follows:—"It is announced that Persia has claimed admittance to the Congress on the ground that that assembly will necessarily discuss Eastern questions affecting the interests of the Persian Empire. The Persian Ambassador in London left Paris this evening for Berlin to support the demand of the Persian Vizier, who has already written to Prince Bismarck, Prince Gortschakoff, Count Andrassy, and Lord Salisbury on the subject." Possibly the cession of Kotur may be considered an equivalent to a voice in the deliberations of Congress; but if Persia be admitted in anyway, the circumstance may not improbably give rise to interesting and not unimportant discussion. Whatever her political value, her geographical position is a main feature in the Oriental question.

THE Army and Navy Gazette remarking that Colonel Travers, Madras Staff Corps, completed five years as Assistant Military Secretary for Indian Affairs at the Horse Guards last month, understands that there is no intention of removing him from an appointment in which it is not desirable to have a too constant change of incumbent. We readily accept the further statement that Colonel Travers has proved himself a conscientious, hard working member of the Horse Guards Staff, and that the army he represents will be perfectly satisfied to have him still watching its interests at head-quarters.

FROM the sources of intelligence on Russian movements in Central Asia available to the Army and Navy Gazette, we gather that Colonel Grotengelm, Commander of the Amu Daria district, has just returned to Tashkand, after visiting the Russian garrisons along the Khaiva-Bukhara Frontier. Some Cossack cavalry had been added at his suggestion to the post of Petro-Alexandrowki, near Khaiva. Another and more important item of information is that a "Russian scientific expedition," consisting of six savants and "a few Cossacks," had been despatched to the Marghelan frontier. Marghelan—the name of which was quaintly derived to Vambéry as from the Persian Murgh-wa-nân (fowl and bread)—is a city supposed to have belonged to the Tajiks; it contains, according to Schuyler, 30,000 inhabitants, and is walled but not fortified.

MR. J. B. Peile, c.s., Political Agent, Kattywar, has been appointed Acting Commissioner in Sind during the absence of Mr. F. D. Melvill, who proceeds to England on privilege leave for two months and fifteen days. Lieut-Colonel L. C. Barton will act for Mr. Peile as the Political Agent. It is further stated that Mr. Dampier, member of the Board of Revenue, Calcutta, is about to proceed to Europe on furlough; and that Lord Ulick Brown will officiate for him in India.

WE notice in the Times' weekly telegram from India that the "secular head of the Bhojas in Bombay has been murdered in the streets." This looks like a printer's error for "Khojas," but time will show. It is added that the supposed cause of the crime was refusal to acknowledge the spiritual head of the caste; and that the case has created much excitement.

THE Pioneer gives the following as the "facts of the assassination of Mr. T. T. Cooper, our late Political Agent at Bhamo. He had occasion to fine one of the sepoy's of his guard five rupees. The man, being insolent, Mr. Cooper hustled him downstairs, possibly struck him—this, however, does not appear; but on the following evening, when Mr. Cooper was reading, seated in an easy chair, the man appeared, armed, and taking deliberate aim through the open door, shot him dead. The murderer then sought out the Jemadar to whom he evidently attributed the punishment which he had undergone, and despatched him with the same weapon. He immediately afterwards aimed at the Jemadar's wife, missed her, but hit a sepoy, who was near, with fatal effect. His bloody work concluded, the miscreant delivered up his rifle and surrendered himself. His name appears to be Kishen Singh—a supposed native of Hindustan. There is, as before said, no suspicion whatever of any political meaning in the occurrence. The missionaries, the only other Europeans in Bhamburda at the time, did the little all that could be done on the melancholy occasion with characteristic zeal and benevolence."

THE Pioneer reports another brutal murder committed at one of our outlying stations. By information sent in from Shobkadar, it appears that a sipahi of the 14th Sikhs had been murdered outside the fort walls, and his body thrown into a tank close by. The story was that the man was given to gambling, and when he left the fort he had over Rs. 100 in his possession, part of which he had won that day; so it is supposed that some of our unfriendly neighbours, the Mohmunds, who always have an eye to business, knowing of his good luck, were tempted to take the poor fellow's life.

It is stated in the Bombay Gazette that the negotiations for the purchase of the Bombay foreshore properties by Government are still pending. Government have refused to modify the offers already made for the Sassoon Dock and the Mazagon and Frere properties; but it is believed that some increase may be made to the offer of ten lakhs for the Colaba Company's property.

WE regret to read that a serious collision took place on the 24th May, on the Oudh and Rohilkund Line. There was also on the same date a block on the East Indian Railway beyond Bharwaree, caused by one of the axles of a goods waggon breaking. The mail was detained five hours.

OUR Anglo-Indian politicians will not have failed to notice the cessions to Persia of "the little territory of Khotoor," provided by the Anglo-Russian Agreement which found its way into the Globe on Friday evening last. This, it is presumed, is the "Kotur" on the road from Khoi to Van, which is comprised in a small semi-circle to be traced on the eastern or Persian side of the Perso-Turkish frontier, heretofore accorded to the Turks.

FEW officers of the Indian army will, we think, differ from the conclusions of Sir Neville Chamberlain, when he seeks for the force under his command "that feeling of natural alliance which binds together the British officers and their sipahis." And if it be, as we admit it is, indispensable for the officers to know their men, and for the men to know and respect their officers, then it must be equally certain that "this union of feeling and of interests is only to be brought about by officers remaining attached to one regiment." The Madras chief continues:—"They must not be shifted about merely to preserve relative equality of positions and pay. They must be content to cast in their lot with one regiment, and to make it their professional home." Could it not be added that, under the circumstances, the Madras regiments will be restored to their original shape and strength, both as regards Europeans and Natives?

THE Commander-in-Chief in India has issued a complimentary order on the occasion of the retirement of Colonel Gordon, C.I.E., from the post of Assistant-Adjutant-General of Musketry, in order to take up a brigade command. The important services rendered by the incumbent in his vacated appointment are thus particularised:—"For the fifteen years in which this officer supervised musketry instruction breech-loading arms of precision replaced muzzle-loaders. The returns of the British army establish the progress of musketry in India, and the very high relative position of battalions trained in this country, together with the marked successful development of musketry education in the native army, testify to the excellence of a system for which the army is principally indebted to the continued and arduous exertions of Colonel Gordon, and for which the thanks of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief are justly due.

WE duly chronicled the disaster which befel the China in Bombay harbour. It is now our more pleasurable duty to report that, on the morning of May 16, this vessel was floated, and towed to one of the P. and O. Company's regular moorings. She appeared, however, to be drawing such a depth of water (nearly twenty-seven feet) that she could not be brought into dock; and there was a possibility that it might be necessary, for safety's sake, to run her again upon the mud bank from which she had been taken. Captain Alderton and his men were sedulously endeavouring to avert such a result; and it is to be hoped that we shall ere long hear of their success.

THERE are, as usual, more reports about the health and temper, the objects and motives, the sayings and doings of the Amir of Afghanistan. Whether in reality he be ill or well; angry or pleased; intriguing against, or expressing friendship for England; massing troops on his frontier, or remaining at home and in quiet; it would be strange if our Government had not intelligence of all Shir Ali's movements important enough to affect our prestige and the peace of our frontier, and to require a counter-action on our part.

A CASE has recently been tried before the Sessions Judge of Hugli which is made memorable by the gallant behaviour of a Bangali doctor—Babu Kristo Charn Chuckerbuttery. Certain persons were charged with performing prematurely the obsequies of a kinswoman, who was rescued still living as she floated down the river, by the native gentleman mentioned. "The defence," we are told, "was that the woman's kinsfolk had simply made a mistake; the mysteries of nature," said the pleader for the defence, "are inexplicable to science; what would these illiterate people know of them?" In the end the jury returned a verdict of not guilty, and the prisoners were discharged.

THE Pioneer gives a poor account of the opening of the Indian tea season. "To begin with," it says, "there has been too little moisture, so far, almost everywhere, and the hailstorms in Cachar and Kangra Valley especially have been exceptionally frequent and severe. At the sales which have already taken place in Calcutta a few breaks of the very finest teas have again fetched high prices; but the common, medium, and good teas, which, of course, form the bulk of the crop, have only realised one or two annas below the opening prices of last year, low though those prices were. Nor are the indications of the home market more encouraging. For though the deliveries between the 1st of January and 30th of March last were 9,647,190 lbs., as against only 6,566,900 lbs. during the corresponding period of 1877, the stock in hand was 17,319,240 lbs. in March last, as compared with 12,105,360 lbs. in March, 1877. From bad to worse, if anything."

MR. JUSTICE KEMP (the presentation of a testimonial to whom was noted in our last week's Summary) is complimented by the Wakils for his judicial labours, his thorough knowledge of the vernacular languages and local laws and usages, his uniform kindness and courtesy, his patience, and his active sympathies for the natives of India. And here is his reply:—

Throughout my long career I have always endeavoured to do justice to the best of my poor ability. The cause I knew not I searched out. I endeavoured to fathom a case and to do justice between man and man, whether he was rich or poor, a raiyat or a raja. I think you will do me the justice to say that whatever my shortcomings may have been, they have only been due to deficiencies in ability, and not in will to do justice to the people of this country. You have said that you were grateful to me for my kindness and courtesy, and for the patience with which I heard you. That was a mere labour of love on my part. To be kind and courteous to you is only what you might fairly expect from one who had lived so long among you, and who was always accessible to you, and ever ready to assist and to comfort and to support you in your difficulties. I do not allude so much to you, gentlemen, because you are in a position to be independent of any support from me, but I allude more specially to the poor raiyat whom I so long presided over, and assisted with my advice and otherwise during the earlier part of my long career. That I take away with me the sympathy of the natives of this country is a source of great consolation to me.

AMONG the many instances of a charity generally esteemed in the world of Islam, there is one cited by the correspondent of the Times of India which merits record: "A devout nobleman of Lucknow a couple of generations back bequeathed a sum of Rs. 8,000 a month in Government of India paper for the use of pilgrims to Karbala and Najaf. His widow afterwards bequeathed an additional sum of Rs. 1,500 for the same pious purpose. The money is now divided into three portions of about Rs. 3,000 each, two of which are given amongst Persian and Arab pilgrims at Karbala and Najaf by Mujtahid Abdul Kasim at the former place, and Mujtahid Saiyid Ali Bahrul-ulum at Najaf. The third portion is distributed to necessitous Indian pilgrims by Saiyid Mahdi Husain. As many pilgrims from India find themselves out of funds at the end of the tour of the shrines they would have to be sent back by the Resident at Baghdad as necessitous British subjects but for this fund. The money is paid over to the three distributors monthly by Colonel Nixon, and this operation has a very natural tendency to promote feelings of good-will between the Resident and the heads of the Shiah community. The influence thus acquired is not perverted to political uses, but it has a very beneficial influence in many indirect ways, and secures for pilgrims from India a degree of consideration which they might otherwise miss."

THE Times of India correspondent in the Persian Gulf, from whose letters we have more than once given extracts, noticed, while steaming up the Tigris, that an unreasonable percentage of the passengers were blind of an eye. Alluding, then, to the astonishment felt by the young untravelled reader of the "Arabian Nights" at finding three Royal Mendicants all blind of an eye; he says that his own recent Baghdad experience would make him astonished to find in that city, or any neighbouring town, "three individuals counting six eyes among them." But he is wrong in writing down the Calendars blind of the right eye; for it is distinctly stated that it is the left, and the engraving in Lane's translation of the story clearly demonstrates the fact. There is much truth in the following remarks:—

Ophthalmia, aggravated by want of proper medical treatment, and a wonderful faith in most disastrous modes of treatment, which would make a medical man's hair stand on end, results in this great destruction of vision. Dr. Ross, the Surgeon to the Residency at Bushire, told me that a favourite remedy for all eye diseases is a copious application of tobacco juice. There are other remedies in which the Oriental mind has faith, but this is the chief along the Gulf and in Persia. Of course the eyes so treated rarely revert to the status quo ante; and as a rule, one (or both) becomes hopelessly blind. When matters come to this pass the only resource is to go to any European doctor who may happen to be within reach. If he fails to bring back light to the sightless orb the patients think themselves much aggrieved. They have done their part in putting their prejudices in their pocket, and coming to him, and yet he does not cure them! There is untold misery and death in these regions which will be considerably diminished when the native hakims are abreast of their European brethren in therapeutics. The natives have generally wonderful confidence in the healing powers of the European doctor, which they regard as nearly, if not altogether, magical. They stand all surgical operations, excepting amputation, very well. But they would much rather die at once than lose a leg or an arm.

HORSES, almost at all times on board ship, have to encounter something very like suffering. But where they are crowded together, and packed for service or sale, the poor brutes must undergo a life and death ordeal. We are told that last year a sailing ship left Melbourne with about two hundred horses for the Calcutta market; and by the time the anchorage at Garden Reach was attained, only twenty were alive. In other words, nine-tenths had died during the voyage. Further, the Robert Morrison, which arrived at Bombay on May 15, with horses from Australia, is said to have lost forty-seven out of one hundred animals since embarkation.

MR. ROYLE, one of the survivors of the Childwall Hall, arrived in Bombay on the 17th May, and has given the public an interesting account of his escape and adventures on the occasion of the shipwreck. We summarise the narrative from the Times of India:—

At the time the vessel struck I was sitting on the edge of my berth smoking and reading, as I was unable to get to sleep owing to the noise of the fog whistle. Almost directly afterwards I heard the voice of the second mate call out "All hands on deck." As soon as I reached the deck the second mate called out "To the boats." I at once went and helped to launch the starboard life-boat, which was near the engine-house. As soon as the boat was launched it was taken possession of by some seamen, who pushed off from the vessel, and were soon lost in the mist. We then tried to launch the other boat on the starboard side, but in doing so she was stove in, and we left her hanging in the ropes. We then went to the port side of the vessel, and succeeded in launching a boat, into which five seamen went. They rowed her round to the other side of the ship, where she remained about a dozen yards from the vessel, as the men in her were afraid to come nearer, in case the boat should be stove in against the side of the vessel. The men in the boat called upon us to jump into the sea and they would pick us up, but no one seemed to care to risk it. We then went up on to the bridge where the starboard side life-boat was stowed. We succeeded in launching her all right, but she was carried against the side of the ship, and one of her sides was smashed in. At that time all the passengers on board, with the exception of myself, were in her. They pushed away and got clear from the ship, and I lost all sight of her. The Rev. Mr. Horsfall jumped overboard, but almost directly got thrown among the breakers. We heard him greening and crying for help, and then all was silence. I came off the bridge and jumped overboard. After swimming about for some time I was picked up by the stove-in boat, which was subsequently launched by four of the sailors. This boat also picked up the second steward. We rowed out to sea as fast as possible and shouted for help. We heard a voice in reply, and at once rowed in its direction. It proved to be the voice of one of the five men who were in the third boat. This boat picked up the chief steward. They also took us on board, and we eventually landed on the sandy beach near Cape Sagres. While rowing to the shore we met the men in the first boat, and we all landed together. As soon as we landed the sailors wanted to go across to the main land to the wreck, which was about six miles off. . . . On arriving there we saw the doctor on the rocks below, while on the top of the rocks were a fireman and steward who had succeeded in getting upon the rocks. The rock is an almost perpendicular one, and the steward, who sealed it without the aid of a rope, said he hardly knew how he got up. They told us that when the last boat left the ship there were on board Mr. Blair, the second engineer, Dr. Langworthy, the fireman, the steward, and the captain, and that they left the ship in the order named. Mr. Blair lost his life while pushing the doctor up the rocks, as he was washed away by a heavy sea, and was dashed to pieces against the side of the ship. When they got on to the rocks some Portuguese lowered ropes to pull them up. The captain wanted the doctor to go first, but the latter, who was a big heavy man, thought the ropes too thin, and declined to trust himself to them. The captain thereupon made the first attempt, but had only been hauled up about twenty yards, when one of the ropes which had become chafed against the rocks gave way, and he was precipitated on to the rocks below, and killed instantaneously.

They returned to Cape Sagres, from which place they contrived to get back to Lagos, whence they were conveyed by an express gun-boat to Gibraltar. From Gibraltar Mr. Royle got a passage to Bombay in the Branksome Hall.

WHEN Reform is injudicious and Innovation wanting in taste, it seems to the looker-on that Progress is rather marred than assisted by the introduction into Oriental States of Western habits and customs. The Muhammadan is a far nobler object in his picturesque turban and robes than in the unsightly and, to his mind, indelicate garb of a European gentleman; and we seldom see a Hindu or Parsi, Turk, Japanese, or Chinese in the evening dress of a London or Paris salon, but we involuntarily lament the needless transformation. Why a barrister's costume (inclusive, it may be, of the wig) should be rendered compulsory to pleaders in the Nizam's city of Haidarabad, is a hardly intelligible decision amid the many sensible arrangements mentioned in the following extract of on dits attributed to the Jam-i-Jamshid:—"Among the judicial reforms recently carried out in Haidarabad are the institution of a High Court with original and appellate jurisdictions, and the permission accorded to the members of the local bar to plead in the City Courts. A suit, involving several lacs of rupees, was lately referred for decision to the new Court under the orders of Sir Salar Jung, and it was heard before a full bench, on which occasion the defendant's barrister presented the novel spectacle of appearing in his robe, a custom which is henceforth to be made binding on all barristers pleading before the Court. The custom of requiring suitors to kneel on approaching the judicial presence as a token of respect is to be discontinued, as also the practice when retiring, of walking on tiptoes, with the back to the door. The procedure has also undergone needful revision; suitors of even the poorest class now have free access to the Chief Justice's Court; while the proceedings having been greatly simplified, the hearing of suits is not prolonged, as before, to indefinite periods. The accommodation provided for the public who desire to attend has given much satisfaction to the people, who owe this and the other changes detailed to the Chief Justice, Saiyid Fida Husain and Maulavi Muhammad Sadik, one of the judges of the High Court."

INDIA is not without its Gyes and Maplesons; and the impresario in Calcutta is becoming quite an essential character in the City of Palaces. We are not informed who it is that holds the delicate and difficult office; but we can understand that, having lost money during the past season, he now declines to arrange for the next, unless a subscription of Rs. 60,000 be guaranteed. Little more than half that amount appears to have been subscribed; and this almost wholly from box-holders, stalls being rather at a discount. The Indian Daily News, to which paper we are indebted for these particulars, states that a plan has been suggested to start a special Saturday subscription for double stalls at Rs. 125, and treble at Rs. 175. Single stalls for the ordinary subscription nights (Mondays and Thursdays) cost Rs. 200. The sale of, at least, one hundred and twenty is requisite to complete the fixed subscriptions, and enable the impresario to make his arrangements for a new season. Should wealthy natives invest in stalls, and the Africaine chance to be performed, they might learn something of the manners and customs of the Brahmans in Vasco di Gama's time which would astonish them.

Odds and Ends.

A RUMOUR has been circulated that Beg Kuli Beg, the late Amir of Kashgar, having escaped the Chinese, was on his way to British territory, via Ladakh and Leh.

MR. C. E. BUCKLAND has taken over charge of the Under Secretaryship in the Home Department from Mr. F. C. Daukes.

MR. PAUL KOOP has been appointed Consul for the German Empire at Akyab.

CAPTAIN A. FITZGERALD, 26th Panjab Native Infantry, goes as Brigade Major to Multan.

MAHARAJA HOLKAR will not visit Simla this year, as was announced. It is also probable that Maharaja Sindia will not go there either.

MR. ANTONIO SERGIO DE SOUZA, junior, the Governor of Diu, has been appointed Acting Chief Secretary to the Government of Goa.

THE rumour is again published that the Amir of Kabul is massing troops on the frontier of Afghanistan towards Kwetta.

THE NEW BRIDGE OVER THE SUTLEJ.

The following particulars of the opening of the Empress Bridge are contained in a telegram dated yesterday, and published in the Times of this morning:—After a service by the Bishop of Lahore, Sir Andrew Clarke, in the name of the Viceroy, declared the bridge open for traffic. At a public breakfast given in honour of the ceremony, Sir Andrew Clarke said in the course of a speech that sixteen years had elapsed since Mr. Brunton, the engineer, pitched his camp and collected his forces in that then desolate spot, having a task to perform not less vast than that which mighty Iskander undertook when with his hosts he crossed the Ravee and the Chena band came to this very site to move his legions across the river for the conquest of India. In bridging the Sutlej there had been accomplished a task which baffled the great conqueror, who was forced to retire from the Sutlej and thus to abandon his golden scheme of conquest. Great and interesting engineering difficulties had been conquered, chief of all the vagaries of the Sutlej itself, which was a very Bohemian in its nature and an Ariel in its eccentricities. He did not regard the Indus Valley Railway, of which this bridge was the most important link, as a mere strategic line for war exigencies only. It was impossible to point out a single line of railway opened in India as a mere strategic line; giving the best commercial route that could be aligned, such lines would necessarily contain all requisite conditions for war, such as might easily be applied when the occasion arose. The Rajputana and the Punjab Northern lines had entirely falsified by their results the forecast as to their returns and profits, and there was no reason to doubt that a like success awaited the Indus Valley and its future extension. The day was not far distant when the astute rulers of the countries beyond the frontier would awaken to their real interests and would invite us to carry the wing-fired chariot into the very heart of their territories.

The bridge is described as "a magnificent piece of engineering, consisting of 16 spans, each 250 feet long, and is the completion of one of the principal links of a vast chain of railway communication now in course of progress. The cost of erection has been about 50 lakhs of rupees.

A WORD ABOUT MADRAS.

ANY public man who has had that particular experience of the battle of life which belongs to the thousands who fight single-handed will be exceptionally blest if he can, at the close of his career, recall no injustice done to rival or foe, ay, even friend in the conflict. Those who move under the shadow of others, or whose actions are pre-ordained successes, have nothing to do with this category. They form a society of themselves; unhappily a large one, and one somewhat impervious to analysis. The abuse of power and patronage, as of influence and position, is one of those offences to civilisation which reflects upon givers and receivers both. We are not referring to such as these, but to the ordinary man who struggles and endures—bears his full burthen of care and responsibility—and rises or sinks, succeeds or fails, according to circumstances. He, too, though perhaps honest in general purpose, and strictly “honourable” in accordance with the world's glossary, is prone to mistake, to dislike, perhaps to envy one or other of his fellow-combatants and, actuated by this feeling, to put obstacles in his contemporary's way for which some day, if he ever pause to review his past life, he will reproach and condemn himself heartily. But pauses of this nature—breathing periods in a breathless conflict—are rare, save when foreshadowing dissolution. In plain words, censoriousness is a very common evil, and often made an instrument of gross injustice, especially in an age where competition is rampant, and old exceptional standards of thought and knowledge have become the acknowledged level of the many. It is all very well to urge that it is met on the other hand by a form of non-extinct Hero-worship and over-disposition to praise and exalt. But two evils do not make either one or the other less an evil, and whatever counteracting influence the second may exercise over the first in the mind of certain philosophers, this wholesale reasoning will satisfy the theorist only, and afford no practical solace to individuals broken on the wheel of a pernicious system.

Statesmen deliberating at a special congress; ministers in the performance of their daily routine of duty; members of Parliament discussing subjects which are of interest to their constituencies, or involve hobbies of their own which their constituents do well to ignore; those in authority as those in comparative obscurity and retirement, are all more or less subjected to this kind of ordeal. But, as a rule, in this case, censoriousness oozes out through the daily Press, and its effect is wholesome; it rather whets than damps energy; it keeps public men to their work; it is open to refutation, not only from the object of the attack in person, but from a multitude of readers and thinkers. All it requires is modification, and toning down. If proneness to censure would but give way to even-handed criticism, and senseless laudation find no printed outlet, the learning public would be greatly benefited, and the educated, as well as those under education, would have reason to be satisfied.

Now, General Orders issued by the Commander-in-Chief of an Indian Presidency are not to be pulled to pieces in ignorance of the causes which have led to their promulgation. Therefore do we abstain from questioning the wisdom or expediency of restricting recruitment for the Native Army in Madras to the limits of the Presidency. And at no time should we less wish to do so than when the Madrassis are commanded by a highly-distinguished and much esteemed officer of the Indian Service. But in the olden days the introduction of a score or two of Hindustanis, called Pardesis by their Southern brethren (and Rajputs haply, by their British officers), had an excellent effect upon the discipline of the corps. The instructions of General Sir Neville Chamberlain, to which we advert, are, that recruits are not to be enlisted from outside the limits of Madras, without sanction beforehand from Army headquarters. “There ought to be no difficulty,” he says, “in obtaining from the Presidency suitable recruits for each branch of the service, provided that proper steps be taken to procure them.” His Excellency “has now seen enough of this Native Army to feel assured that the Presidency can produce plenty of good, efficient soldiers, provided they be sought for.” “What is indispensable in the Native Army is the existence of that feeling of natural reliance which binds together the British officers and their Sepoys.” Will not this decentralisation of the military system in India, or rather this isolation of one important section of the Native Indian Army, render necessary the presence of a Madras element in the Adjutant General's office in Fort William? It is true that the Hindustani sipahi was never largely represented in Madras Native regiments, but recruiting parties were commonly sent beyond the Presidency limits; and though the number entertained was, according to late returns, nearer three than four per cent., a small impression of the type sufficed in some degree to link the army as a whole to the armies of Bengal and Bombay in a common nationality and sympathy. As to the possibility of dangerous combination, we have no precedent for guidance in entertaining such a supposition.

We regret to see that there has been a question raised in the Indian Press as to the fitness of the Madras army for service, and that it has been thought necessary to enter a vigorous defence of that army in the columns of a local paper. At the same time, we readily take the occasion of this controversy to illustrate our present argument. An attack is made upon Madras sipahis which we venture to think not only ill-judged, but out of place at a juncture when mutual good feeling and reliance seemed more than ever necessary to the troops of the three Presidencies. The plain truth is, that during the last half century the Madras army has not been largely employed on foreign service, but that its work in China, Birmah, and Sind will bear close scrutiny, and has merited honourable testimonials of character. Its Sappers have been eminently distinguished, and we believe that it is this branch of the service gives the truest scope to the genius of the Madrassi; nor can it be alleged that the profession of a Sapper keeps him clear of danger or void of usefulness. Physically, the Madrassi is not up to the mark of his brother soldier; he is usually recruited from among agricultural and peaceable Telinga peasants and Tamuls, to whom military discipline is somewhat abnormal; the more military Muhammadan is found in the cavalry; but has a certain warlike representative in the infantry also; he and his Tamul fellow sipahi is not unfrequently of a "brawling" rather than "fighting" caste. The "Rajput," "Brahmin" and "Mahratta" might all, if judiciously recruited, be made, we think, to raise the soldierly character of the Madras sipahi; especially the first and last. But they must be sought for outside the Presidency limits; and so to seek them would be to contravene the General Order we have just been quoting.

COLONEL MALLESON ON THE NATIVE STATES OF INDIA.

Although we have not the space at disposal to give the full notice which it merits to the paper read by Colonel Malleison, C.S.I., on Friday week, to a large audience, at the Royal United Service Institution, we have much pleasure in extracting from the columns of the Times the greater part of an interesting leader on the subject:—

Since the prominence that has been lately given to the military strength of the Crown in India, the question has been often raised whether the armies of the native States do not constitute a counterbalancing force with which we may one day have to reckon. Towards the determination of this problem, a lecture on the military resources of those States is a most valuable contribution. The lecturer is recognised as one of the masters of Indian history, and his acquaintance with the past vicissitudes as well as the actual state of the feudatory sovereignties of Hindustan could not easily be surpassed. The right, too, of the author of the celebrated "Red Pamphlet" to offer advice upon points concerning the armed power of the Indian Government will certainly not be denied by Anglo-Indians. Of all the native States of India, there are, in his opinion, only three which may be spoken of as "really formidable"—Hyderabad, Gwalior, and Indore. The Nizam, who rules in Hyderabad, has been since the fall of the Mogul Emperors the greatest Mussulman potentate in India; and the rulers of Gwalior and Indore—Scindia and Holkar—represent the power of the Mahrattas, once dangerous rivals of ours in the contest for the heritage of the fallen Moguls. An alliance between the Nizam and the Mahratta Princes would be barely conceivable; but even this, if we may accept Colonel Malleison's statements, need not alarm the Indian Government. In Northern and North-Western India, where in recent times, during the Sikh and Sepoy wars, our dominion has encountered the most vigorous resistance, there is now no native State that disposes of any considerable military force. Cashmere is at present, as it has always been, an obedient satellite of the rulers of the Punjab. The few small Sikh States that remain independent—the most important of which is Patiala—do not count altogether more than a few thousand ill-armed fighting men, and they are "so entirely hemmed in by 'British territory' as to be powerless for aggression. The historic fame of the Rajpoots as warriors has left no substantial fruit behind. A splendid race has been enfeebled by "the charms of opium and the pleasures of the harem," and though the Princes of Rajpootana boast of having some 90,000 men under arms, this soldiery is wholly undisciplined, and is provided only with the most wretched weapons. Moreover, the Rajpoot States are, and will remain, separated from one another by feuds as bitter and ineradicable as those which gave over the Scottish Highlanders a helpless prey to their Saxon enemies in the last century.

In Western India the relics of the Mahratta dominion are still visible. The Guikwar of Baroda has an army of 14,000 indifferent soldiers, but the Guikwars have always followed and never led, and they have no one now to follow except the British Government. The other Western principalities are even more feeble and pliable. In Southern India, Travancore and Cochin are unwarlike and almost unarmed. Mysore, which under Hyder and Tippoo became a Mohammedan State of the first rank, has been long reduced to political and military insignificance. In Eastern India there are, in fact, no native Sovereigns at all; the Rajahs are large landowners rather than petty princes. Thus the two great Mahratta States of Central India and the Nizam's dominions in the Deccan are the only centres of native military force towards which we need look with suspicious vigilance. The Nizam is the most dangerous of the three; and the army of which he disposes numbers nearly 50,000 men. Nevertheless the history of the Nizam's kingdom affords no example of any serious movement against the British dominion on the part of the Mussulman soldiery, though such a danger was barely averted in the crisis of the Mutiny by the energetic loyalty of Sir Salar Jung. Gwalior stands next to Hyderabad in military power, and the Maharajah Scindia, in addition to the regular army of 5,000 men which he is empowered by treaty to maintain, has from three to four times as many irregular troops under arms. Colonel Malleison, while, acknowledging the capacity of Scindia for policy and war, is of opinion that we have little or nothing to fear from him so long as British soldiers garrison the fortress which commands his capital and occupy an intrenched camp within striking distance of his Government at Morar. Holkar is much less formidable. His armed retainers are only 8,500 in number, and his "instincts" are said to be "rather money-making than martial." The power of the Indore State, such as it is, may be said to be counterbalanced by that of Bhopal, a neighbouring Mohammedan principality, which, isolated among Hindu communities, has sought and found safety in a loyal attachment to the English supremacy.

The aggregate armaments of the native States of India show, upon paper, a very formidable force, in round numbers no less than 64,000 cavalry, 240,000 infantry, and 9,000 artillerymen, working 5,000 guns. It may appear that if all these were united against us they would crush our Indian dominion by their sheer weight. But, in the first place, Colonel Malleison contends, the hypothesis of united action, including all the native States from Cashmere to Travancore, must be regarded as historically and practically absurd. The feudatory princes may chafe under English rule, but their dislike of the Anglo-Indian Government is a cold feeling compared with their hatred of one another. Even were they united they could never hope, in Colonel Malleison's judgment, to take England again at such a disadvantage as in 1857, when the mutiny of her Sepoy army left her with only a handful of European troops to re-assert her authority. That opportunity they proved themselves incapable of using. All the conditions of government and war have now been changed for the advantage of this country, and even in the perplexities of a European conflict we should retain the superiority which improved weapons, improved means of transport, and an improved system of administration have won for us. Such, at least, is the opinion of an Anglo-Indian officer of large experience, who is certainly not disposed to underestimate the capacities of the native Princes and peoples. Colonel Malleison's authority may tend to re-assure those who have been disturbed by the suspicion that the employment of Indian troops in Europe might leave the door open for formidable ambitions and armed treasors in India. At the same time Colonel Malleison tells us that the men of the native armies are military raw material of the most valuable kind, and that if subjected to the formative influence of English discipline they could rapidly be made troops worthy of standing in line with the best of our Sepoys. It is fortunate that the Government of India is able to keep under its own control an influence so powerful and far-reaching.

THE SIRHIND CANAL.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

The tract of country whose improvement is contemplated by the Sutlej Canal, consists of part of the district of Hisar, and nearly the whole of Bhuttiana, called commonly the "Hard Desert." It is a bleak, wretched, and (without water) most sterile land. The wells are so deep that artificial irrigation is impossible; the water is so brackish and impure that none, save natives of the tract, can drink it with impunity; rains are scanty, and precarious vegetation is represented by a few stunted thorn-bushes, or a temporary crop of grass over the great parched plains. Under circumstances so ungenial, the population is necessarily scanty and lawless, deriving their subsistence chiefly from herds of cattle, and addicted to the marauding habits common to pastoral tribes.

The question here is, therefore, not to improve agriculture, but to create it; not to provide, as in the country between the rivers Ganges and Jumna, for the casual occurrence of an unfavourable season, but to supply by the resources of science a substitute for that deficiency of rain which is the rule and not the exception; and, finally, to enable an extensive and capable province to become, by its increased resources and the progressive improvement of its inhabitants, a source of strength and revenue to the State, instead of being, as now, a burthen and weakness.—Page 357 of Volume I. of Baird Smith's "Italian Irrigation." Printed by order. Allen and Co., 1852.

SIR,—More than twenty-six years have elapsed since the Government of India deputed Colonel Baird Smith on a mission to Italy to study the wonderful system of irrigation from canals which for generations past have been so successfully at work north of the river Po, both west and east of the Ticinus, and to ascertain the causes which have hitherto prevented the effectual drainage of the deadly marshes in the south of Tuscany.

Thirty-eight years have elapsed since the government of India commenced to advertise its philanthropy in the desire to reconstruct the great Sutlej Canal, which was opened by the beneficent Feroze Toghluq more than five hundred years ago.

The following is from the late Sir Henry Elliot's "History of India," edited by Professor Dowson; it gives a slight idea of what the Emperor Feroze was doing in the cause of humanity in the year A.D. 1354 at the very time that our ancestors were distinguishing themselves in the cause of inhumanity by ravaging the fertile lands of Guienne and Poitou, and slaughtering the cultivators:—

In the year 755 Feroze built the city of Ferozabad on the banks of the river Jumna, adjoining that of Dehli, and on the 12th of Shaban he marched on a hunting expedition to Depalpoor, and constructed a large canal forty-eight coss in length, from the Sutlej to the Kugur. In the year 757 he constructed another canal, between (from) the hills of Mundir and Surmore from the Jumna, into which he led seven other minor streams, which all uniting ran in one channel through Hansy, and from thence to Ruiseen (Absin), where he built a strong fort, which he called Hissar Feroze. Below the fort, near the palace, he excavated a lake, which he filled from the waters of the canal. He also conveyed an aqueduct (a canal) from the Kugur, over the river (which passing by the fort) Sursatty, and the village of Peri Kehra (entered the stream of Sirkhatra), where he founded a city, named after him, Ferozabad. At the same time he introduced another canal from the Jumna, which filled a large lake he caused to be constructed at Hissar Feroze.—Page 225 of Volume 6.

When I compare the repeated self-gratulation of the Government of India with what it has actually accomplished, I begin to despair. I fear that the reopening of the grand Sutlej Canal, after nearly five hundred years of neglect, may not be effected by our easy administration during the present century. Enormous sums have been expended on salaries and pensions, but I look in vain for any evidence of adequate work performed.

In the Blue-book for 1873-74, page 10, the Government has contented itself with writing that a quantity of something (whether sand or clay is not stated) had been excavated.

In the Blue-book for 1874-75, page 44, Government has contented itself with the words, "and the Sirhind Canal made steady progress."

In the Blue-book published last October, page 34, the Government asserts that "good progress was made on works connected with the Jumna and Sirhind Canals."

In the Punjab Administration Report for 1874-75 I read the following:—

Of the above sum Rs. 12,77,836 were expended during the year under report, principally on the Sirhind Canal; so that the total amount invested in this province on irrigation works amounted to Rs. 2,58,58,026; in addition to which a sum of Rs. 12,51,990 had been received as contributions from the Cis-Sutlej Native States towards the cost of constructing the Sirhind Canal.—Para. 252 of the Punjab Administration Report for 1874-75.

Am I not justified in humbly asking Government to state how much money it has received from the Maharajah of Patiala, and from the Rajahs of Nabha and Jheend for the construction of the Sirhind Canal; and how much it has expended on salaries, and on the construction of masonry works at the head of the Canal; and within how many years can we hope to see any water flowing?—Your obedient servant, T.

INDIA AT THE PARIS EXHIBITION.

The useful part of the Exhibition, so far as the largest interests of India are concerned, as distinguished from the ornamental will, on the whole, be fairly well represented, although the collection is by no means so complete as it would have been if more time had been allowed for making the collection. Operations of this kind require considerable time in India to be quite successful, and seeing that, practically, only four months were allowed between the issue of instructions and the receipt of the articles in Calcutta for transmission to Paris, it is surprising that the measure of success attained was as large as it has proved to be. The modus operandi was not the same as that adopted on previous occasions of the same nature, neither the time nor the means available permitting of the constitution of central and local committees with all their paraphernalia. The work was entrusted by the Government of India to Dr. Brandis, Inspector-General of Forests, for the collection of timber and woods, and other forest produce, and to Mr. O'Connor, Assistant Secretary in the Department of Revenue, Agriculture and Commerce, for all other articles. Dr. Brandis has made, through the officers of his department, an excellent collection of the timbers of India, and of such things as lac, india-rubber, &c., which originate in the forests. The timbers have mostly been sawn into pieces resembling thick octavo books in size, one side of which was polished, and inscribed with the botanical name of the wood and the name of the district whence it was obtained. The fact that the nomenclature was fixed by Dr. Brandis, with the assistance of Mr. J. Sykes Gamble, his Personal Assistant, is a sufficient guarantee of its accuracy. This very interesting collection of woods was exhibited and lectured upon by Dr. Brandis in the Rooms of the Asiatic Society, and was subsequently displayed in the office of the Department of Revenue, Agriculture, and Commerce. Several sets of the collection were prepared for presentation to institutions and museums in Europe and America, and others have been deposited in the offices of the Provincial Conservators of Forests. It is odd that no set has been retained for Calcutta, where it would have found its proper place in the Economic Museum, an institution which is growing in practical usefulness, but which is as yet hardly as well known as it deserves to be. The number of specimens of wood exhibited is six hundred and fifty, representing three hundred and seventy different species of trees. Besides these, there are specimens of large climbers, bamboos, canes, and other palms, one hundred specimens of gums, resins, lac, oils, varnishes, and india-rubber, eighty-eight specimens of fibres, bark, flowers, and leaves used for the manufacture of rope or paper, for dyeing, or for other purposes, and some fruits and seeds. We perceive from the preface to his catalogue that Dr. Brandis is engaged in the preparation of a descriptive account of the structure and mechanical qualities of the different woods examined during the work of preparing the specimens for exhibition. We hope that some space will be devoted in the paper to an account of the economic value, actual and potential, of Indian woods, many of which, good and useful as they are, still remain almost unknown to trade. In fact, the Indian timbers of present commercial importance may almost be counted on one's fingers. When one has named teak, ton, sal, sissoo, deodar, pine, walnut, ebony, sandal, mango, and the universal and inevitable bamboo, one has almost exhausted the list of Indian woods largely utilised otherwise than as fuel. Yet there are certainly at least ten times as many more, each useful in its degree, and largely capable of development. The specimens sent to the Exhibition through Mr. O'Connor fairly represent the most important of the raw products of the country of economic value, under the heads of animal matters, minerals and metals, cereals and pulses, and other food-stuffs, starches and meals, coffee, tea, sugar, spices, perfumery, oils and oilseeds, dyes and tans, fibrous materials, drugs and medicines, fruits and nuts, pickles, preserves, and condiments. The class of animal matters includes various samples of wool and goat's hair (pushm), Bengal silk (raw) of the finest quality, and samples of the wild silks—the tussur, eria, and mooga. These wild silks are well represented in a series including the cocoons, reeled silk, and woven fabrics. The rest of the section of animal matters comprises musk, wax, honey, ghee, oils and fats, fish, including the stinking ngapee and the toothsome red-fish (resembling anchovies) of Burma, and an extensive assortment of hides and leather. Amongst the minerals and metals are copper, iron, and tin, with their ores; salt and saline products, such as borax, carbonate and sulphate of soda, sal ammoniac, and saltpetre; coal and lignite, ochres, petroleum, arsenic, talc; stones of kinds useful for building and for ornamental purposes, such as granite, limestone, sandstone, slate, potstone, quartz, felspar, jade, jasper, bloodstone, soapstone, and others. In this section is included a sample of peori, known in commerce as Indian yellow, a pigment which perhaps might be more strictly classed under the head of animal matters, seeing that it is produced from the urinary deposit on chalk of cattle fed on mango leaves. The food-stuffs include samples of rice in enormous number, wheat, barley, oats, maize (including maize of the Cuzco variety which flourishes at Ranikhet, and the grain of which is about four times the size of the ordinary Indian grown maize), all the millets and pulses, from jowar and bajra down to the Windsor bean, besides buck-wheat and amaranths, yams and other tubers. Tea is represented by some hundreds of samples of different kinds from all parts where the plant is grown, the Kangra Valley and the Doon, Kumaon, Assam, Cachar, Darjeeling, Chota Nagpore, Chittagong, Akyab, and the Nilgiris. Coffee has been sent from Madras and Mysore, and from Lohardugga in Bengal. Amongst the drugs is a very fine collection contributed by Rai Kanye Lal Dey, of Calcutta, consisting of 251 specimens. Besides these some excellent specimens have been collected by Mr. Buck, Director of Agriculture and Commerce in the North-Western Provinces, and by Surgeon-Major G. Bidie, of Madras. The collection of drugs sent on this occasion from India is probably completer than any collection ever made before. The specimens of dyeing and tanning materials and of fibres are also fairly complete. It is unnecessary, however, to enumerate any of these at present, as we understand that a full account of them is under preparation in the Department of Revenue, Agriculture and Commerce. It is sufficient to refer to a plant hitherto unknown to trade (Malachra capitata), which grows as a weed in Bombay and Bengal, and which has been proved by experiment to produce a fibre equal to ordinary Bengal jute. The capacity of this plant, brought to notice during the collection of articles for the Exhibition, is to be made the subject of further trial on an extended scale in Bombay. The number of specimens of different articles sent in this collection amounted to between 1,800 and 1,900, and the total number of samples (including duplicates and triplicates intended for the India Museum, London, and for other institutions) was not less than 10,000. These are exclusive of contributions from the Madras and Bombay Presidencies, which, to save time and expense, were sent direct and not through Calcutta, and for which separate lists were prepared. The Madras collection, made by Surgeon-Major G. Bidie contains 342 different drugs, of a very large proportion of which, however, samples also went forward from Calcutta. The collection made in Bombay was not as complete as it might have been if more time had been given to the work. Of the provincial collections made outside of Madras and Bombay the best were from the North-Western and the Central Provinces, Mr. Buck in the North-West, and Mr. Colin Browning in the Central Provinces, having gone into the work with praiseworthy zeal. Amongst articles other than raw products, which were sent to Paris, we note, first, a geological map of India, prepared under the direction of Mr. H. B. Medlicott, Superintendent of the Geological Survey, to illustrate a manual of the geology of India which will shortly be issued, and a set of meteorological charts, constructed by Mr. H. F. Blanford. Lastly, the Parisians will have the opportunity of tasting the excellent ale and porter brewed by Mr. Whymper, of the Murree Brewery, and we hope they will give as good an account of it as do the consumers of the beer in the place of manufacture and in the Punjab generally.

Bengal, Upper India, &c.

CAPTAIN WELCH, of the 25th K.O.B.s, probably the only English officer, bar Colonel Wellesley, who was present at the fall of Plevna, has now joined his regiment at Fyzabad. His notes on the field entrenchments and general condition of the Russian and Turkish lines at Plevna are full of interest, and formed the subject-matter of a lecture he delivered at the Royal United Service Institution, London.

ON Major and Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel Little completing his tour of service in the Quartermaster-General's Department at Jubulpore the appointment is to be abolished, and the work of the office carried on by the Deputy Assistant Adjutant-General, Saugor District. During the trooping season a special officer, as at Allahabad, will be deputed to superintend the movement of troops, &c.

CASTE PREJUDICE.—Here is a story from Lucknow:—At the Malhiabad poor-house a man died; his brother asked for the corpse, and burnt it in the usual manner. The brotherhood put him out of caste for having anything to do with the body of a man who had been in a Government poor-house, and he brought a suit for damages against the persons who had put him out of caste in the Court of the Assistant Commissioner.

THE LAST LOAN.—It is estimated that the New Four-and-a-Half per Cent. Loan will be taken up at about 99. This estimate is deduced from a comparison with former loans in 1869. The Four per Cent. Loan was taken up at 90, while the market rate was 95½. The Four per Cent., 1874, was taken up at 102-12-9. The market rate was 104-8. The Four per Cent., 1875, was taken up at 102½, the market rate was 102-8. After the acceptance of tenders the prices rose—1869 from 90 to 94-8; 1874, from 102-12-9 to 105-4. In 1875 prices fell from 102-3-8 to 101-10.

TRADE AND NAVIGATION RETURNS.—Accounts of the trade and navigation of British India for April last, compared with April 1877, show that the value of the merchandise imported was 35,798,755 rupees, against 31,838,695 rupees; the merchandise exported 62,652,714 rupees, against 66,331,257 rupees; the treasure imported 10,731,369 rupees, against 11,635,560 rupees; the treasure exported 545,043 rupees, against 429,492 rupees; the amount of duty collected 3,062,747 rupees, against 3,016,123 rupees; the export duty 689,218 rupees against 635,484 rupees.

THE Amritsar Municipality appear, like John Gilpin's wife, to have a frugal mind. They lately gave a bonus of Rs. 1,000 to one Lalla Parsram, Choongee Tehsildar, which generosity was revoked by a Government order, directing that instead of the coin, the grant of a watch of the value of Rs. 50 should be made. This was rather a snub to the Municipality, and perhaps disappointing to the protège, but the unkindest cut of all to the latter must be the latest resolution of his Amritsar protectors, which decrees that "the purchase of the watch be postponed till the money has been refunded."

DESTRUCTIVE ANIMALS.—A matter to which the attention of the Punjab Government is just now turned is the loss of human life and cattle, owing to wild beasts and snakes. Three districts are more particularly sufferers—Kangra, Hoshiarpur, and Hissar. In the hills leopards are most destructive, being responsible for half the total loss; but wolves are very nearly as mischievous, and monopolise the destruction in the plains. The deaths of men last year from this cause were fifty-two, and the loss in cattle 5,279, as compared with 6,606 head in 1876; and in view of the passing of the Arms Act, it is interesting to learn that the Lieutenant Governor has directed district officers and committees seriously to consider the question of promoting the destruction of wild beasts by grants of free gun licences and rewards.

FINANCIAL.—By way of divisions the Government of India in the Financial Department has been regulating the income and expenditure of the Indian Museum at home. For the future the trustees will be allowed Rs. 20,000 a year, with which they must meet all charges except the pay and allowances of four superior officers and of the assistant taxidermist, and the rent of the taxidermist's work-shop, which items will be paid by Government separately. The trustees need not spend all their money, at the risk of its lapsing, by the end of the financial year. They may save up to Rs. 10,000. Another very proper rule has been passed. No one hereafter appointed a servant of the trustees will be entitled to any pension or gratuity from Indian revenues; though he may, if he likes, subscribe for a pension or gratuity under Chapter VII. of the Civil Pension Code.—Pioneer.

MAIL ROBBERY.—At midnight of the 3rd May information was given at the Behar Police Station by Imrit Doosadh, a dak runner, that at about 8 p.m. he had been assaulted and robbed of his stock and mail bag by six or seven thieves at a place called Mora Talao, on the road between Bukhtepore and Behar. The informant was slightly wounded on the head with a lathie. Owing to the prompt action taken by the deputy magistrate of Behar, a notorious character of Myar, a village four miles from the place of occurrence, has been arrested. The replies to questions put to him are most unsatisfactory, but the man, however, does not confess his guilt. Anent this case, the district Superintendent of Police remarks: "Owing to the high price of food grains throughout the district I am extremely anxious regarding the safety of the roads throughout the district. This is now the third case of robbery on roads reported since April 22, 1878. On the two others, one was at the Gya road, and the other, on the road east of the Mokameh station. Every possible arrangement has been made to watch all the roads throughout the district as much as possible."—Behar Herald.

THE ASSAULT ON MR. DAVIS.—The reports which have reached Mulmein regarding the brutal assault on Mr. Assistant Commissioner Davis and his companion at Thatone are as follows: Mr. Davis and another gentleman were sitting after dinner on the evening of the 19th of April in the verandah when six Karens armed with daks rushed upstairs and attempted to kill Mr. Davis. The latter, however, managed to partially evade the blow aimed at him, and consequently was not severely wounded. He sprang to his feet, his companion meanwhile laying hands on the assailant, and snatching the dak out of the Karen's hand struck the last named with it and killed him. The other Karens on seeing their intended victims so smart and plucky took to their heels, and one only has yet been captured. The remaining four will, no doubt, be caught shortly, as the police are in full chase after them. Meanwhile, it is matter for curious speculation how the authorities will regard Mr. Davis's act. That he was acting in self-defence is certain, but that he was justified in killing his assailant after disarming him is a question on which we would rather defer an expression of opinion. We trust, nevertheless, that in passing judgment the authorities will not allow any maudlin sentiment to influence them in this serious affair, serious in that a Government officer's life was undoubtedly threatened.—Mulmein Advertiser.

AN ACT OF BRAVERY.—We believe that the Humane Society's medal has never yet been awarded to a Bengali. Now, however, it has been fully earned, and the opportunity should not be lost. A short time ago some bathers at English Chandernagore saw a body, which was floating down the Hooghly, move its arm. There was at once a panic amongst them, and the majority declared that it was a bhut. Dr. Kristo Chunder Chuckrabutty, a private medical practitioner, saw with horror the hand of the body push the long hair off its face. In vain he appealed to the bystanders to aid him in saving a fellow-creature; in vain he offered money to a boatman to lend him his dinghee. Fear, superstition, and prejudice held the men spell-bound. "Better to let the drowning drown than run the risk of handling a corpse or disturbing a goblin." Dr. Chuckrabutty, however, was made of better stuff. He plunged into the river, and after a long struggle brought a senseless woman to shore. She had clutched him as the drowning will, and had dragged him under with her. There was a whirlpool and twenty-five feet of water where they disappeared, and those who know the whirlpools of the Hooghly will recognise the danger of the brave doctor's position. So far the heroic; now for the other side of the story. After restoratives had been applied for three or four hours, the woman opened her eyes. For a long time she refused to tell her story. "I have been saved," she said, "let them be saved." At length she admitted that she had been a confirmed invalid for some time, that she had been brought to the burning ghat, stupified, but not senseless; that fire had been applied to her mouth as to that of a corpse; and that, as she was thrust into the water, she had just strength enough to clutch the bamboo with which she was pushed out. An attempt will be made to unravel this dark story in the court of the Judge of Hooghly. Evidence will, we understand, be offered that those who performed what they believed were the last rites of the woman were aware that she was alive. However this may be, the bravery of the Brahmin doctor should receive its fitting reward at the hands of the Humane Society. We fear that many a bed-ridden wretch is consigned alive to the sacred waters of the Ganges by affectionate but impatient friends, and passes on the last journey less chivalrous bathers than Kristo Chunder Chuckrabutty.—Pioneer.

DOVETON PROTESTANT COLLEGE.

The annual distribution of medals, prizes, and certificates to the students of the Doveton Protestant College took place a short time since. The Hon. D. F. Carmichael presided, and among the ladies and gentlemen present on the occasion were the Misses Carmichael, Mrs. Tarrant, Colonel Macdonald, Mr. W. Munsie, Mr. T. G. Clarke, the Rev. A. C. Taylor, the Rev. D. Fenn, the Rev. G. Rae, the Rev. W. Stevenson, the Rev. E. Sell, the Rev. C. Cooper, Mr. W. Scharlieb, Mr. D. S. White, Mr. J. Shortt, Mr. A. Smith, Mr. J. G. Ferraud, Mr. B. Lavery, and others. The proceedings were begun with the hymn "At the name of Jesus," which was followed by a short prayer. The students next sang the anthem, "O taste and see," after which Mr. Cook, the Principal, read his report. The song "The Summer Days" being sung, the Hon. Chairman distributed the following medals, prizes and certificates:—

COLLEGE DEPARTMENT.

Class IV.—Carstairs Gold Medal, First Prize and Certificate, Robert William Lyons.

Class III.—1. Prize and Certificate, Septimus Kelly; 2. Prize and Certificate, Robert Stephen Bower.

Class II.—Coleman Gold Medal, First Prize and Certificate, William Huntley Mason Peck.

Another song, "Let the Hills resound," was sung, and the Chairman delivered the following address:—It has been a subject of wonder to me what the East Indian community did before it had the opportunity of educating its younger members in this and other cognate institutions which now happily exist, and for very many years have existed in this city. I once put the question to a very old man, "How were you brought up in those days?" Well," said said he, "we were not brought up at all. We were dragged up, anywhere and anyhow," and he went on to draw a pitiful picture, which I will not shock you by reproducing here, of the miserable way in which East Indian boys of all but the more affluent classes were committed to the hands of brutish and ignorant teachers. The change is just the same as the change that came over England after Edward VI.'s Grammar School, or over Scotland after the establishment of the Parochial Schools, nearly two centuries ago. You may remember Macaulay's description of the change that was effected in the ancient indolent and predatory habits of the Scottish nation; an improvement, such as the world had never seen in the moral and intellectual character of the people. Thereafter, wherever a Scotchman went, he carried his superiority with him—in a public office, he worked his way to the top, in a factory he became the foreman, in trade, his shop was the best in the street; in a colony, he was the most thriving planter. To these illustrations might be added the success of Scotchmen in India. Many names will occur to you; enough to mention one, the late Joseph Hume; his origin was of the humblest, but he lived to represent in Parliament the town of Montrose, at whose public school he had been a diligent student, and in the market of which his mother used to sell her slender stock of crockery. Now all this was owing to a cheap and good schooling. It would of course be absurd to suppose that every one of you boys will rise to the top of the tree; many of you I promise myself, will do so; but, even in those cases where it will be otherwise, with those of mediocre abilities, or who, owing to various circumstances leave school early and are apprenticed to tradesmen, or even take a lower social place—depend upon it that the habits of application and discipline you have gained here and the love of letters you take away with you will do you "Yeoman's service" in after life. Love your old school; be grateful for the training it has given you; help it if you grow rich, and let it always be said of you, "We can trust him—he is an old Doveton boy."

The Rev. D. Feen, on behalf of the Doveton College Committee, thanked Mr. Carmichael for kindly presiding on the occasion, and for the interest taken by him in the institution.

The Rev. W. Stevenson pronounced the benediction, and the proceedings were brought to a close by the boys singing "God Save the Queen."

Miscellaneous.

DEPARTURES.—The Bishop of "Madras and Sister" appear in the passenger list of the mail steamer which left Bombay on the 20th May. Archdeacon Drury officiates for his lordship.

DEFENCES.—Fourteen Armstrong guns, to be mounted on the batteries now being erected in Madras and at some of the sea ports in this Presidency, were received on Tuesday by the P. and O. Steamer Mirzapore from England.

BANGALOR.—In continuation of Foreign Department Notification No. 71 J., dated the 14th June, 1877, the Governor-General in Council is pleased to declare that Bangalor shall be deemed to be a Presidency Town within the meaning of Section 30, Clause (b) of the Indian Registration Act III. of 1877.

THE MADRAS RAILWAY.—The traffic receipts for the week ending May 4, 1878, were, for passengers, &c., Rs. 50,672 15-6, and for goods, &c., Rs. 58,664-10-4, making altogether Rs. 109,337-9-10, or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 127-6-11. During the corresponding week in 1877 the receipts were, Rs. 197,480-1-0, or an average receipt per mile of Rs. 230-2-7.

FAMINE COMMISSION.—The Government of India have just issued a Memorandum of Instructions to the famine Commission. The document is a very lengthy one, and will be found elsewhere. It is very comprehensive, covering a very wide field of inquiry, and if the various topics touched upon in it are done justice to by the Commission this body will not have been appointed in vain.

SPIRIT OF THE AGE.—The Arcot Missionaries of the American Reformed Church state that a more kindly spirit has never been exhibited in India towards Christianity than now. Abuse and ridicule of the preacher has almost entirely ceased, and village officers, who formerly regarded the Missionary with suspicion, have now become his friends, and look forward to his periodical visits to the villages with pleasure.

PRIMUS IN MELITA.—It is a matter for gratification that Madras troops are the first of the Indian contingent to arrive in European waters, and, of course, will be the first to land at Malta. This is a feather in the cap of our Presidency. The eyes of the world will be bent upon the first Indian troops which set foot on European soil, and Madras has no reason to be ashamed of the representatives which have been sent from her borders. As there has been a disposition to discredit the Madras portion of the contingent, we are extremely glad to find them first in the field. The omen is a good one.—Madras Times.

APPARENTLY HARD.—Captain James, master of the schooner Three Brothers, which was wrecked 200 miles from the Australian coast about ten months ago, lately appeared before a Madras Magistrate and, producing his credentials of competency, stated that he could get no employment. The magistrate directed that the necessary papers be drawn up for his admission to the Government workhouse. Surely Captain James could have procured employment before the mast, or failing that in Madras, he might have been forwarded on to Bombay or Calcutta, where he could easily have shipped, a preferable course, for a seaman, to the workhouse.—Indian Daily News.

HAPPY ESCAPE.—In the beginning of May a native girl about five years old was thrown into a well at Bangalor. While on her way to school, she was accosted by a young woman, who desired the child to accompany her to a place where mangoes could be had. Gaining the child's consent, the two proceeded to a secluded spot in the town, and the girl was made to sit on the parapet of a well with scarcely any water in it. After rifling her of some silver ornaments, the woman deliberately shoved the child into the well, and it is astonishing that with the exception of a scalp wound no other injuries were sustained. The poor little creature remained at the bottom of the well for several hours before she was taken out.

THE NIZAM'S OFFICIALS.—Two gentlemen have been sent by Sir Salar Jung, Minister of Hyderabad, to Mysore, to ascertain and report on the revenue, survey, and settlement of the province, and to find out anything else about the Government that may be introduced into the country that has sent them. The Nizam's Government has heard of the revenue system that has been adopted in Mysore, and is anxious to have something similar in Hyderabad, more especially the wet system of cultivation carried on here, and it is proposed to begin this survey in the Telingana part of the Nizam's territory. Both are native States, and both have a great deal in common, and consequently it is only natural that they should try to make their systems of revenue alike.—Bangalore Spectator.

BRIGADE v. SINGLE STATIONS.—The single stations so prevalent in the Madras army are the ruin of the army. There are, no doubt, still many able commandments, but it is well known there are very many unfit ones. If a force of Artillery, European Infantry and two Native Infantries were brigaded together under the eye of a smart general and frequently exercised, such misrepresentations could not be made with impunity. The General would soon learn who was the efficient and who the inefficient officer. Whilst the Madras Army sees no service and is employed on police duties it never will be an army. Either it is worth the while of Government to maintain it as a fighting power, or to disband it and to employ constables in its place. But if the recruiting be looked to, the old organisation resumed, the stupid Staff Corps knocked on the head, and the troops brigaded and properly commanded and employed on service, then, and not till then, will the

POONA NATIVE ART MANUFACTURE EXHIBITION.—This Exhibition will be opened in June. The particular day of the month has not yet been fixed, but will very shortly be made known. The expenses of the Exhibition are estimated to amount to Rs. 3,000, which sum gentlemen in Poona and outstations have subscribed in response to the call for funds. The committee are very desirous to see an impulse communicated to native manufactures and arts. Native manufacturers are isolated; their skill is neither known nor brought before the public eye, and very few people know what a native manufacturer can do. The natives, although well up in workmanship, are deficient in intellect, and do not understand where to go for the proper materials to improve their manufactures. It is very important that they should be encouraged by every means to develop the talents which they certainly have shown themselves to possess. The promoters of the Exhibition deserve great credit for their labour for the good of the people of Poona and to develop the manufactures which already exist, as well as to increase their number.

THE EGMORE FEMALE DISPENSARY.—Surgeon-General G. Smith submitted for the consideration and orders of his Grace the Governor in Council the following propositions with reference to the new dispensary of the Lying-in Hospital now under construction in Egmore. The dispensary, which is for out-patients, is situated close to the office of the Commissioner of Police, and is ready for occupation. Dr. Harris proposes to open it for patients on the 1st of May. "This proposal has," he says, "my approval, and the measure can be carried out with the existing staff of hospital subordinates. Some furniture will, however, be required, and for that I am submitting an extra indent for favour of sanction prior to the 31st inst., so that the cost may be met from savings in the current year's budget." Dr. Harris also suggests that the new building be called the "Egmore Dispensary" instead of the "dispensary attached to the Lying-in Hospital," as at present. As the proposed designation would, with the addition of the word "Female," be appropriate and shorter than the present one, he has to recommend that it be adopted accordingly. His Grace the Governor in Council has sanctioned the proposals made.

STATION TALK.

BAGHDAD, April 18.—Kerbella is some sixty miles south-west of Baghdad. It is necessary to cross the Euphrates at the town of Mussaiyib, some forty miles on the way. At Mussaiyib one has the choice of two routes. There is a canal and there is the usual caravan route. I arranged to go by the canal, and send the horses southward to Kifl to meet me there on my return from Kufa and Nejej, still further to the south-east, whither I was to proceed by boat across the marshes, and along the great Hindrah Canal. The first stage of this journey was to Mahmudiah. Once clear of the fields, and ditches, and canals in the neighbourhood of Baghdad we got into the great Mesopotamian plain and cantered along over the grass, where the grass stills grows. But the sun is already drying up and withering the herbage except in the immediate vicinity of the marshes, and the pulverised soil is drifting over the surface, and giving to great tracts the appearance of a desert. There is not an acre of this ground which would not yield heavy crops if it were irrigated. The soil is as rich as any in the world, and it is so easily cultivated that the Arab women sometimes themselves drag the ploughs which turn it up for the seed. There are signs of increasing cultivation as we go along. Ditches are met bringing water from the marshes or from the canals, and large patches of corn are perpetually coming into view. However, the greater portion of the land is turned to account only for grazing purposes. When retracing this route in the day time we pass great flocks of fat sheep which yield a coarse wool. This wool is exported to Marseilles to be worked up into carpets in French looms. Of cattle we still see none except those that belong to the Arab encampments few and far between. The night was very cool and pleasant, and the bright moon right over head showed us the track along which we had to go. Our horses trample on their own shadows as they move. Suddenly there is a score of Arabs. A Zaptieh gallops forward to reconnoitre, holding his rifle at his shoulder. The supposed Arabs are the two horse owners who made a short cut to get in advance of the party. The Zaptieh is much complimented on his quickness in discovering Arabs in ambush, and we move along merrily enough. As we draw near Mahmudiah the same Zaptieh and I push on ahead, cantering along the side of a new-made irrigation canal, which shows that the country in that neighbourhood is being brought into cultivation. Suddenly, upon entering the village of Mahmudiah, we come upon two Arabs mounted on very fine horses and with the usual long spears in their hands. They are evidently there to mark who passes in or out to the Khan; when challenged by the Zaptieh they leave the shadow of the well in which they are lurking, and make believe to be riding in the direction from which we have come. They are obviously on the prowl, and no doubt are acting as scouts for a larger party a few hundred yards off. Nothing further happens just then. But two hours later, outside the Khan Haswa, the next halting place beyond Mahmudiah, nine Arabs with spears and some of them with matchlocks set upon six unfortunate Arabs driving as many donkeys, carrying loads of rice for Baghdad, and killed one, badly wounded another, and made off with the donkeys and the rice. I would take an affidavit that the two prowlers whom we saw in the shadow of the well outside the Khan at Mahmudiah formed part of the fatal nine. The Zaptieh knocked loud and long at the gate of the Khan, and it was at length opened, and we rode in; the rest of the party soon came up. The Khan is a large square brick building with towers at the corners and a big gateway. Inside, at a height of four feet from the ground, are arched niches about ten feet wide by eight deep. You get into any niche that is unoccupied, and make it your room for the night. The horses are tied up to the front of your niche, and munch their barley while you eat your supper. It is a regular family party. The centre of the great quadrangle is occupied by a raised platform riveted with brickwork, whereon, when all the niches are full, late comers can lie down for the night without being trodden on by the horses and mules and asses and camels standing about. I had provided myself with an aba—the capacious Arab cloak, in which to defy sun or rain by day and cold by night. I had also a calico bag six feet long, which, when filled with the cropped straw on which the Arabs feed their horses, made a comfortable bed. Supper over, I “turned in” at once, spurs and all. It would be wrong to say that I slept soundly. The Arabs, donkey drivers, camel drivers, and muleteers kept up animated discussions during the night in tones of fury, which seemed to portend civil war at least. The horses neighed perpetually, the donkeys brayed, and the patient camels gave vent to plaintive sounds which forbade continuous sleep. The wind blew from the north-west, and was very cold. At four o'clock on the morning of the 11th April we were all up and swallowing a hasty breakfast of hard-boiled eggs and “slap jack.” At a quarter to five we rode off on our way to Mosseyib. The route from Baghdad bifurcates a few miles beyond Mahmudiah, the track going nearly due south leading to Hillah and Babylon, and that bearing to the south-west leading to Mosseyib and Kerbella. We had been an hour on this latter route, when we overtook a laden donkey with its driver and an escort of one Arab mounted on a fine horse and carrying a spear. The escort, a very powerful fellow with a splendid head that was a model for a painter, said “salaam” in subdued tones, very different from those I heard the night before. The load on the ass attracted my notice. There were three cords tied round it; one eight or ten inches from the top, another about the middle, and the third a few inches from the bottom. It was clear that the bag did not contain rice. The Arab told the Zaptiehs all about the affair. In the bag was his cousin, who had been killed at midnight by the nine Arabs at Khan Haswa. He was taking the body a few miles further on to put it in a place of concealment for six months until he could get money to bury it properly in the holy ground at Kerbella. The other man who had been speared

by the marauders was, he said, very badly hurt, and would very likely die too. It would be as God willed. Going at the “caravan pace” of about five miles an hour we arrived at Mosseyib at ten o'clock in the forenoon. We had mounds and embankments constantly in view throughout the morning. Some of the ancient canals are still utilised for purposes of irrigation. Mosseyib is a small mud-built town, prettily situated on both banks of the Euphrates, which is here a narrower and much more turbid stream than the Tigris. It is robbed of nearly half its volume by the Hindrah Canal, and the great marshes on both sides of the river also take off immense quantities of its waters. There are groves of date-trees along its banks, and rice grows in every direction on the edge of the marshes. A hundred weight of grain, rice, wheat, or barley can generally be got here or at Hillah for a keroun, or ten pence. But as there is no road to Baghdad, and the transport is on the backs of donkeys, which take three days on the way, the price is nearly trebled when it gets to the market. A great deal of food is wasted which cannot be consumed on the spot, and which it would not pay to carry to Baghdad. If Kadree Pasha, the new Governor-General, desires to leave his mark on this country, he need only construct a common cart-road from Baghdad to Mosseyib or Hillah, and he will give an impetus to the development of the pashalik, which will render his administration illustrious. They are talking in Baghdad of a railway to Kerbella. The work would pay handsomely, no doubt; but the line will not be constructed for many a year to come. A cart-road could be made in three or four months at a very trifling expense. It need not be a super-excellent road fit for a mail coach to run on. Even a bad road would be a decided advance upon no road at all. At twelve o'clock we crossed the Euphrates by the pontoon bridge, and embarked on the canal leading to Kerbella, in a long shallow boat made of reeds and coated with bitumen. For the first two or three hours the canal passed between tracks of pasture land on which cattle and sheep were grazing. Then for three hours until we reached Kerbella we passed through endless groves of date, mulberry, fig, pomegranate and orange trees. The air was fragrant with flower and blossom. A few miles from Kerbella we passed a spot where houses reduced to ruin by artillery fire and trees felled for the passage of troops told of civil war now some three months ended. The Kerbellense, finding that the Government had no troops to speak of at its disposal, refused to pay taxes, or to submit to the conscription. The roads were blocked up, and Government officers coming from without were fired at from the date trees. This state of things was put an end to by the action of an expeditionary force which fought its way to the city, killing two or three hundred Arabs, and itself losing fifteen or twenty men. Order now reigns at Kerbella, and the roads—if I may be excused for calling them roads—are open to pilgrims and to trade. We arrived at Kerbella at six o'clock. The town is surrounded by a high brick wall which is sadly in want of a thorough repair, if it is to be relied on as a defence against even the Arabs of the desert. The streets are crowded, and far from clean. The bazars are well stocked and busy. Persians and Arabs form the bulk of the population of 60,000. There are also many Hindu Moslems—over a thousand, it is said, and a few Jews and Turks connected with the administration.

Miscellaneous.

SIR RICHARD TEMPLE has expressed through Davur Cursetjee Mody and Meer Ghulam Baba of Surat his warm appreciation of the conduct of both the communities represented by these gentlemen in reference to the late licence-tax riots.

S.S. “CHINA.”—The China is now in dock. She will not have to go to England to be repaired, as Captain Newell believes he will be able to thoroughly renovate her here in the course of a couple of months. It is said that a marine court of inquiry to inquire into the origin of the late fire on board this vessel will be held under the orders of Government, at the Fort Police Court, on a day to be hereafter fixed by the Chief Presidency Magistrate.

HAIL STORM.—A correspondent, writing to the Times of India from Hoshangabad on the 23rd May, says:—Last night Hoshangabad was visited by a tremendous hail-storm. It rained so heavily and the storm was so violent, that from half-past-eight to nine it seemed as if all the houses and trees in the station would be washed down. The hailstones were not very large ones, but fell in immense quantities, and they were a foot and half deep on the ground.

FRAUD.—The same paper hears that some of the station clerks at Sholapur have been arrested on a charge of being connected with the grain frauds, and that Mr. Pendlebury, the District Traffic Superintendent there, has been requested not to take the month's leave of absence which had been granted to him until the conclusion of the inquiry into the transactions of his subordinates.

ICE FAMINE.—The Bombay public are suffering at present, as they have had to suffer for three hot seasons in succession, from an ice famine, the Tudor Company (an American firm) having again failed to keep up their supply. It is proposed to start an

MORTUARY RETURNS.—The total number of deaths registered during the week ending Tuesday, 14th May, was 580, being four less than in the preceding week, 224 less than the total of the week ending 15th May, 1877, and 113 more than the mean of the corresponding period in the preceding five years. During the week 236 births were reported in the different districts of the city. The rate of mortality per 1,000 of the population was 44.46. There were 203 deaths from remittent fever, which are 22 less than the previous week and 148 less than the same period last year. There were 34 deaths from cholera last week as compared with 61 deaths during the previous week. The deaths from diseases of the respiratory system, diarrhoea, and dysentery were last week 45, 18, and 24, respectively, as compared with 69, 42, and 37 last year.

BAIL FOR THE SURAT EDITORS REFUSED.—At Surat the editors of the Gujarat Mitra, and the Deshi Mitra, as well as a vakil, named Goolabdas, have been arrested on charges arising out of the recent Surat riots. Two principal grain merchants, named Hurjee Mahavla and Gunputram Ambaram, have been also arrested in connection with the same matter. Mr. P. M. Mehta and Mr. Pandurung Balibhadra, who had been telegraphed for from Bombay, and Mr. Shivram, a vakil, appeared before Mr. Cassinath Mahadeo Thatte, Huzoor Deputy Magistrate at Surat, and applied that their clients be admitted to bail. After considerable discussion, Mr. Thatte refused to accept bail, referring the parties to Mr. Lely. As Mr. Lely happened to be in Bombay at the time, Mr. Shivsbunker appeared before Mr. Thatte, and applied for bail. The magistrate again refused, referring the vakil to Mr. Scannell, the District Superintendent of Police.

CHOLERA ON BOARD H.M.S. Teazer.—On the arrival of H.M.S. Teazer several of the crew of that vessel were attacked with diarrhoea, coupled with symptoms of cholera, from which disease two of the seamen and the doctor of that vessel were sent on shore to the European General Hospital, where one of the seamen died. The other is at present in a fair way of recovery. The doctor was found to have been only attacked with severe diarrhoea, and he has recovered and left the hospital. The vessel is at present under quarantine, lying at anchor off Butcher's Island, and all the crew have been landed on the island and accommodated in the barracks on that island. Another of the crew is believed to have died on board that vessel before the crew were landed at Butcher's Island. Since the landing of the men at that island, no further cases of cholera have been reported to have occurred amongst them.—Bombay Gazette.

HIS HIGHNESS THE SULTAN OF SHEHR, accompanied by his followers, arrived in Bombay harbour from Shehr by the s.s. Mula on the night of the 12th May, en route to Haidarabad, Deccan. On Monday morning an intimation was given to the Acting Chief Secretary to Government, Political Department, that the Sultan would land at the Apollo Bunder at three p.m. Accordingly, a notification was issued from the Political Department, requesting the Military and the Marine Departments of the Secretariat to issue the necessary orders for the disembarkation of the Sultan and for firing the authorised salute. At about 4.30 p.m. Captain Searle, Superintendent of Marine, and Lieutenant Brebner, Agent for Transports, went in a Government steam launch on board the Mula for the purpose of escorting the Sultan to the bunder. About an hour afterwards he landed at the bunder, where a Government carriage was waiting at the pier to convey him to his residence. A salute of twelve guns was fired on the occasion of his landing. The Sultan, after staying here for a few days, will leave for Haidarabad, Deccan.—Times of India.

GWADUR.—The Beacon hears that the Assistant Political Agent at Gwadar, Major Mockler, has left for Muscat, and that his destination is Bushire, on Government business. There is a rumour that the detachment at Gwadar of the Marine Battalion will be removed. Their pay is said to be irregularly given, and the health of the men is not good, coupled up as they are in that desolate place with nothing to do. They were inspected by Colonel Carnegie when he was at Gwadar lately, and it is probable that he may think proper to represent the condition of the men in the proper quarters. Gwadar is not one of the pleasantest places even in this part of the world, and we hear that the heat there already is great, about eighty-eight in the shade. The crops in the districts around Gwadar have been overrun by locusts which have devastated the country. News comes from Panjgur, one of the richest and most fertile plains in Makran, the people of which are said to be the most civilised throughout Makran, that Nauruz Khan, the son of Azad Khan, has made a raid upon that place and was plundering the town. It is said that he meets with no resistance, as the Shah, the representative of the Khan of Kaghaisilat, has been instructed not to oppose the invader in any way. In that case, if the story be true, those who might defend the place have no chance of doing so.

RETIREMENT OF COLONEL GORDON, C.I.E.

Head Quarters, Simla, May 13.—Colonel W. Gordon, C.I.E., has relinquished the post of Assistant Adjutant General for Musketry, on nomination to a Brigade command.

The Commander-in-Chief in India desires to acknowledge the important services rendered by Colonel Gordon to the British and Native Armies in India, during the period he discharged the duties of Chief Inspector of Musketry. During the fifteen years in which this officer supervised musketry instruction, breechloading arms of precision replaced muzzle loaders.

The returns of the British Army establish the progress of musketry in India, and the very high relative position of battalions trained in this country, together with the marked successful development of musketry education in the Native Army, testify to the excellence of a system for which the Army is principally indebted to the continued and arduous exertions of Colonel Gordon; and for which the thanks of H.E. the Commander-in-Chief are justly due.

STAFF CORPS.—ADMISSIONS.

The following General Order, by H. E. the Commander-in-Chief in India, is published in the Gazette of India:—

Head Quarters, Simla, April 8.—Under authority from Government, H. E. the Commander-in-Chief is pleased to notify that the Sub-Lieutenants appointed from Sandhurst by H.M.'s Government, as direct Probationers for the Bengal (Bombay) Staff Corps, will be required to pass the following examinations before they are considered qualified for final admission:—

(1.) The lower standard in Hindustani, within twelve months from date of joining a Native Regiment; and the higher standard within eighteen months from same date.

(2.) On passing the higher standard examination, Probationers will be attached for duty to a British Regiment for a period of six months. On the expiration of this period, the Commanding Officer will report to the Adjutant-General whether or not they are fully acquainted with the subjects prescribed in para. 25, Section 4, Queen's Regulations, and have performed their duties satisfactorily. On receipt of this report they will be ordered to rejoin their Native corps; and, within one year from date of rejoining, will be examined for admission to the Staff Corps, in the tests laid down in para. 146, Bengal Army Regulations.

2. It has further been decided that if ultimately appointed to the Staff Corps, such permanent appointment shall take effect from the date the lower standard in Hindustani was passed.

3. On receipt of the qualifying report required by clause 2, para. 1, of this order, these Officers will be promoted to the rank of Lieutenant, their commissions as such being antedated according to para. 31, Section 4, Queen's Regulations.

THE FORTHCOMING RAILWAY CONFERENCE.

Resolution.—By the Government of India, Public Works Department (Railway), Nos. 1589-1612R, dated Simla, 1st May, 1878.

Resolution.—There are so many and important points remaining to be settled in connection with the subjects, that it is deemed advisable to invite representatives from all the Guaranteed and State Railways in India and Burmah, and from the Consulting Engineers' Department of the three Presidencies to a conference to be held in Calcutta, probably some time in January next, for the purpose of discussing these questions, and with a view to aid the Government of India in coming to a right conclusion in regard to them.

2. A detailed list of the inquiries on each of the subjects above-mentioned will be circulated for information hereafter, when the date of the assembly of the proposed conference can be more definitely fixed than it can be at present. In the meantime, the opinions of all officers, both of the upper and subordinate and of the mechanical classes, interested in any of the above subjects, are freely invited, and may be submitted direct to the Secretary to the Government of India in the Public Works Department.

3. The Secretary of State has been requested to acquaint the several Boards of Directors with the wishes of the Government of India in this matter, and to seek the co-operation of the directors with the several Railway Companies by the issue by them of suitable instruction to their Agents in India.

4. Delegates from the Chambers of Commerce, Calcutta, Madras and Bombay, and from the leading merchants, European and Native, of the principal towns, are invited to attend the proposed conference, and to submit papers to be read at it.

Order.—Ordered, that a copy of the above be sent to the Governments, Administrations and officers as follows :—Madras, Bombay, Central Provinces, British Burmah, Hyderabad, Director of State Railways, Consulting Engineer, Calcutta; Consulting Engineer, Lahore; Consulting Engineer, Lucknow.

Ordered also, that a copy be forwarded to the Financial, Foreign, Military, and Revenue, Agriculture and Commerce Departments of the Government of India for information.

Ordered also, that a copy be forwarded to the Home Department for information and for publication in the Supplement to the Gazette of India.

Resolution.—In September, 1876, the Government of India decided that, in the following January a Railway Conference should be held in Calcutta, to which the officials of State and Guaranteed Railways and delegates from public bodies should be invited. Several papers were received, and some of them circulated for consideration. But when the time of assembly approached, the extreme pressure on the railway officials, caused by the famine, induced the Government of India to postpone the conference.

2. It is now proposed that the conference assemble in Calcutta next cold weather, probably in November. The exact date will be specified hereafter. Pending the appointment of a secretary, persons wishing to bring forward matters connected with the conference should communicate with the consulting engineers at Madras, Bombay, Calcutta, Lahore, or Lucknow, or with the directors of State Railways as may be most convenient, and those officers should do all in their power to further the objects of the conference, by opening communication in their respective localities with those interested in railway matters, and by collecting information on the subjects to be discussed.

3. Those subjects, it will be understood, relate to the economic and efficient working of railways, as respects both the public using the railways and the employes with whose aid they are worked.

4. For the present, the several Governments, Consulting Engineers for Guaranteed Railways, and Directors of State Railways will submit to the Public Works Department of the Government of India the papers or suggestions they may receive, or the information they may collect; exercising care that all communications are complete, so that correspondence with the Government of India may be avoided.

Order.—Ordered, that this Resolution be communicated for information to the Governments of Madras and Bombay, with a request that the Consulting Engineers for Railways to those Governments may be instructed accordingly, and to inform the Agents of the Guaranteed Railway Companies under their control of the same.

Also to the Consulting Engineers to the Government of India for Guaranteed Railways and both Directors of State Railways for information and guidance and for communication by the former to the Agents of the Guaranteed Railway Companies under their respective control.

Also to the Governments, Administrations, and Officers of Bengal, North-Western Provinces and Oudh, Punjab, Central Provinces, British Burmah, Mysore, Assam, Hyderabad, Rajpootana, Central India, Director of State Railway Stores for information.

Also to the several Departments of the Government of India for information.

Also that it be published as a notification in the Gazette of India, and that a copy be forwarded to the Secretary of State for information and for communication to the Boards of Directors of the several Guaranteed Railway Companies.

W. A. CROMMELIN, Major-Genl., R.E.,
Secy. to the Govt. of India.

THE long discussion in the Senate of the Madras University, as to whether Sanskrit should be substituted for the vernaculars in the University curriculum, has ended in a large majority voting for the retention of the vernaculars.

EAST INDIA PUBLIC WORKS COMMITTEE.

The committee reassembled on June 6, Lord G. Hamilton in the chair. Sir George Campbell continued his statements regarding the means of supporting the Public Works Department of India in carrying out and extending irrigation, so as to provide against droughts, scarcity, and famines. He had advocated the creation of a famine fund; and recommended that it should be treated as a trust, and dealt with as an entirely separate account, to either the ordinary or extraordinary accounts of the Supreme Government of India. And this was a principle he would extend to irrigation works generally. The witness once more invited the attention of the committee to the advantages of borrowing money in India itself. The mode was extremely simple. Let the Government induce the people at large to lend their money, even in the smallest sums to the State, by offering a guarantee. The loan thus obtained and accumulated should be put to the purpose of a common fund. The peasantry and many others would be found willing to invest their small means in this way, provided they understood that Government security was insured. With regard to the loan system as a principle, of course where political urgency arose, and the loan could not be raised in India, it would have to be obtained in the usual way, both in India and in England. It was, however, a costly process now to borrow in England in the state of the exchanges. But if the money must be had by large loans such as the late famine required, then how advisable it would be to create a sinking fund, which should ultimately become the means of paying off the State debt.

After describing how the provincial rates and taxes have been collected in different parts of India under the old system, and latterly under the new decentralisation system, Sir George showed where public works might be best carried out by sanctioning local councils to consider local wants. Where more irrigation was wanted than existed in any agricultural district, a local administration should submit Public Works projects for the sanction of the Government, and thus a double security and safeguard would be obtained against the construction of works that might entail loss and failure. Why should not the funds for irrigation purposes in localities be raised by the operation of a local council, constituting itself its own board of works? The local council would induce the people to subscribe to a municipal fund for irrigation purposes, and such a fund would be only one of many in other or adjoining districts. The local councils would then invest their local irrigation funds in the great State Sinking Fund, or Open Fund, which he advocated. But if the Government guaranteed the safety of the money of the people, it would only do so by being assured of the necessity of the irrigation projects, large or small, to be carried out. Therefore the Public Works Department would come in to supervise the expenditure on the works to be executed. Sir George Campbell, continuing to advocate municipal councils, pointed to examples of their utility in one of the presidencies, and instituted a comparison between the working of provincial legislative councils and those of the presidencies. In doing this the observation escaped him that the Legislative Council of Bengal had not always well administered its affairs, but had committed itself to shams instead of sound legislation.

The Chairman: Do you, Sir George, attribute shams to the Legislative Council of the Governor General?

Sir George was understood to say that he referred to the Bengal Legislative Council, which was not that presided over by the Governor-General.

A conversation next arose, joined in by Mr. Fawcett, Sir George Campbell, Mr. Balfour, and other hon. members, the object of which was to settle the distinction between mere modes of keeping accounts and the sound principles of financing.

Sir G. Campbell stated his views to be:—He wished to see the establishment of a Public Works system, possessing ample funds and the amplest practical means of carrying out irrigation or any other works. He had recommended also the adoption of the plan of an open loan and separate financing under a trust; he had also stated that he desired to see a sinking fund commenced to meet past debts and future emergencies. In fact, what he now called a sinking fund he had referred to before in his evidence as an emergency fund.

Mr. Fawcett criticised these financial propositions, and was doing so when the committee adjourned.

Miscellaneous.

THE ORDER OF THE BATH (WAR OFFICE, June 13).—The Queen has been graciously pleased to give orders for the appointment of General Sir Arthur Augustus Thurlow Cunynghame, K.C.B., to be an Ordinary Member of the Military division of the First Class or Knights Grand Cross of the Most Honourable Order of the Bath. —Gazette, June 14.

AN OFFICER SENTENCED TO PENAL SERVITUDE.—Robert King

Ross, formerly an officer in the Royal Horse Artillery, who had served for several years with his regiment in India, and who had been convicted of having forged the signature of Lord Lisimore, has been sentenced to five years' penal servitude.

EXPORT OF SPECIE.—The Peninsular and Oriental steamer Bokhara has left with £282,170, £50,000 being in bar silver for Bombay, £79,150 for Galle, £10,000 for Calcutta, and £20,000 for Hong Kong. The sum of £19,800 is in dollars for Penang, while of the £103,220 for Shanghai, £93,220 is in dollars and £10,000 in bar silver.

BILLS ON INDIA.—The tenders for £400,000 in bills on India were received on June 12 at the Bank of England. The amounts allotted were:—To Calcutta, £306,800, at an average rate of 1s. 8-4d.; to Bombay £86,200, at an average rate of 1s. 8-43d.; and to Madras, £7,000, at an average rate of 1s. 8-43d. Tenders on all Presidencies at 1s. 8-4d. will receive about 7 per cent.; all above that price in full. There is no real change indicated in these results, and the whole of the amount advertised for tender has again been allotted.

GREAT INDIAN PENINSULA RAILWAY.—According to the fifty-seventh half-yearly report of the directors of the Great Indian Peninsula Railway, £18,014 was received on shares during the six months ended December 31, and up to that date the total capital receipts were £22,951,946, and the total expenditure was £22,145,353, in addition to which the expenses at the debit of stores account was £853,196, of which £58,547 had been advanced by the Secretary of State to be repaid out of money to be raised upon four per cent. Inconvertible Debentures. The cash balance was £11,944. The gross receipts for the half-year were £1,318,430, against £1,022,498, and the working expenses amounted to £752,890, as compared with £511,728, leaving a net balance of £592,530, against £480,770. The carriage of 2,115,640 passengers produced £250,108, while in the corresponding period the number was 1,899,937, and the revenue £252,296. From the 803,448 tons of goods conveyed over the lines the company derived an income of £1,007,115, against 624,367 tons and of £730,681, showing an increase of 179,081 tons and of £276,434. The net revenue shown above would at the contract rate of exchange (1s. 10d. per rupee), be equal to Rs. 6,463,966, and the payment of the guaranteed interest would reduce that amount to Rs. 3,70,347, to be divided between the Government and the company. The sum of Rs. 14,229, in respect of certain traffic earnings which have been found to be irrecoverable, has to be deducted, and the company's moiety being payable in Bombay (after provision has been made for the adverse exchange operation on the remittance of the previous half-year's surplus profit) will, it is estimated, realise little more than £9,200, which the directors propose to carry forward to the next account.

INDIAN APPEAL.—KALTENBACH AND OTHERS V. MACKENZIE.—On June 4 their lordships delivered judgment in the above important case, the arguments in which had occupied the Court for the greater part of three days. The plaintiffs are merchants carrying on business at Saigon, Singapore, and Paris, and the defendant is an underwriter in London. The action was for a salvage loss on a policy of £4,000 on the vessel Amiral Protet. The vessel sailed on Jan. 5 from Saigon to Hong Kong with a cargo of rice, and struck on the Britto Bank on the 22nd, and the owners were immediately informed. She was towed into Saigon on the 24th, surveyed on Feb. 2, 3, and 4, condemned on Feb. 11, and sold on Feb. 23. She was afterwards repaired, and rendered again seaworthy. On Feb. 7 the owners elected to sell the vessel and treat the loss as total. No formal notice of abandonment was given to the underwriters, but the fact of the loss was communicated to them by a letter written on Jan. 30, which reached London on March 11. The claim was for a total loss, which was resisted by the defendant, on the ground that to entitle the plaintiffs to recover for a total loss in the circumstances notice of abandonment was necessary. This view was held by Lord Coleridge at the trial, and he accordingly gave judgment for the defendant. The decision was reversed in the Common Pleas Division, and against that decision the present appeal was brought. Their lordships unanimously reversed the decision of the Divisional Court, upholding that of Lord Coleridge. Lord Justice Brett, in delivering judgment, said he quite agreed with Lord Blackburn, who had said that the doctrine of abandonment was not peculiar to the law of marine insurance, but was part of the general doctrine of indemnity in all cases. Where there was anything to abandon it must be abandoned, whether the thing insured remained in specie, or merely as debris, or the produce of putrefaction. But, said his lordship, the doctrine of notice of abandonment is peculiarly a part of the law of marine insurance, arising out of the universal custom of shipowners and insurers, and the rule is, that, whenever the claim is for a constructive total loss, notice of abandonment is a condition precedent to the right to recover, unless the assured is excused from giving such notice by some special circumstance. This is a reasonable rule, because from the nature of marine insurance the loss is likely to happen in any part of the world, and where the underwriter has no opportunity of finding out the circumstances of the loss; whereas the assured is sure to have notice of the disaster, and might use his knowledge unfairly, if he were not bound to make a definite election by giving notice of abandonment. The cases in which the assured is excused from giving notice of abandonment are, where, together with the information of the disaster, the assured received notice that the captain has been obliged to sell, to avoid an actual total loss, in which case the assured has nothing in his possession to abandon, and therefore no notice of abandonment is necessary; or where the assured is obliged to sell to prevent the actual perishing of the thing insured so immediately that no notice to the underwriter could be given and an answer received before the sale. In all other cases of constructive total loss notice of abandonment is necessary, though it may be that such notice cannot possibly be of use to the underwriter. His lordship then examined the facts of the case before the Court, showing that the assured was not in the present instance excused from giving notice of abandonment, and therefore could not claim for a constructive total loss. Lords Justices Cotton and The-siger also gave judgments concurring with the view of the law laid down by Lord Justice Brett.

India in Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, THURSDAY, June 13.—TROOPS IN INDIA.—In reply to Sir G. BALFOUR, Colonel STANLEY said he did not think it desirable at present to suggest any change in the number of battalions in the Indian service, the question having been carefully considered and settled in 1870. It was a mistake to suppose that the establishment of the rank and file in India was always under its strength. Sometimes it was over, the fluctuation being due to the fact that troops could only be sent out to India at a particular season of the year.

THE PERAK EXPEDITION.—In reply to Sir G. CAMPBELL, who asked the SECRETARY OF STATE for the COLONIES whether the ordinary pay of the Indian troops employed in the Perak Expedition at the instance of the Governor of the Straits Settlements, for the period when they were beyond the Indian dominions of her Majesty, was charged to the Indian Exchequer, or was to be otherwise provided for, Mr. E. STANHOPE explained that the ordinary pay of the Indian troops in that expedition was charged to the Indian Exchequer.

ARMY ESTIMATES.—On the vote of £256,500 for medical establishments and services, when the House had gone into Committee of Supply, Lord ELCHO wished to refer to a question affecting the health of the troops in India. A correspondence had been going on between a general officer who had seen much service in India and the Commander-in-Chief as to the hour at which the troops in that country should have their dinner. That general officer found that when at a most unhealthy station the troops had their dinner hour postponed till three or four o'clock—a cooler part of the day than one o'clock, their previous dinner-hour—the men did not suffer to anything like the extent they did in other circumstances.

ASSAM GOLD.—The total quantity of gold yielded annually by the Lakhimpur district of Assam is some ten seers, contributed by the different streams, which yield quantities varying from a quarter of a seer to two seers each.

PANTHERS.—A correspondent writes:—In your issue of May 4 Shikari makes mention of having heard of a panther which was shot measuring nine feet. I have made numerous inquiries before regarding this extraordinary length, without ever eliciting a corroborative reply, and none of the sportsmen who have so distinguished themselves in India make any mention in their publications of the unusual length of some panthers; perhaps being so uncommon they were not fortunate enough to come across them. In the winter of 1871, while carrying on my work in the Bustar Territory, Central Provinces, khubbur was brought me one day of a "kill," about four P.M., but none of the villagers, with any certainty, could inform me whether it was a tiger or a dhooorka that had committed the mischief, for the bullock had been pulled down and killed in a narrow dry and sandy nullah, which made it difficult for the pugs to be distinguished, and both banks were covered with long grass. However, I made up my mind it was "Stripes," for the bullock was an unusually large one, and in prime condition. As there was no time for a mat to be constructed high up from the ground, I took my position, with a villager, behind a large tree, about forty yards from the "kill," and almost in a straight line with the run of the stream. I also got green branches stuck in the ground, close together right round us, so as to afford better shelter; everybody else was ordered back to camp, which was about 500 yards away. I had barely been there ten minutes when I saw creeping up, almost on his stomach a panther. I was both astonished and at the same time disappointed, for I had quite made up my mind for "royalty" that evening. However, this was an old stager at the business, for he cleverly, although quite unconscious of our presence, stretched himself along the carcass, on the side away from us, thus all but concealing himself entirely. I waited long and anxiously for a good opportunity, and at last one was offered me when he stood erect, and was about to grab the carcass by the neck, with the intention, I suppose, of dragging it farther up the nullah, and enjoyed himself undisturbed. I levelled and fired a Tipping and Lawden's 12-bore rifle, and with a roar and a bound the beast disappeared in the grass. Next morning, when a search was made, he was found dead, shot right through the heart. This panther measured nine feet long, as he lay before being skinned. I have always been under the impression that there was no distinction between a panther and a leopard, both names being applicable to the same animal.—Pioneer.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE.

CHLORODYNE is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered. CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma. CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, Ague. CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhoea, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery. CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms. CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, Meningitis, &c. Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, 1st Dec., 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE OF PIRACY AND IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. PEARSON stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was, undoubtedly, the inventor of CHLORODYNE: that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, 13th July, 1864.

Sold in bottles at 1s. 1d., 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. each. None is genuine without the words, "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government Stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each bottle.

Sole Manufacturer, J. T. DAVENPORT, 33, Great Russell-street, Bloomsbury, London.

In fact, the marvellous effects produced upon the mind and body of an Arab Sheikh, who was impervious to all native medicines, when I administered to him five

Summary and Review.

OUR latest advices by the Overland Mail are, from Bombay, May 31; Allahabad and Madras, May 29; Calcutta, May 28.

THE early appearance of the mail this month does not, unfortunately, mean an accession of correspondingly late intelligence. Instead of the usual week, our present budget is only four days later than the last. The alteration is due to the change of date fixed for the departure of the mails, always necessitated at this season by the occurrence of the monsoon. The Times of India, reporting the termination of the hot weather in Bombay, says that the cities of the plains have been deserted by all who were able to leave for Simla, Mahabeshwar, the Nilgiris, and other sanitarium. The Governor was expected to remain at Mahabeshwar until the monsoon set in, and he would then most probably make Puna his head-quarters. The Viceroy was at Simla, where the annual gaieties had been somewhat spoiled by the heavy rainfall. The Duke of Buckingham was at Utakamand, where he would probably remain until the end of the rains.

SHOWERS had fallen throughout the Madras Presidency, and pretty generally in Bombay and Central India. There had been rain also all over the Central Provinces and Rajputana, and in every district of Bengal, save Patna; none in Berar; a heavy fall in Assam, where prospects were good; also throughout Birmah. In the North-West Provinces and Oudh there had been a series of heavy storms, with damage in some districts to crops not fully harvested, and slight showers almost all over the Punjab. In Bombay the monsoon was believed to be imminent; but the actual date of the break is always a doubtful point to the weather-wise prophets. The Times of India lays down that the only thing certain about monsoons is that "they are a phenomenon of a regular and progressive character, and that when we know without doubt that certain phenomena have appeared at particular places on the coast, we can calculate with tolerable assurance the day on which similar phenomena will appear at places farther north."

ACCORDING to the same authority it is known that the real "break" in Bombay will be about a fortnight later than at Kalikat, and at Surat a week later than at Bombay. The telegraph wires are considered to be better indicators of its coming than Brahmins, crows, or other popular referees. When the news of its appearance in the south has reached the Presidency, the period of its arrival may be safely calculated by the expectant residents. The Times of India, to enable its readers to estimate with some accuracy the date on which the burst may be anticipated, when once the monsoon has reached Karwar, supplies a table, calculated on the observations of a series of years, which shows the dates at which the accumulation of rain-fall from the 1st May reach one inch, and which may therefore be fairly regarded as the break of the monsoon. The general average date for Bombay is the 9th June.

THE account given of the hail-storm at Fathgarh makes the occurrence something quite unusual:—The roofs of the buildings throughout the European Infantry lines were a perfect wreck, and those in the Fort were very little better. The hailstones are reported to have been at least four and a-half inches in diameter and to have been over one pound in weight, and in one of the new buildings with a corrugated iron roof there is a hole at least four inches in diameter, where one hailstone went through into the building. The roofs of the barracks, which are thatched and had a new layer of three inches of grass a year ago, are so knocked about that the whole of the outer layer must be taken off at once and relaid. The country-tiled roofs of the verandahs of the barracks and of the wash-houses, cook-rooms, guard-room and latrines have been so knocked about that they have had almost every single tile broken on them; in the verandahs of the barracks possibly one-fourth of the old tiles will be able to be used again, but in the subsidiary buildings there is probably not more than one tile in twenty left.

THE Globe truly remarks that the memorial from the people of Puna, presented by Mr. Gladstone yesterday to the House of Commons, has a rather ambitious scope; and assuredly the memorialists are badly advised to talk about obtaining so shadowy and meaningless an object as "progressive freedom." For if they do not now possess to the fullest extent that reasonable liberty which is the only common sense definition of the compounded term, we are unable to divine the kind of desideratum they can possibly seek.

MR. HANBURY's reasons for withdrawing the motion standing in his name for Monday last were sufficiently sound and sensible to meet with general approval; and Mr. Gladstone's statement that he was "by no means assured a discussion upon the question would be for the public interest," left no room for the expression before the House of any further opinions on the subject. But it is to be regretted that the Indian readers of the Nineteenth Century do not see the two sides of a question so closely affecting the interests of their country, and on which they will, perhaps, be too prone to judge from the case put before them. The distinguished writer of the paper himself will allow that there remains much to be said on the part of those who differ from him in opinion, on the very important question he has taken up and, apparently to his own satisfaction, decided.

It is stated that Mir Akhor Ahmad Khan, that "fanatical old madman who was prominently rude to all British officials at UNPROFESSIONAL soldiers in Birmah have a chance of learning their out-of-door duties, which is not always to be had in return for zeal and self-imposed labour. We read that the officer commanding H.M.'s 89th Regiment at Rangoon has offered to allow the local volunteers to join in the parades and route marches of his regiment. We agree with the Indian paper, that, as a means of efficiently drilling small bodies of local volunteers such a proceeding might be followed in many stations in India with advantage.

It seems that the Sultan of Zanzibar has a brass band as well as an army, but out of all proportion to it. The band consists of forty Goanese musicians who were collected by an agent in Bombay, and have only recently reached their destination. They have been housed, according to the account given, "to their glad surprise in rooms fitted in the English military fashion, with separate sleeping and bath-rooms ;" and they have been clothed from the privy purse with white suits adapted to the climate. The Goanese, hitherto celebrated in Western India for their culinary skill and the art of distending the bazaar account, have thus, in a country where the "savage breast" has never before been charged by anything sweeter than the tom-tom, adopted a new and, we are led to believe, a profitable calling.

FOR four consecutive days there had been only one death from cholera amongst the Europeans at Morar. The total number of European victims to the disease was 32 out of 46 attacked, including the three officers whose names have already been published. Of deaths in the native force there had been 64, including followers, out of a total of 126 seizures. Seven cholera camps, namely, five European and two native, had been formed, and there had not been a single fresh case among the troops left in garrison.

AT Sikandarabad a committee had been formed for the purpose of considering the desirability of supplying the town with water from a well in the vicinity of the Husain Sagar tank. The Madras Athenæum is informed that a new and capacious well will be sunk and the water raised by an engine and forced up through iron or earthen pipes into different parts of the town into reservoirs, cisterns, and dwelling-houses.

may be pleased to send him. In the ordinary course of things, however, appointments to the Lower Provinces of Bengal will mean liability also to service in Assam and Birmah; appointments to the N.W.P. liability to service in Oudh and Sind; Birmah will go with Madras; and the Central Provinces with Bombay. Civil servants are to be told this.

BOMBAY news is that bar silver is steady at 53½d. per oz., which makes the rupee worth nearly 1s. 8 7-16d. The present bazaar price of the metal gives a better out-turn than the Mint, thereby leading to shipments to India in spite of what at first sight appears a less advantageous remittance in bill.

IN continuation of the later intelligence on the Indian troops at Malta, the Standard of this morning has a telegram reporting that a division of Native Infantry was drilled before his Royal Highness at six A.M. yesterday, on the Floriana Parade ground, when several difficult movements were capitally executed. According to the statement of the correspondent, the Duke repeatedly exclaimed, "Very good." The Levée, we are told, was very brilliant, and was attended by upwards of four hundred European officers and one hundred and fifty Asiatics in a gorgeous diversity of uniform. The Guards of Honour consisted of the Bengalies—the 13th Infantry, and the 9th Cavalry.

Mr. PARKES, Engineer-in-Chief of the Madras Harbour Works, writes to the Times to correct the figures reported as the total expenditure on those works up to the end of April. The telegram had stated, or had been made to state, £1,749,309, whereas it should have, apparently, shown £174,930, or a tenth part of the sum, the £ having been substituted for Rs. As we reproduced the statement in the "Odds and Ends" of our last issue, it behoves us to call attention to the unintentional error promulgated. Mr. Parkes takes the opportunity of the correction made, to explain that the amount of work done for that expenditure has been considerably more than was anticipated, owing to the operation of pushing through the surf and shallow water near the shore being less costly, though somewhat more tedious, than was expected. He calculates, therefore, that as the most difficult and uncertain stage of the works is already past, he will complete the whole for something under, rather than over, his total estimate of £565,000.

UNDER the head "Bombay" we republished last week from the Bombay Gazette an account of the outbreak of cholera on board H.M.S. Teazer. In the Standard of this morning we are glad to see it stated that the number of cases has been very limited. It appears that "the surgeon of the ship, Dr. Mullock, and two seamen were sent to the hospital at Bombay, where one of the men died. The officer has returned to duty, and the crew has been landed at Butcher's Island while the ship was disinfected. No further cases are reported."

At Barakpur the loyalty of the residents had been displayed in the form of a week's rejoicing for Her Majesty's Birthday. According to the Indian Daily News, amateur private theatricals had taken place, and were to be followed by a Station Ball. The hospitality of hosts was being taxed to its utmost limit, to accommodate friends from Calcutta. The want of a hotel at the Station was, however, shortly to be supplied by the opening of Mr. Monk's establishment, near the Railway Station.

HOBART PASHA should find many supporters of his enlightened proposal to make Batoum a free harbour for trade; and Russia would in such case assuredly consult her own, as well as European, interests, in adopting his suggestion to continue her railway from Tiflis-Poti to the above port, rid of "obnoxious custom-houses," whether Russian or Turkish. With the roads leading from the Black Sea to Persia left in statu quo, such an arrangement would not only be a natural solution to the present complication, but a great and common commercial benefit.

FROM the specimens of native opinion we have seen expressed in the Indian papers, on the subject of the atrocity committed by the Puri Raja, we readily concur in the spirit of the following paragraph, which we find in the columns of the Statesman and Friend of India :—

The Indian Mirror—which, though it has displayed a natural weakness in defending the Kuch Behar marriage, is a long way in advance of the native press in the general enlightenment of its views, and, as a newspaper, need not shrink from comparison with some of its Anglo-Indian contemporaries—is, we believe, the only native journal of mark which has written in a healthy tone on the case of the Raja of Puri. The Hindu Patriot, the Bengali, and the Amrita Bazar Patrika—all published in English—while professing abhorrence of the crime, show a lively sympathy with the criminal. The Patrika hardly conceals its opinion that the country has fallen into a miserable condition when a Raja and an embodiment of Deity can be punished as a common villain. The Patriot suggests insanity, at which even the defending counsel did not hint, and would fain see the sentence commuted to a few years' simple imprisonment.

THE same paper informs us that small-pox in Calcutta was assuming a threatening aspect. Though not increasing greatly, it had been holding its ground for a long time, and fears were entertained that it might linger throughout the rains and break into a violent epidemic in the next cold season. There were 105 deaths from this disease in the last week for which returns had been received.

PUBLIC attention in Upper India has been occupied of late by a case of alleged police oppression at Bardwan; and, owing to the lengthy cross-examination instituted for the defence, it was considered doubtful whether the preliminary inquiry could be completed in time for the Sessions next ensuing. It is said that this unpleasant case is likely to be followed by another against the same inspector of police, which involves the fate of some other prisoners committed five years since for dacoity; the men being sentenced to ten years' imprisonment. One of them had died in jail, and the others were still serving out their time for an offence which, if the whole of the confession on which the present inquiry is based prove true, they never committed.

We observe it stated that the charges against the two native editors, the vakil and grain broker, who were arrested at Surat, were under Sections 109 and 511 of the Indian Penal Code, that is, with abetting or attempting to abet the commission of the following offences :—(1) Being members of an unlawful assembly; (2) rioting, armed with a deadly weapon; (3) assaulting public servants when suppressing a riot; (4) attempt to murder; (5) voluntarily causing grievous hurt; and (6) committing mischief.

THE following statement from the Times of India will be read with interest :—

In gauging the actual significance of the abnormally high death-rate during the early months of the present year in the North-West Provinces and Oudh, it is necessary to consider how much of this mortality is probably due to famine, and how much to a generally unhealthy season. In regard to this point, a valuable comparison may be instituted between the N.W.P. mortality, to which so much interest has of late naturally attached, and that in the Central Provinces as recorded monthly in the Central Provinces Gazette. From the latter returns, the following table may be compiled of the monthly number of deaths registered in the Central Provinces during the month of January, February and March this year, as compared with the same months last year :—

	January.	February.	March.
1877 ... ..	13,297	10,075	12,469
1878 ... ..	16,153	14,227	21,117
Increase ... ..	2,856	4,151	8,648

This table shows that the registered mortality in the Central Provinces in March last was very nearly 70 per cent. greater than that of the corresponding month of last year. This enormous increase may doubtless to some extent be attributed to the higher prices of food; but there has been no great pressure of scarcity in the Central Provinces, and by far the greater part of the increase must be due to the effects of an abnormal season. This fact is of very great importance in the consideration of the significance of the North-Western Provinces mortality; for it may fairly be assumed that the causes which produced so much general unhealthiness in the Central Provinces were also in operation in other parts of Northern India.

THE Times of India contains the account of a disaster to a sailing ship, the Pride of Canada, bound from Liverpool to Rangoon, with a cargo of salt. Dismasted in a gale of wind off the Cape of Good Hope on March 24, she was eventually abandoned on the 31st idem. The survivors of the crew, after undergoing a week of suffering and disquietude, heightened by the loss of the captain and eight men overboard, were rescued and brought to Bombay by the Norwegian barque Europa. Mr. MacSkinning, the chief officer, in a letter to the above paper, expresses on behalf of himself, the second officer, and fourteen others, their deep sense of the kind and courteous treatment they had received from Captain Thesen. The gallant Norwegian had supplied those whom he had rescued with clothing, and his officers and crew had, by their kindness and sympathy, shown themselves worthy followers of a worthy commander. This is as it should be; and we are glad to see the British sailor tendering his thanks in so public and spontaneous a manner.

ACCORDING to the Pioneer, news from Leh up to the 26th of April, when heavy snow was still falling there, is to the effect that the weather in the regions of the Karakorum is just as unseasonable as in Bengal. And this had prevented inquiries being made for the Kashgar fugitive, Beg Kuli Beg, who was still persistently rumoured to be at Shahidula, or thereabouts, waiting to cross the pass into British territory. The Karakorum had been snowed up for four months continuously, though in ordinary seasons it is seldom actually impassable for more than a few days at a time. Twice, within a few weeks, had the British Agent at Leh sent out messengers, with orders to cross, and twice had they returned unsuccessful.

THE ARMIES OF NATIVE STATES.

A very interesting despatch has recently been circulated to all Governments, Administrations and Political Officers, conveying the instruction which the Government of India has considered it necessary to issue for their information and guidance with reference to our relations with the feudatory States of India in respect of their military establishments. The necessity for a despatch of this nature seems to have arisen from the difficulty which has been felt from time to time in dealing with applications from Native States for the improvement of their armaments, in regard to equipment of troops, importation of arms, and the services of European officers for instruction and drill.

The principle on which the despatch is based is that the British Government is responsible for the general peace of the empire and for the defence of the Native States from external enemies, while the native chiefs are responsible for the internal government of their territories, and are bound to subordinate co-operation with the British Government, and to have no relations with each other except through the "common suzerain." It is laid down that the military operations of feudatory States should be such as to require no powerful armaments and formidable arsenals and fortifications; that these operations should be limited to the personal security and honour of the chiefs, the maintenance of internal peace, and the duty of subordinate co-operation against foreign aggression. With the first of these, as being unlikely to raise questions of military or political importance, the despatch does not deal at any length. If a native chief desires to maintain a military establishment in excess of what is needed for his personal security and dignity, it is presumed that he is actuated with a sense of his obligation to co-operate in the general defence of the empire, and it is laid down that in such a case the British Government, being the paramount power whose duty it is to provide for the military defence of the country, should have the decision of the question whether the force the native chief desires to maintain should be permitted, and, if permitted, how it should be utilised.

We are told that after much consideration the Governor-General in Council has arrived at the conclusion that it is impracticable to utilise the armies of Native States for the defence of the Empire. "There can be no doubt, however," says the despatch, "of the propriety of doing so, if a practical scheme could be devised; but in the absence of one, it is laid down that if the forces of a native chief are in excess of the internal requirements of his State, they must be reduced. In certain cases, however, these forces perform duties which in British India are performed by the ordinary police, and therefore it is not considered essentially necessary to insist on their being reduced in such cases. These troops, also, it would appear, keep order in many places in which, if they were not there, we should have to station Imperial garrisons, and they have also on occasions, rendered excellent service to the British Government." Still the broad principle is affirmed that, under present circumstances, the armies of Native States should be limited to the number required for internal purposes, and that any number obviously in excess of that—more particularly troops well-disciplined and well-equipped—"cannot be permitted with safety to the Native State itself or to the Empire."

The despatch goes on to state that various considerations exist under which the discipline and equipment of the troops may be of greater importance than their numbers. A large force imperfectly drilled and armed, even amongst a people of warlike proclivities and accustomed to the constant use of arms, might cause less anxiety than a smaller but more efficient force, if not thoroughly under the control of the Supreme Government, might do elsewhere. As native armies they are "restricted in proportion to local needs and usages," the Government is of opinion that there exists no necessity for their being highly-trained and well-armed. The despatch, therefore, requires that "great caution should be exercised in giving the services of European officers to drill the troops of Native States," and directs that arms precision should not be supplied them. A few thousand rifles might perhaps with safety be given to a loyal chief, but the Government thinks that if one application for such arms were complied with, others would follow, and it would be difficult, if not impossible, to make distinctions without their appearing invidious ones. In deciding, therefore, that arms of precision should not be given at all, the advantage is gained of maintaining "the existing state of things," and no one chief can reasonably complain that another is favoured.

The despatch further requires that local governments and administrations should keep the Government of India fully and accurately informed on the subject of the numbers, equipment, organisation and discipline of the forces of the Native States. It goes on to say that "the Government desires to dispel all mystery and secrecy about the armies of Native States, and to encourage native chiefs to treat us with the confidence in this matter which we repose in them." The duty is also enjoined of obtaining the consent of native chiefs to periodical inspection of their troops and arsenals as the "concealment of military preparations and arrangements . . . must naturally be considered as indicating on the part of a chief who resorts to such practices a want of confidence in our power or sincerity to protect him." Local authorities are also instructed to avail themselves of opportunities "to curtail extravagant military establishments in Native States, to discourage the general use of arms, and to engender the conviction that the States may rely for their protection and defence on the forces of the Empire."

The general instructions given in this despatch have reference to the feudatory States in the interior of India, and not to States like Kelat or Kashmir, on the Imperial frontier, to which different principles are applicable; but the reports which are required as to the number, equipment, organisation, and discipline of the armies apply to the armaments of States on the frontier as well as to those within the limits of the Empire.—Englishman.

It is said that the sentence of imprisonment passed by Holkar against the editor of the Malwa Akhbar has been remitted.

FAMINES IN INDIA.

The Resolution of the Government of India, dated Simla, the 16th May, is an interesting paper and, as times go, practical and to the point. Its object, primarily, is the appointment of the Commission of Inquiry, directed by the Secretary of State; and, secondarily, the issue of such instructions as are considered essential to the due performance of its important task, or, to use the precise words of the Resolution, to "place on record observations in elucidation of the objects for which the Commission has been appointed. Perhaps it is rather in pursuance of official form than from belief in absolute necessity, that nine experienced Commissioners are supposed to require any supplement whatever to the Ministerial Despatch carefully recommended to their consideration, "with a view to their framing, as early as possible, a plan on which to pursue the investigations required of them."

We took occasion last week to notice how prone are public men, even men of acknowledged disinterestedness, to overstep the limits of actual duty, and to pass from criticism to censoriousness, when reviewing the work of their competitors in the battle of life. And it looks much as if the Government of India were apprehensive of the display of some such common human weakness when warning the Commissioners that the application of criticism to systems heretofore tried for checking the ravages of famine must be of a restricted kind. All examination of, or allusion to, the acts of Governments or Councils, individuals or committees, must be "made subservient to the essential object of devising a sound system for the future." At the same time there is a certain license, if not an invitation, to attack crotchets and idiosyncracies, to be discerned in the following passage:—"The existence of any peculiarities in the general administrative system of particular provinces, which may have tended either to assist or retard the action of Government in the struggle with famine, should not be lost sight of, and will, indeed, form a very material element in coming to a conclusion on this part of the inquiry; for there can be no doubt that a crisis such as that of the past year brings into marked prominence the strong and weak points of administrative systems in a way which ordinary years would fail to do." We are quite aware that the reasoning is sound and, as far as may be, logical; and we almost think that the President of the Commission would have written in much the same words had he been called upon to instruct himself and his fellow-members.

The main questions for consideration are stated to be the kind of relief works best suited for giving employment to the population; the agency under which such works should be conducted; the provision for large works where these may be thought the more essential; the proper province of the Government, in imparting and distributing food-supplies in famine-stricken districts; and the amount of food necessary to sustain life in affording practical and immediate relief. We have taken five heads of proposed deliberation, in accordance with five consecutive paragraphs before us; after which the resolution contemplates the possibility of preventing Famine for the future.

It would be childish to suppose that the newly-appointed Commission collectively, or as represented by its more active members, has not carefully scrutinised the published opinions of statesmen, administrators, or executive officers, who have had to do with Famines in India. We may therefore conclude that the description of Relief Works recommended by Sir Bartle Frere as suitable for the employment of able-bodied poor who become reduced to starvation, are not unknown to them. These, it is true, have reference in their detail to Bengal rather than other parts; but the principle inculcated applies to India generally, and one particular line of railway cited by the abovenamed able administrator, in his pamphlet on the "Bengal Famine"—(page 43, note)—that from Karwar, on the Malabar Coast, to Hubli, with an extension to the Southern Mahratta country, bears eminently upon the Madras Presidency. A small volume on the same subject by Mr. Blair, and published by Messrs. Blackwood at an earlier date (1874), may not have met with like attention; but it is written with much intelligence and ability, and its fourth chapter on "Executive Management," touches directly the question of "Relief Works." But the Government of India have wisely, and with foresight, required the Commission to look beyond the mere relief to be afforded to those who find labour in these common sources. It perceives with truth that "there are always large classes of artisans, weavers, and others, whose labour is but of little value on earth-works, but who, if they could be employed on their own handicrafts, might turn out work more useful to themselves and profitable to Government."

Few critics of State measures will deny that this question is a difficult one; and few philanthropists will withhold sympathy from State objects, in expecting the Commission "to lay down some useful principles as to providing special means of employment for the classes above-mentioned, for women not of the labouring class, and for those who are, by position and custom, wholly unfitted for the earth-work, which constitutes almost the only kind of relief labour hitherto attempted."

The means of providing food, and the nature and amount of that food, are matters not less urgent than the character of the relief to be afforded in the shape of paid labour. In fact, for present exigencies, there is little to be discussed beyond the limit of these considerations. As regards provision for the future, in the light of prevention, or protection, the subject is too important for dismissal in a passing remark. It involves the development of railway and water communication; and the particular responsibility of Local Governments on occasions of future emergencies.

Before quitting the subject, we may take note of five minor heads of inquiry on which elucidation is held to be desirable:—1st, the mode and extent of gratuitous relief recommended; 2nd, the proper use of Emigration as a relieving measure; 3rd, the cases in which remission or suspension of revenue would be politic; 4th, the sufficiency or otherwise of the existing or contemplated administrative organisation in respect of Famine; and 5th, the mode of dealing with distress in Native States. It need scarcely be added that the names of the Commissioners afford a substantial guarantee that the work entrusted to them will neither be misapprehended nor mismanaged from lack of will or ability.

REGISTRATION.

TO THE EDITOR OF "ALLEN'S INDIAN MAIL."

SIR,—The failure of the system of registering titles to property in land and houses in England appears to result from want of care in identifying the parties who are raising money by selling or mortgaging such property.

In India for hundreds of years the greatest care had been taken to identify mortgagers. Numerous well-paid officers, called Kanoongoes, i.e., registrars of real property, were made responsible for detecting immediately all attempts at false personation. When these kanoongoes grew old they were allowed to transfer the performance of their duties to sons, nephews, or grandsons; the consequence was that in some districts every landowner was known personally to one of the kanoongoes; the jurisdiction of each one of the latter over a Pergunah, or hundred, not being very extensive.

Since her Majesty assumed the Government of India many English civil officers have fancied that these kanoongoes, or registrars, were useless and expensive old fogies, and have caused many to be dismissed, and have required those still retained in the service of Government to add to their own duties the work of those who have been dismissed. The truth is that all the fine printed reports, which bear the names of crack settlement officers and favoured district officers, have been compiled from information furnished by kanoongoes.

At the present time in many districts Tahsildars or tax collectors and young Englishmen have been appointed registrars, although they are incapable of identifying the parties registering, and the consequence has been that the crime of false personation has been repeatedly committed, often, I fear, with impunity.

In the Times of Monday, the 27th May last, will be found a letter from Mr. R. R. Torrens, giving his reasons for supposing that registration is useless. The instances of failure of justice narrated by Mr. Torrens merely prove that the English system is a bad one. No proper precautions are taken to prevent fraud. As trustee, I had some years ago to sell the lease of a house in London; instead of being taken to a Registrar's office, and there properly and publicly identified, I sat comfortably in my solicitor's room, in which were two other gentlemen, who, I was informed, were the Registrar and the solicitor of the purchaser. I was asked to sign a loose piece of parchment, which I was told was the Registration record. Neither of the gentlemen had ever seen me before, but the purchase money, a large sum, was without hesitation paid to me in bank notes.

Three important omissions are thus permitted in the system of registration in London:—

First. I was not officially identified. A Registrar is an official witness; if he cannot himself identify the parties, he should be bound to record in a registration book the means which he has adopted of securing effectual identification.

The evidence of a chaprassi, or process server, whose wages vary from six to ten shillings a month, should not be considered adequate.

Secondly.—There was no publicity. If my solicitor had been dishonest, any friend of his might have forged my signature and have walked off with the purchase money.

In Oudh some years ago, two cheats, one of whom represented himself to be the owner of a certain village, would have befooled the ignorant registrar, if a bystander, who was in the public office by chance, had not declared that the man, who was personating falsely, was not the landowner.

Previous to the matiny the kanoongoes, or official registrars, were bound to register publicly in the same building, and often in the same room, in which the collector of the land tax carried on business. In this room there are usually many landowners, farmers, and tenants present.

paged and numbered, and not on loose pieces of parchment or paper.—Your obedient servant,
May 29. T.

Spirit of the Indian Press.

REVERSING ENGINES.

Whatever the merits of the Press Act may be, the passing of that Act must lead thoughtful minds into a train of rather dismal reasoning. The liberty of the Native Press was one only, though it may have been the chief, of a number of liberal experiments which from time to time have been made by our Government in this country. It ranks in the same category with the grant of municipal privileges, with trial by assessors, and with the proposed employment of natives in the higher branches of the administration. The admitted failure of one experiment induces us to reconsider all. The review, it must be conceded, is not reassuring. It is scarcely possible as yet to point to a single concession which has not been either disregarded or abused. Assessors in the majority of cases are proverbially useless; municipal privileges are not valued as we had hoped they would be. If we are to reason from experience, we may safely assume that the employment of natives in the Civil Service will prove, as a means of advancing the people, as little satisfactory as previous experiments. For civic or corporate freedom there seems little more appetite than for safeguards of personal liberty. All that seems to be really appreciated is the prospect of personal advancement, and the privilege of personal abuse. If natives affect to feel little confidence in Government, it seems at least as certain that they feel none at all in one another. A low and uninstructed egoism usurps the place of that cultured altruism which is the text of philanthropists and reformers. One is tempted to ask oneself whether all our efforts hitherto have not proceeded upon wrong lines. Have we been crowning the edifice when we ought to have been laying down foundations? Have we begun at the wrong end altogether? Or is it merely that we have sown rightly, but must be content to leave others to reap? There is but little prospect, it may be conceded, of the question taking practical form, at least so far as regards past concessions. For the most part, these are not of a kind which can cause inconvenience to Government. When the Native Press began to talk flat rebellion, it was necessary to remind it that it existed, not of right, but of grace. But failure in other directions is for the most part negative only. It is very sad, for instance, that an assessor should find a murderer, because he is a Brahmin, innocent; but as power is reserved to the judge of disregarding the assessor's opinion, the matter calls for no particular notice—so that we are not likely to be asked to undo much of what has been done by our predecessors. But, on the other hand, it is very possible, indeed, that we may be discouraged from following in their footsteps. We may take up, in despair, with the material theory of administration only. There are not wanting indeed signs that we have already begun to do so. It will be argued as it has already been often argued, that the people are not fit for liberal experiments. Schemes for education and self-government will be at a discount, and in their place will be preached a gospel of narrow gauge, and a faith based on commercial articles. The present Viceroy could not fail to have been struck, as in fact he told us he was struck, with the irony of fate which first armed his hand, of all others, against the schemes of culture and the liberty of public discussion which were left him as a legacy by his predecessors. The times are out of joint, and it was cursed spite only which could have forced him to the front to set them right. He seems accordingly to have felt suppression "most foul as in the best it is; but this most foul, strange, and unnatural."

But though the Viceroy is not likely to appear before us again as "Hamlet," or charged with the intolerable burden of retribution, there can be little doubt that the opponents of what we may call the concession theory, will take heart by his example. We have in these Provinces, for instance, within the last twelve-month, seen education clipped and liquor encouraged. So much at least of the concession policy as costs money is likely for the present to have a similarly bad time of it. That policy suffers under the great disadvantage of being unable to point to six per cent.; and the expenditure of money on unproductive work is unquestionably out of fashion. What there is of reproduction about it will appear to future generations; and the argument that as they have done nothing for us we need do nothing for them survives Mr. Mill's exposure. For the material policy is an expensive one; and any argument will be greedily snapped at which gives a colour to schemes of economy. It is difficult, we allow, to defend the policy of concession except on à priori considerations. We have not as yet much to show for it. The gross and palpable results of material improvement will always secure the adhesion of the masses. That most excellent form of charity which hopes, and endures, and believes, may at last be rewarded by the fulfilment of its desires; but such charity is rare, even amongst the best of us. There is so much that is disappointing in the result of all our efforts, that it is not difficult to raise a laugh against them. Even the warmest advocates of those efforts may well learn the necessity of caution in extending them. We have just admitted failure with the Native Press. The accepted outcome of our hitherto education is, that fantastic thing, the Anglo-Indian Baboo. Death and decay seem the fruits, so far, of our seed of a new life. Yet we are about to try an experiment, to the full as doubtful as any that have preceded it, with the employment of native civilians. The project, it seems to many, is proceeding on the identical lines which have failed so often already. It has the same radical defect that has brought so many others to grief. It aims above the peoples' heads. Speaking broadly, the unit of experiments in this direction should be not the empire, but a fraction of it. The germ solidarity, so far as it exists outside caste or family in British India, will be found probably, if it is to be found anywhere, within the limits of our administrative districts. That sense of common interests and common dangers which lies at the bottom of all popular advance is stronger within district limits than within any other limits we can point to. But this is not the view which finds favour with the old school of concessionists. They look for a sudden and general enlightenment. They deal, not with local organisation, but with abstract man. They are above using the machinery of affairs. They call to their aid no facilities which may be offered by our system of administration; but trust to the excellence of men's nature, and the purity of their own intentions. Man seems to them not an animal who must be coaxed, and worried, and taxed into self-interest, but a thing of pure reason who has only to be shown the right way, and is sure to jump greedily into it. They take, therefore, too general and broad measures in their wish to interest and arouse the people. The masses can be reached only in their homes, but we deal with them by provinces. Men do not improve their status by interesting themselves in the empire first, and in their own local affairs afterwards; they proceed from the latter upwards. Localisation of administration, as of finance, therefore, is the direction in which we should shape our efforts, rather than in universal measures of good-will. After all, what is most needed is to give the average native self-reliance, and the habit of looking on himself as a member of society, and not as a member of a caste or family only. To do this, he must learn that he moves in a society which has appreciable, recognisable limits; that he has to share with it public burdens; and to shape with it the means of best accommodating himself to them. This can be done only within limited local areas, such as those of the districts of which the aggregate is British India. What the village community was, the district community may in course of time become. In many ways, we make bold to say, the district is already acquiring the habit of cohesion, while the village is daily losing it. The experiment made in the case of towns might be extended in the direction we indicate. If, as regards towns, the results have not as yet been striking, it is partly perhaps that time has not been allowed them, and partly that there has been too much interference from outside. As we hinted in a former issue, the measure is needed, not in native interests only, but in all interests. The balance of financial power needs attention, since it has gone so largely into the hands of local Governors. No doubt, behind all is the immense power of passive resistance which is offered by native character. But if the advocates of moral, as complimentary to material progress, believe that this power is ever to be removed by any force other than that of mere physical prosperity, or selfish commercial self-interest, they will probably find it wise to reverse engines; and leaving the more ambitious tracks they have hitherto followed, to content themselves for the present with working at half-price among Lumber channels and obscurer ways.

THE CASE OF THE PURI RAJA.

The Hindoo Patriot has not much to say on the case of the Puri Raja, but the little it does say is significant. The Raja, we are reminded, was a prince who was regarded as an incarnation of deity; he was the spiritual lord of the people, and the protector of the sanctity of the temple of the national divinity. The crime he committed was "barbarous," "filthy," "revolting;" but it was committed in "a fit of distemper," and the Patriot expresses some surprise that counsel did not urge a plea of mental unsoundness. We do not know that this suggestion, coming from the Patriot, should have surprised us; but we confess it did. The crime, as a fact, seems to have been committed with a horrible deliberation, altogether inconsistent with the supposition of a mere "fit of distemper," which would be a singularly mild expression by which to characterise the state of mind in which such a crime was committed, even if there were reason to think that the state was temporary. But there is no reason to think so. There was premeditation, careful arrangement, combination with accomplices; and the crime itself was protracted in its execution, and presumably afforded intense enjoyment to the perpetrators. The counsel, moreover, who defended the Raja, were the ablest that could be obtained; they racked their ingenuity to find pleas in his favour, even going so far as to set up one, which one of the Judges declared was almost an insult to the Bench. Had there been the least hope of being able to establish a plea of insanity, we may be quite sure that the attempt would have been made. But we are not aware that it was even suggested by any one while the case was sub judice; and if we say that the suggestion, coming from the Patriot now, surprises us, it is because we really feel unable to sit in judgment on the mental condition of the writer who can seriously make it. There need of course be no further surprise, when the writer goes on to say that the sentence, which he admits is just, should yet be mitigated:—

The Hindoo community of Orissa feel deeply the humiliation they have suffered in the person of their spiritual head. They do not question the justice of the sentence, but they would feel grateful if the sentence were commuted to a simple imprisonment for a few years. They are inclined to think that chastened by this punishment, he may come back to the bosom of his family a reformed man. There is a strong feeling among the Oriyas on this subject, and we consider it our duty to give expression to it.

If such is the Hindoo Patriot's conception of a journalist's duty—not to educate his ignorant and superstitious countrymen, but to constitute himself their mouthpiece in a matter like this—what can we expect of the editor of inferior journals? What can we expect of vernacular journalism? We may just notice the slight inconsistency between the plea of insanity and the hope that a few years' simple imprisonment would have a chastening effect, a hope which is only consistent with a belief in the moral wickedness of the criminal.—Friend of India.

Miscellaneous.

RIVER INDS.—The bridge of boats over the Sutlej at Ferozepore has been taken down for the season, as usual, owing to the rise of the river.

TRIHUT.—At the instance of the local Government, the Government of India has sanctioned an outlay of Rs. 56,21,489 for the completion of the Tirhut State Railway.

RAINFALL.—The total amount of rain registered at Alipore from the 1st January last to the 18th May, was 15.41 inches, the average fall of the corresponding period for twenty-five years being 7.58 inches.

THE LATE DR. DUFF.—An appeal for funds is being made by the Calcutta Improvement Association to commemorate, in some permanent manner, Dr. Duff's labours on behalf of India, more especially in the cause of education.

DARJILING DANDYS.—Visitors to Darjiling will be glad to learn that the Deputy Commissioner has resolved to put an end to the impudence and extortion of the dandy bearers at Darjiling. He has published a fixed scale of charges, and as the men are supplied from his office, any complaints will be at once attended to.

RAINS.—General and heavy rains in the Firuzpur district have helped the early sowings of the rainy weather crop; but they have caused damage to the grain that had not yet been gathered in. The inundation canals are full, and in many places have overflowed their banks and flooded the surrounding country.

AGRA RELIEF WORKS.—A census was lately taken at Agra to ascertain from what places the relief labourers had come. The results were as follows:—From Agra City, 2,264; from Agra district, 2,815; from other districts, 423; from Rajputana State, 2,380; total, 7,882.

MADRAS DEFENCES.—The British India Steam Navigation Company's s.s. Chanda, which left Calcutta on the 16th instant for the Coast Ports and Bombay, has on board six 12-ton guns and 1,400 projectiles, each about 250 lbs., for the fortification of Madras; and at Garden Reach she will take on board 25 tons of gunpowder for the same purpose.

PRECEDENCE.—Since the Government of India has removed to Simla, his Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General in Council has passed a rule of precedence for the Principal of the Mayo College, Ajmir. The appointment will be included in the second class of graded civil officers not reserved for covenanted civilians, and the incumbent, therefore, will rank with officers entered under No. 72 in the Precedence Warrant for India.

THE REV. H. P. PARKER, B.A., of Trinity College, Cambridge, has offered himself to the Church Missionary Society, and has been appointed Joint-Secretary to the Calcutta Corresponding Committee, and also to assist in the ministrations of the Old Church in that city. He is expected to arrive by the beginning of next cold season, accompanied by the Rev. J. Welland.

DEATHS IN CALCUTTA.—There were in all 350 deaths registered in Calcutta last week, giving a ratio per thousand per annum of 42.5, as compared with the ratio of 37.5 in the previous week. There were last week 71 deaths from fevers, 105 from small-pox, 1 from measles, and 44 from cholera. The deaths are thus classified:—8 non-Asiatics, 17 mixed races, 234 Hindoos, 89 Mohamadans, and 2 other class.

FEMALE UNIVERSITY STUDENTS.—The Calcutta University has approved a set of rules for the admission of women to its examinations in arts. The entrance will be the same as that for males, but in the F.A. and B.A., ladies may take up French, German, Italian, or an Indian vernacular in place of a classical language, and Botany or Political Economy for the second mathematical subjects. They will be exempted from attendance at an affiliated college. The examination will be superintended by ladies.

MR. CARMICHAEL.—The Indian Daily News is informed that it has been decided to terminate the engagement of Mr. Carmichael, the late Telegraph Superintendent, East Indian Railway Company, instead of transferring him to the Engineering Establishment as proposed, and that in consideration of his long services the Board of Directors have sanctioned the grant to him of a bonus of fifteen months' pay, at the rate of Rs. 1,000 a month.

CRICKET.—We are glad to learn that a movement is on foot amongst the members of the Calcutta Cricket Club to get a professional bowler out from England for the coming season. We understand that most of the playing members are in favour of it, and we have no doubt that the non-playing members will support the step in the interests of cricket. We would take the liberty of suggesting to the club immediate action in the matter, as the season is not far off, and the necessary arrangements will take some time to make.

DEATHS IN CALCUTTA.—The mortuary returns are being published with commendable despatch just now. Those for the week ending Saturday last are before us. The total number of deaths registered was 311, giving a ratio per 1,000 per annum of 37.7, as compared with a ratio of 42.5 in the previous week. There were last week eighty-three deaths from small-pox, seventy-eight from fevers, one from diphtheria, and twenty-six from cholera. The deaths are thus classified:—Three non-Asiatics, eight mixed races, 229 Hindoos and seventy-one other classes.

THE LATE MR. PRIESTLEY.—The Pioneer notes, with real sorrow, the death of Mr. C. W. Priestley, the late Assistant Secretary to Government in the Public Works Department. There are very few in Allahabad to whom Mr. Priestley was unknown, and there are none who will soon forget the eagerness with which he joined in the many projects connected with the various committees of which he was a member. The High Schools owe to his thought and careful superintendence many of the improvements that have lately taken place in their buildings, while All Saints' Vestry can equally testify to his labours for the church and schools. Men of Mr. Priestley's type are ill-spared from the sphere they occupy, and deserve more than a passing remembrance.

THE WEATHER.—The unusual and general rainfall of the past fortnight is causing a good deal of anxiety on all sides. If the present stormy and wet May is to be succeeded by months of dry weather, as was the case last year, the look-out is a bad one for the agriculturist; if, on the other hand, the usual rainfall follows in June, July, and August, we may look forward to flooded rivers, and all the concomitant evils that follow in their train. In Calcutta and its suburbs the tanks are already nearly full, and the rain on Thursday evening left the Maidan a sheet of water, only a portion of which was drained off on the following morning.—Indian Daily News.

A RAILWAY CORPS.—A committee was convened at Calcutta some months ago to mature a scheme for the constitution of an Imperial Railway Corps. Where is that committee now? The members found sufficient employment for the cold weather in contemplating the magnitude of the task entrusted to them; and ultimately dispersed, sadder, perhaps, but so far as the projected railway corps was concerned, in no way wiser men. The result of their deliberations was nil not even vox. A second attempt will now be made to grapple with what is really an important question. Captain Miley, of the Military Accounts Department, proceeds to Simla to whip in and coach the new team.—Pioneer.

AN ACTIVE PRELATE.—The Right Reverend the Bishop of Lahor is now at Multan, having taken temporary charge of the chaplaincy of that station during the absence on duty of the incumbent, the Rev. Mr. Duke. The latter chaplain has been posted for the summer months to the clerical charge of the Gullies, near Murree. The zeal of the bishop is said to be surprising everybody in Multan, though causing considerable anxiety to his friends. In addition to taking the usual English services, visiting hospitals, &c., Dr. French, it is stated, devotes his mornings and evenings to street preaching in the Bazaars, both of the city and cantonments. However much this zeal may excite admiration one cannot but fear that by overtaxing his strength the health of the bishop may break down and he be consequently obliged to relinquish his work.—Friend of India.

OBSTRUCTED DRAINAGE.—A marked change seems to have come over the opinion of the Bengal Government regarding the relation between epidemic fever and obstructed drainage. Thanks mainly to the persistency with which Raja Digambar Mitter has pressed his views on the attention of the public and of the Government, it is at last admitted that one of the chief causes, if not the sole cause of the misery, suffering and mortality inflicted by this pest on the population of large tracts of Bengal, is "excessive humidity of the soil caused by obstructive drainage." Further, the Lieutenant Governor has no longer any doubt that the obstruction is in some cases caused by roads, rail-roads or embankments, and a resolution has been recorded, declaring it to be the duty of magistrates and other local officers to see that such obstructions are remedied by the provision of a sufficient amount of waterway by means of culverts and bridges. Another and still more extensive cause of this unwholesome humidity of the soil is the natural obstruction produced by the silting up or destruction of old water-courses, and Commissioners, and District Officers are enjoined to take up the matter and put in force the powers they possess for dealing with the evil. To enable them to act with greater effect in this direction, as also in improving the water supply, grants in aid are promised whenever any useful scheme for either of these purposes is proposed.—Englishman.

SERIOUS FIRE AT HAZAREEBAUGH.—A correspondent at Hazareebaugh, under date the 20th May, informs us that great excitement and alarm was occasioned there by the occurrence of a fire in the quarters of Mr. Williams, the apothecary. The writer says: "I was seated writing, and heard a great noise outside. On going into the verandah, I saw people running in every direction, and presently the alarm bugle sounded and the fire-engine appeared. I ran out to see what I could do, and found Mrs. Williams screaming in her verandah with her child. I walked as fast as I could, but Mr. Smart, of the Revenue Survey, was before me, and took them to his house, which is close to the church. We were just opposite to the burning house, and a dreadful sight it was. All the sick were taken out of the hospital as fast as possible, and Mrs. Williams's kit got out too, while numbers of soldiers on the burning roof were endeavouring to prevent the fire from communicating with the sick wards. They have only just succeeded in cutting it off from the women's ward, but the Williams's house is burning still and the roof has fallen in. It appears that Mr. Williams got in a tin of kerosine oil and made a hole in it intending to bottle it off. He lit a cigar, and the whole tin exploded, and he is unable to say whether a spark or the match fell upon the tin. He then made the mistake of throwing a chatty of water upon the oil, which of course caused the flames to spread. He then had only time to shout to his wife to escape with their child, when the whole place was in flames. Great credit is due to the soldiers, who worked hard to subdue the fire, and it is owing to their exertions that it did not cause much damage."—Statesman.

HEALTH OFFICER'S REPORT FOR APRIL.—There were registered in April 550 births—a number less by sixty-one than that of the preceding month, and by 156 than that of the corresponding month last year. There was an increase of seventy-two on the average of the decade. The death-rate in April was 43.7 per 1,000 of population, a rate slightly below that of the previous month. The course of fever was favourable in comparison with all preceding years since 1871, and showed a diminution of seventy-eight cases on the number of last March. Cholera proved fatal to 308 persons—a number exceeding all the corresponding figures of the decade, except those of the first three years. Whether cholera has shown similarly high prevalence in the surrounding neighbourhood in the month under review is not yet known. In the previous month the town mortality was exceeded in the suburbs. There was also a considerable rise in the deaths from dysentery and diarrhoea. Small-pox raged virulently in the town, with no sign of abatement, causing 349 deaths against 46, 79, and 287 in the first three months of the current year, and against 27, the average of the last ten years. There was only one death from small-pox amongst the non-Asiatic races. From diseases registered as due to "other causes" 377 persons died, a number less by 30 than that of 1877, but considerably higher than that of the other years. Infant mortality, reckoned on estimated births, was as follows:—Hindus 363.8, Mohammedans 356, mixed races 228.3. There was no death amongst European infants.

COLONEL WYNDHAM AND THE ITALIAN CONSUL.—A letter from Mandalay to the Rangoon Gazette says: "Mr. Andreino, the Italian Consul and Agent of the Flotilla, was down at one of the steamers arranging business, or perhaps paying a friendly visit to the captain. Colonel Wyndham, who happened to be down there at the same time, and had some months back considered he had been insulted by Mr. Andreino, walked after him as the latter left the steamer, and reminded him of his past conduct. Mr. Andreino told him to mind his own business, and not interfere with people. The Colonel thereupon demanded satisfaction, and laying aside his coat and stick, struck Mr. Andreino with his fist; the latter retaliated, until one of them got hold of the stick and belaboured the other, until both seemed drenched in blood. The fight, though a disgraceful affair, was conducted fairly, because when the combatants were tired of using their fists, they by turns made use of the stick, which the Colonel had thrown down probably for joint use. Mr. Andreino laid complaint against the gallant Colonel in the Birmese Courts for an attack made on the Italian Consul, but the Colonel says he fought and got satisfaction from the Flotilla Agent, not from the Italian Consul. Mr. Shaw, our new Resident, I am told, is keeping a strict watch over the proceedings of the case, and appears determined to see that no injustice shall be done the Colonel, who is a registered subject. It is well for the Colonel that this fracas did not take place whilst Colonel Duncan was protecting her Britannic Majesty's subjects. It is said that the Birmese authorities wished to incarcerate him, but Mr. Shaw, who is a man of the right stamp, would not permit it. According to the Birmese law each will have to swear as to who struck the first blow, or be required to light candles or dive under water, when the decision will be to pay a fine of say from 30 at (sic) 120 by (sic) the proved aggressor. With the present state of difference between the two nationalities, an intelligent Birman remarked that England could not now count upon the co-operation of Italy in the present European crisis.—Englishman Overland Mail.

LEAVE RULES.—We are informed that the Secretary of State has declined to entertain a memorial from Mr. A. Maltby, Assistant Superintendent Revenue Survey, Madras, praying for admission to the benefits of the more favourable Leave rules for uncovenanted officers. Mr. Maltby's application was inadmissible because his salary on the 10th February, 1876, was less than Rs. 6,000 a year.

SHELL LIME AND SHELLACS.—General Rhodes Morgan, of Ootacamand, has, says the Madras Mail, taken out a patent for converting shell lime into hydraulic cement. This gallant veteran has acquired some of the knack of Midas, who was endowed with the gift of turning everything into gold. He has already succeeded in converting sea shells and sand into rupees; and by the time the Madras Harbour Works are finished, he should be in a position to convert these rupees into a very pretty estate in England.

FRENCH RAILWAY.—The following is from the Moniteur Officiel of Pondicherry:—"The Governor has the pleasure to publish the following telegram for the information of the population:—Paris 11th. The railway convention signed. The engineer of the company has left. Everything arranged. Particulars by letter by mail of 19th. The Governor feels it his duty to convey to the Minister of the French Colonies the expression of the thanks of the inhabitants of Pondicherry for the conclusion of this important undertaking."

CHINCHONA.—The Secretary of State has acknowledged from the Madras Government the receipt of 577 bales of cinchona bark, per s.s. Malwa. The bark realised a net sum of £19,965. 10s. in the home markets. The renewed crown bark which sold for 15s. 8d. in 1877 realised in some cases 11s. 10d. in 1878; the mossed crown sold for 11s. 7d. in 1877, and 8s. 1d. in 1878; whilst the branch crown, which brought 5s. 7d. in 1877, sold generally for 4s. 1d. in 1878.

THE REV. R. P. LITTLE.—The Times of India regrets to learn that the Rev. R. P. Little, Chaplain of Coconada, has fallen a victim to heat-apoplexy. On the 16th inst. he left Coconada on one of his periodical visits to Rajahmundry, being then, to all appearance, in his usual health. On Monday, the 20th, on his journey back by road, he was attacked with heat apoplexy—the heat during the whole of that day being intense—and at seven o'clock the same evening he breathed his last, about half-way between Rajahmundry and Coconada.

TRANQUEBAR.—The railway project for connecting Tranquebar with the Carnatic Line will, it is hoped, be an accomplished fact at no distant date, as the Government have accorded their sanction to the scheme, and desired the district authorities to raise the necessary funds by increasing the road cess a little, and by opening a public loan at 5 per cent. under the guarantee of the State. It is, however, believed that the S. I. R. Company will, after all, find it a profitable speculation to undertake the work on their behalf.

FORESTS.—According to the report of Lieutenant-Colonel Beddome, on his recent tour of inspection of the Anamally Forest in Madras, it appears that the working of the forest, during the last half of the year 1877, has not been satisfactory in a financial sense. Since the year 1869-70, when fair profits were realised, there has been a deficit every year, except 1871-72 and 1873-4. In 1876-77 the expenditure was Rs. 47,533, against a revenue of only Rs. 8,491. According to Colonel Beddome's report, considerable reform is required in the management of the Forest.

MARRIAGE REJOICINGS.—A correspondent at Maisur, writing on the 14th May, says:—"Measures are being taken to release a large number of prisoners from the jails in the province, in honour of the marriage of his Highness the Maharaja of Maisur. The persons to be released are chiefly those who have been convicted of grain robbery and theft during the famine, but unaccompanied by any violence or acts of aggravation, and whose sentences do not exceed four years' imprisonment. The selection will be made principally from the ryot class. Besides these, other convicts who have been imprisoned for a long time and have conducted themselves well, or have distinguished themselves by some special deed of merit, are to be let off."

COLONEL DREVER.—Among those whom it hath thus delighted her most Gracious Majesty the Queen, Empress of India, to honour on the occasion of her present birthday, is Colonel W. S. Drever, Acting Inspector General of Police of this Presidency; and as to his merits to the mark of Royal favour now bestowed on him, there can be but one opinion. He may truly be regarded as a right noble member of the noble company of the Companions of the most Exalted Order of the Star of India. Colonel Drever did excellent service as an officer of the Mofussil Police, but the services that have gained for him the distinction now conferred are to be traced to the time of the Great Famine whose shade still seems to linger among us. The condition of this city during such an exceptional period of severity and unparalleled confusion was quite an abnormal one. The influx into the town of destitute and starving villagers was enormous. As Commissioner of Police for the Town of Madras, Colonel Drever's energies were taxed to the uttermost in saving life and preserving health and order. His well-known tact, discretion and experience of native habits enabled him to acquit himself in a manner deserving of the highest praise. We, therefore, heartily congratulate Colonel Drever on his newly-bestowed title, and wish that he may have a career which will entitle him to a higher rank in the Order in which he has now found a place. Two other officials in this Presidency who have been similarly honoured are Mr. J. H. Gartsin, the Additional Secretary to Government in the Famine Department, and Mr. R. Davidson, of the Civil Service.

THE COORG ESTATES.—As we have often stated, and our contemporaries also, the Coorg Coffee Estates have been in a most gloomy and deplorable condition. Mr. Richter, one of the pioneers of coffee-planting in Coorg, predicted certain ruin for the enterprise. Bug, borer, and other deterring influences combined, rendered, hitherto, coffee-planting a very precarious mode of living. But the last report from Coorg brings us news of several hundreds of acres of new land having been brought under coffee cultivation. This certainly shows what European industry can do, notwithstanding the obstacles (and numerous they are) that have been thrown in the way of coffee-planters. Still there is a serious question of the borer being bored out. A recent Government Order intimates that a Botanical Professor from France, who has lately made coffee-planting his particular study, has made it his wish to come to the South of India and report upon the borer and other enemies to coffee-planting. It is most important, therefore, we think, that the Association of the Coorg planters will take the views of the French Botanist into consideration, and we have no doubt they will benefit thereby. The report from Coorg on experimental cultivation of Liberian coffee in those estates comes to this—that it has proved a complete failure. We are not surprised, because the elevation of the Western ghats is not favourable to the cultivation of this particular kind of coffee; Liberian coffee is better nurtured in warmer climates. As an instance, we may state that this coffee was tried as an experiment in the Lal Bagh gardens, Bangalore, and has proved very successful. The plants were put down two and a-half years ago, and, having flowered, are now in luxuriant growth.—Madras Times.

THE MAHARAJA OF KASHMIR'S GUN FACTORY.—"Touchstone," who has lately been on a visit to Jammu, in Kashmir, writes as follows of the Maharaja's gun foundry:—"From the new palace to the gun foundry is a distance of about half a mile. I had heard that difficulties were thrown in the way of Europeans desirous of inspecting this work, but I found none; and I found that the stories of a great factory being at work turning out cannon and small arms of the latest invention, under scientific superintendence, was all nonsense. The foundry is no foundry at all, though some small mouldings were being made for engine beams. An engine of some three or four horse power was employed for working a few lathes, and a number of wooden patterns of wheels and other parts of peaceful machinery were scattered about. I saw no elaborate machinery, no large casting cauldrons—in fact nothing that betokened a "gun foundry" at all. In a quadrangle behind the workshops were some gun sheds, in which I counted some brass cannon, none of greater calibre than 9-pounders, a number of small hill pieces and some howitzers—in all about two dozen. The carriages, wheels, and ammunition boxes were made according to English patterns, but old ones, and all seemed unable to bear much strain or rough work over bad roads. I saw no rifled, or breech-loading cannon, and the best small arm weapons were the Enfield rifles, five thousand of which were given to the Maharaja at Delhi by the Government of India. The work-shops and gun-sheds were all in native charge; no Europeans or Americans are employed in connection with them.—Madras Times.

ICE FAMINE.—The ice famine is over in Bombay. The ice ship arrived on Wednesday morning; by three or four in the afternoon there was once more a good stock in the ice-house. The ice ship Valley Forge, left Boston on the 31st December; but she experienced fair weather and light winds the whole voyage, being a hundred and forty-two days.

GRATIFICATIONS.—On the 21st of May, Mr. J. Bedford, Examiner of Claims, in the G. I. P. Railway office, was arrested by the police under a warrant issued by the Magistrate of Sholapur, charging him with receiving gratification other than legal remuneration, being a public servant. Mr. Bedford was removed to Sholapur in custody of the police.

SILVER IN THE MINT.—The value of silver in the Mint on the morning of the 6th May was Rs. 2,04,81,919, add silver received during the week Rs. 2,84,724. The sum of Rs. 19,00,000 in new coin was paid during the week; Rs. 38,70,031 was remitted to Calcutta; the balance left was Rs. 1,49,96,612. There is in addition bullion valued at Rs. 4,77,601 belonging to private individuals deposited in the Mint vaults and awaiting assay.—Bombay Gazette.

DEATHS AT GOA.—The Bombay Gazette regrets to learn that there have been two more casualties among the higher Goa officials, caused by the prevailing deadly fever at Pangim. On Friday last, died Dr. Barcellos, the Surgeon of the Governor-General of Portuguese India, and on the following day Lieut. George, Aide-de-Camp. In both instances the fever was only of a few hours' duration, when it proved fatal.

SMALL CAUSE COURT.—In reviewing the annual report forwarded by the Bombay Government on the working of the Court of Small Causes in Bombay for 1877, the Secretary of State refers in the following terms to the late Mr. O'Leary:—"I concur with your Excellency in Council in the estimate formed of the services of the late First Judge of the Court, Mr. O'Leary. He appears to be equally regarded by the legal profession, and by the general community, as an able, courteous, and zealous public servant. His premature death is justly deplored by your Excellency in Council."

STAMPS.—It having been brought to the notice of the Commissioner, Berar, that cotton merchants and agents are in the habit of obtaining receipts from sellers without affixing the usual one anna stamp, as required by the Stamp Act, for sums above twenty rupees, an inquiry was ordered in the matter, and orders have now been issued to those engaged in the cotton trade that if they continue to take the receipts they do at present, without stamping them, they will be prosecuted for infringement of the Stamp Laws. We believe that a similar inquiry by Bombay Collectors will elicit the fact that the practice hitherto followed in the Berars is the custom in this Presidency also.

GOVERNMENT PENSIONERS.—Four years ago the Government of India proposed that dockyard and military artificers should be granted pensions equal to three-fourths of what they would obtain under the Civil code, if their service on pay exceeding Rs. 10 a month were reckoned superior, and it was recommended that a rule should be passed permitting the Bombay Government to grant such pensions, subject to the conditions that pensions should be awarded under this rule only to men incapacitated for further work, and that no artificer who had rendered less than twenty-five years' actual service, excluding breaks and absence from duty of every kind, should receive a pension without the concurrence of the Government of India. Upon the strong representation of that Government the Secretary of State has now sanctioned the passing of a rule to this effect.

GRAIN ROBBERIES.—The statements that have been published to the effect that several of the employés of the G. I. P. R. Company have received notice to quit on account of the report of the Grain Commission implicating them in the robberies of grain that have recently taken place on the G. I. P. R. line are, we hear, totally inaccurate. A number of employés of the G. I. P. R. have been told that their services will be dispensed with when the monsoon commences; but this has nothing to do with the grain robberies, as every year a certain number of employés are discharged when the monsoon commences; and as in consequence of the heavy grain traffic an extra number of hands has been employed this year, there will necessarily be a larger number of hands discharged than usual this monsoon. We make this statement in justice to the employés who are going to leave the railway, as they may find some difficulty in getting fresh employment if it is believed that they have been discharged in consequence of being implicated in the grain robberies.

MATHERAN.—A Matheran newspaper correspondent says:—"The climate is now delightful and the hill is quite full, but it lacks the spirit of fun and frolic which prevailed last year. The Gymkhana is well attended, especially on Tuesdays and Saturdays, but there are few entertainments going on. Picnics are evidently out of fashion this season, and the only amusements are 'Pub. dances,' at which some merry matrons and gleeful girls delight to disport themselves. The hill roads are in excellent order, but the condition of the 'ghaut' is deplorable, some places being absolutely dangerous. When a fatal accident takes place the eyes of the authorities will probably open. The Governor arrived one day (of course by goods train), but his visit was angelic in its brevity. There are all the signs of an early monsoon, and the hotels which now let single rooms to two or three lodgers will probably be empty in a fortnight."

ICE.—The complete collapse of the Tudor Ice Company's ice supply is likely to be gratefully remembered hereafter, especially now that the ice ship has come in. The emergency of the situation has tempted private enterprise to take a share in this profitable trade, and henceforth, whatever official privileges they may continue to retain, the Company have lost their monopoly. They have, too, not only lost the monopoly, but in future, if they trade at all, they will be compelled to sell ice at just half the price obtained for many years past. We have already mentioned that a member of the firm of Messrs. Cutler, Palmer and Co. has made arrangements for establishing an ice factory; we are now informed that another Company, "the Bombay Ice Manufacturing Company, Limited," is in course of formation. So that in a short time the Tudor Company will have two formidable rivals, either of which will guarantee us against the recurrence of such an uncomfortable famine as the last.—Times of India.

MAHABLESHWAR NEWS.—A correspondent, writing to the Times of India from Mahableshwar on the 22nd May, says:—"The Governor is here, and a ball is to be given. Miss Temple was too ill to come up, and so remains at Matheran. The Elphinstone Point tiger has got off; Mr. Ashburner and Major Gillespie had a few shots at the brute, but the density of the jungle and the rocks favoured escape. The Governor's Band play occasionally; the men are in tents. The general exodus commences in a few days, but many will remain until the 15th of June. The Governor rode up from Nagotana; he is a wonderful man for the saddle, and the only surprise is that he is so well after his recent long journey. A small robbery was committed at the bungalow of one of the members of Council a few days ago, but, as usual, the thief has escaped. The place is very full. The price of grain is growing worse, and free trade up here means oppression. The health of the station is excellent. We have fogs every morning."

MUHAMMAD SHAHAB-UD-DIN.—Khan Bahadur, son of the Nawab Jami Jahau, Khan Bahadur, of the Carnatic family, died at Umraoti on the 25th May. He was appointed an attaché to the Resident, Hyderabad, on 13th June, 1873, on the recommendations of the late Lord Hobart, Governor of Madras, and the late Honourable R. S. Ellis. Having passed successfully the prescribed examinations, Shahab-ud-Din was advanced last year to the position of Assistant Commissioner, by the Viceroy. The deceased was an intelligent gentleman, of excellent manners, and a great favourite with all officers in the Berars. He returned last week seriously ill from Hyderabad, where he had proceeded to be present at the marriage festivities of his sister. Shahab-ud-Din was a guest of Colonel Sir Richard Meade at the Delhi Assemblage last year, and both that officer and Lord Lytton will, we are sure, regret the premature decease of a nobleman whose appointment to the Berar Commission, although sanctioned as an experimental measure, proved so successful as to induce the Government to open the superior ranks of the Commission to gentlemen of our native aristocracy.

KARACHI MUNICIPALITY.—The ship Coldstream arrived in Bombay harbour on the 18th May from London with 2,500 cases of kerosine oil for the Karachi Municipality. These cases were bought in London in September last, and by the time they are all landed in Karachi will cost Rs. 14 a case, we understand. The cost of kerosine oil in Bombay at the time this oil was bought in London was about Rs. 8 a case, and now kerosine oil can be bought in Bombay for Rs. 6 to Rs. 6.8 a case, with every probability of the price being lower very shortly. What possessed the managing committee of the Municipality to buy kerosine oil in London when they could have bought any quantity in Bombay we are not able to say. Kerosine oil is shipped to Bombay direct from America, and of course must be cheaper there than in London, but nevertheless this extraordinary bargain has been made. The Municipality have paid more than Rs. 24,000 for this oil, and have incurred other expenses on account of this large purchase, a portion of which is to go to other municipalities, but some of them have refused to take the oil, as the price is too high.—Beacon.

CARRYING OFF THE TANKS.—There is much lamentation in Bombay over the rape of the tanks, which Sir Richard Temple had removed surreptitiously in the night. It seems an absurdity that troops should be unable to go to sea now a-days unless they have their water carried in iron tanks, considering that wooden tanks keep the water sweeter, and have been used by all the navies of the world from the beginning of time up to about ten years ago. We believe that the authorities of the Bombay and Baroda Railway had the greatest difficulty in persuading the Government to run the risk of using a few wooden tanks—so true is it that the prejudice of progress is sometimes as obstructive as the prejudice of conservatism. The real reason for the seizure of the Municipal tanks was however, we believe, that a serious miscalculation had been made as to the quantity of water required for the shipping, and that at the last moment it became necessary to get more tanks at any cost or risk. Moreover, of upwards of 100 tanks supplied by a rascally native contractor, nearly one-half were found to be unfit for use. No doubt, it is intended that the Municipal tanks shall be replaced by new tanks which are now in process of construction, but which will not be ready till the expedition has sailed; but we think the Municipality should insist on being paid for its tanks at the rate allowed to ordinary contractors, in which case it would realise a handsome profit on the transaction.—Bombay Gazette.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Bombay Gazette supplies the following particulars of the remarkable mortality that has recently occurred in the higher official circles at Goa:—"The death of H. E. the Viceroy and Governor-General of Portuguese India, Viscount Sergio de Souza, which sad event occurred at his summer residence (Cabo), is generally deplored by the people, as great results were expected from the measures he had had in contemplation for the improvement of the general condition of the country and for facilitating its trade. The sanitary condition of Goa had also claimed his special attention, and he was determined to make an effort to improve it. Goa, however, seems unfortunate in its destiny, and bids fair to remain a miserable country. The illness of the Governor-General was sudden and soon proved fatal; he was attacked with typhoid fever on the 2nd of May, and died on the following day. The Viscountess left for Portugal on the 25th of May, as also the widow and family of the late Chief Secretary to Government. The body of the late Governor-General has been embalmed, and placed in a vault at the convent of St. Chetano, to be eventually transported to Lisbon. The administration of the country is at present carried on by a Council, which is presided over by his Grace the Archbishop of Goa. Signor Antonio Sergio de Souza, junior has temporarily taken charge of the office of Chief Secretary to Government. He is said to be a man of great ability and energy, and his nomination has given general satisfaction."

THE FADHLI ARABS.—The other day Sultan Ahmad bin Hussain, the newly-elected Chief of the Fadhlis, with a large following, came into Aden to pay his respects to our Resident there, for the first time. The Fadhlis are a tribe of Arabs living along the Arabian coast to the north-east of Aden; the tribe is one of the most powerful and warlike in the neighbourhood. A curious habit is found amongst them, though not universally; they esteem a Zunoos, or illegitimate, far above the legitimate son. The Zunoos are rather proud of their origin, calling themselves after their mother's name;—bin Salma, son of Salma for instance, and the matter reflects discredit on no one. "On the whole," writes General Tremenhare, "considerable laxity of morals appears to prevail amongst these mountaineers." The Indian Government has had dealings with the Fadhlis for some time past; entering into an engagement in 1839, after the bombardment and capture of Aden. We promised to pay them a small yearly stipend, which, ratified by successive treaties, is still continued. Old Sultan Ahmad, the father of the present man, gave us a good deal of trouble. When he was some ninety years old, he came into our territory, within gun-shot of our fortifications, and attacked a kafila, with the avowed intention of annoying us. The old patriarch next got together a large force, meaning, he said, to sit down on the roads for two months, to destroy the ripened crops, "and to show the English what he could do." They dare not, he added, move beyond their walls. So Col. Merewether, the Resident, had to send an expedition; and at last old Sultan Ahmad gave in, pledging himself to abstain in the future from all plunder and violence, to keep the peace, to protect merchants and travellers, and to send a hostage, for good behaviour, to Aden. Sultan Ahmad died in 1870, and was succeeded by his elder son, Haidara, who in turn was succeeded the other day by a second son of Ahmad's, Hussain. This Hussain, General Tremenhare described as "a man of hot, proud temperament, and little inclined to follow in the steps of his more prudent brother." So the Fadhlis are not unlikely to give us trouble again.—Pioneer.

THE QUEEN-EMPRESS'S BIRTHDAY.—The anniversary of the birth of Her Majesty the Queen-Empress was duly celebrated on the 25th May throughout the Indian Empire. In Bombay, as in Calcutta and some other places, the day was, by general assent, observed as a holiday; some of the ships in the harbour were gaily decked with quite a profusion of flags, but the suggestion that there should be an ad fresco entertainment was not taken up, and there were no public rejoicings, if the military display in the evening on the Oval be excepted. The whole of the troops stationed in Bombay took part in the tumasha in front of the Secretariat, the Rifle Volunteers also, by the wish of the military authorities, joining in. These last mustered about two-hundred, all told. . . . Each regiment was played on to the ground by its own band, and carried the colours. The Brigadier-General was represented by Colonel Hailes, commanding the Royal Artillery at Colaba, who was accompanied by Captain Cooke-Collis, Brigade Staff, and Lieutenant Heath, Deputy Assistant Quarter Master-General. The ceremony began about a quarter to six, and lasted scarcely half an hour. A salute of thirty-one guns, in three salvos, was fired from the land battery, and the feu de joie of the troops was fired between each discharge by the artillery.

The bands played the National Anthem, and at the close of the firing, three cheers were given by the troops for Her Majesty. They were then ordered to break into column to the right, and the march-past commenced in the order given above. The European soldiers and the Volunteers wore white uniforms, which contrasted not unpleasantly with the more showy exterior of the native troops. The 22nd N.I. justly attracted favourable notice on this its first public appearance in Bombay, since its removal from Ahmedabad, and the playing of the band of this regiment was very creditable to the native instrumentalists and the music-master, Herr Thomas. The officers of the Bombay volunteers and a few guests dined at the Apollo Bunder Refreshment Rooms on Saturday night; Colonel Sexton filling the chair. . . . The health of Her Majesty was drunk with enthusiasm, and the Volunteer band played the National Anthem, also performing several times during the rest of the evening.—Times of India.

Ceylon.

CAPE GUARDAFUI.

This lighthouse question is of so great an interest to most of the Europeans in Ceylon that they will heartily agree with the Pioneer as to the necessity of something being done in the matter. The coast which it is proposed to light has proved fatal to many a gallant craft, and one of the first ships lost there was shortly after the opening of the Suez Canal. She was the John Dryden, and went ashore near Ras Haffoon, eighty-four miles south of Cape Guardafui. The next ships to lay their bones on the same coast were the Parnassus, laden with tea; the Tenasserim, Rangoon steamer; the Singapore, a Calcutta passenger ship; the Kangchaw, which was lost on the west side whilst bound to China; and, more recently, the Meikong and the Cashmere, the particulars of which disasters are still fresh in the memories of Ceylon people. All these wrecks forcibly indicate the dangerous nature of the locality, and would suggest a new route during the S.W. monsoon. In the opinion of an experienced navigator, Captain Lapage, of the Star steamer Pleiades, whose familiarity with the passage through the Suez Canal to Colombo and Calcutta enables him to speak with some confidence and authority, a full-powered steamer will easily steam against the monsoon after leaving Colombo and not lose much ground passing to the eastward of Socotra, which is the new route; but a steamer going down from Calcutta or Rangoon would find it more expeditious to go to the southward, and thereby escape both wind and current. None of these steamers would therefore go east of Socotra, but would take the usual Guardafui route, their commanders trusting to their own skill to keep clear of danger. But it will be remembered that the skill of the captain of the Meikong, who was on the bridge when the steamer went aground, and who had been running the same route for many years, did not save the steamer. Perhaps he was too venturesome; and it may be here remarked that if the land is not made before nightfall there is plenty of room to go twenty miles north of Guardafui before turning to the westward. Whilst, however, a light on Cape Guardafui would be a great blessing, it may also prove to be a great curse, owing to the fact that the land is invariably covered with a haze, and a commander might run for the beacon, expecting to see it ten miles off, and by the treacherous currents be driven on shore close to the light. Nevertheless, a light will be an improvement, if the natives do not destroy it, which will have to be guarded against. Now that the British Government have bought Socotra, there will in time be a coaling station made there, and then all vessels will go east of Socotra if they want coal. It is therefore all the more apparent that every precaution should be taken to render this part of the passage from England to Ceylon and India as safe as human appliances can make it; and we earnestly trust that the respective Governments concerned will lose no further time in preliminary negotiations, but will at once erect the beacon, and subsequently settle about its cost and maintenance.

Miscellaneous.

COFFEE.—There is no change in the prospects of the coffee crop for 1878-79, the weather continuing favourable to the maturing of wood and the development of blossom. If there be any difference to note, it will be found in the reports from the Matale and Kallebokka districts, from which the accounts are more favourable than they were a month ago. Recent fine weather has induced the show of several blossoms, which in the aggregate will, it is believed, make up fairly average crops. Picking on the Ouvah side of the island is now well advanced, and, so far as we have heard, with good results, both as regards quantity and quality.—Ceylon Times, May 7.

THE GOVERNOR'S MOVEMENTS.—H.E. the Governor and Lady Longden have left Nuwera Eliya for the Pavilion, Kandy; and Sir James Longden, according to arrangements, was to attend a meeting of the Executive Council in Colombo; subsequently returning to Kandy for the celebration of the Queen's birthday, and the opening of the Prince of Wales's Fountain.

MUSKETRY PRIZES.

Head Quarters, Simla, April 30.—The Commander-in-Chief in India has much pleasure in publishing to the army the result of the competition, by the British and native armies serving in Bengal, for his Excellency's musketry prizes.

283 non-commissioned officers and men of the royal artillery and British cavalry, 2,771 of the British infantry, 319 of the native cavalry, and 7,437 of the native infantry competed for these prizes.

The results are, in the opinion of Sir F. P. Haines, most satisfactory. His Excellency's congratulations are offered to—

The 11th "Prince Albert's Own" Hussars (now in England), on having made the best average score among the royal artillery and British cavalry.

The 1st battalion 14th (Buckinghamshire) regiment, on having won the Commander-in-Chief's Cup with the splendid score of 745 points.

Colour Sergeant J. J. MacManus, of the 1st Battalion 5th Northumberland Fusiliers, on having made with the Martini-Henry rifle the best score among all the Infantry competitors, 48 out of a possible 56 points, at 700 and 800 yards, and on having won his Excellency's prize gold watch.

Troop Sergeant Major Jennings, 11th (Prince Albert's Own) Hussars, on being the best shot in the Royal Artillery and British Cavalry, and the winner of the Commander-in-Chief's prize sword.

The 4th Punjab Infantry, on having made the best aggregate score, 632 points, of the 53 regiments which competed, with the Snider rifle: thus winning the Commander-in-Chief's money prize of Rs. 100; and to Naick Lakha Singh, of the same regiment, on having won "The Magdala medal, with the fine score of 47 out of a possible 56 points, at 500 and 600 yards.

Sowar Zulfikar Khan, 15th Bengal Carleton's Mooltanee Cavalry, on being the best shot in the Native Cavalry, and winner of his Excellency's prize sword.

Sir F. P. Haines also desires that his approval may be made known to the competitors generally in all regiments, and particularly to the winning teams of the 1-14th foot, and 4th Punjab Infantry.

THE LUCKNOW SOLDIERS' INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION.

H.E. the C. in C. has much pleasure in publishing to the Bengal Army the results of the Soldiers' Industrial Exhibition, held at Lucknow in Nov. last.

The Exhibition, as to the number of corps competing, has been a small one, but, though small, it has proved in no way inferior as regards quality; and further, as regimental committees have certified that the articles exhibited were bona fide the work of the men, the C. in C. considers the result satisfactory on the whole. The articles exhibited were divided into sixteen classes; and of the thirty-nine corps and departments which exhibited, a total of one hundred and forty-one exhibitors in the different classes were represented; amongst these, H.E. observes, eleven contributors from four different native regiments.

The C. in C. is gratified with the remarks of the committee on some of the articles exhibited by men of British regiments, the details of which are given in their report. The conduct of the men who assisted in the work and decoration of the Exhibition is also favourably reported on.

H.E. begs to express his best thanks to Lieut. gen. C. T. Chamberlain, c.s.i., comdg. Oudh div., and to the committee, for the efficient manner in which they carried out their duties, and to whom is mainly due the satisfactory results of the Exhibition.

Comdg. officers are recommended to purchase copies of the report for distribution amongst their men.

The next Exhibition, confined to the Bengal Presy., will be held at Meeran Meer in the first week of Nov. next.

THE MADRAS NATIVE ARMY—CONFIDENTIAL REPORTS ON NATIVE OFFICERS. H.E. Sir Neville Chamberlain has issued the following Order, dated June 21:—

It being necessary that the Commander-in-Chief should always have at his disposal full information as to the character, qualifications, and services of each native officer of the army, H.E. directs that a confidential report affording this information be annually submitted by every officer in command of a native regiment.

2. This report is to be prepared in accordance with the form which will be issued by the Adjutant General, and is to accompany the annual inspection report, of which it will in future form part.

3. Through the means of such reports the Commander-in-Chief will become possessed of reliable information on a subject most important to the future well-being and efficiency of the Native Army—through them native officers of high character and qualifications will be able to feel assured that their merits are known to the Commander-in-Chief and Government, and are to be found year by year on record; whilst any native officer not deserving to come within that category will also be aware that his shortcomings stand registered against him.

4. As nothing to the prejudice of any native officer's character should stand on record against him in this report, without his being aware of the fact, the Commander-in-Chief directs that whenever a native officer is unfavourably reported upon therein, the purport of such entry is to be communicated to him by the commanding officer at orderly room, in the presence of the wing, or squadron commander, and of the adjutant of the regiment.

5. Government has of late years done much to raise the position and to increase the emoluments of the native officers of the army, and in return it requires from them efficiency, probity, impartiality, and continuous devotion to duty.

PENSION RULES.

Paragraph 16, Section 27, is reconstructed as follows:—

The ordinary pension is claimable after thirty-two years' service, irrespective of fitness or unfitness for further service; and it is in the power of the Commander-in-Chief to remove any native soldier to the pension list after that period of service should he see fit to do so. No commissioned or non-commissioned officer who has not been disabled on actual service shall be entitled to the pension of the rank he may hold when invalidated or pensioned, unless he shall have served in that rank for three complete years. Should he not have served three years in the rank, he will only be entitled to the pension of the next lower grade, provided his united service in the rank he held when invalidated, or pensioned, and in the next inferior grade, amounts together to full three years. The second and third clauses of this paragraph do not apply to those officers and non-commissioned officers who attained their position before 1st April, 1878.

RECRUITING for the native army is being carried on strenuously by agents in Madras as well as in the districts. Nearly four hundred recruits have been enlisted at Arcot and its immediate vicinity.

THE ringleaders in the late outbreak in the Rangoon Central Jail have been found guilty and sentenced to transportation for life.

THE Famine Commissioner of Mairpur has published a farewell minute, thanking the officers of the local Commission generally for loyalty and good-will, and all who helped in the famine work, for their services.

THE German residents of Calcutta have sent, through their consul, a telegram congratulating the Emperor William on his late escape from assassination.

THE export of tea from Calcutta to Great Britain in April last was 282,776 lbs., as compared with 323,634 lbs. exported in April last year.

SEVERAL more of the Surat rioters have been sentenced to transportation, some to fines, and others to various shorter terms of imprisonment.

IN the month of March last only 377 emigrants left Calcutta, all of whom went to Mauritius.

Home.

ARRIVAL OF SPECIE.—The P. and O. Company's steamer Venetia, from Bombay, has arrived with specie to the value of £181,840, consisting of sovereigns, with the exception of £1,190 in silver.

BILLS ON INDIA.—At the Bank of England on Wednesday tenders were received for £400,000 in bills on India. The amounts allotted were: to Calcutta £392,000, and to Bombay £8,000; 1s. 8s. 16d. will receive about 32 per cent.; above that price in full; on Bombay at 1s. 8d., in full. These terms are about 1-16 lower for Calcutta, but show no change for Bombay. At the point to which silver has now fallen the metal may come into competition with the Council drafts as a medium of remittance to India.

THE TELEGRAPH IN JAPAN.—The Japanese Government are evidently losing no time in extending their system of telegraphic communication, for we learn from a Japan contemporary that there are now 125 telegraph stations in the country, and it is estimated that there are 5,000 miles of wire in operation; 1,000 miles more are in course of construction, and still further extensions are contemplated. Considering that the first telegraph line for practical purposes was not erected in Japan before the end of 1869, the result achieved is by no means unsatisfactory.—Nature.

SOCIETY OF ARTS' CONVERSAZIONE.—The council and members of the Society of Arts gave a conversazione last night at the South Kensington Museum. The guests were received by the council in the Architectural Court, where the audience chamber of the Palace of Akbar Khan at Fathpur Sikri, near Agra, with its remarkably carved central throne pillar, formed an admirable reception-room.
 Music was added to the attractions of the picture galleries and loan collections, which were all thrown open, the band of the Coldstream Guards in the South Court and the band of the Royal Marines in the North Court performing alternately. In the lecture theatre the London Glee and Madrigal Union sang many of our most beautiful part songs. About 2,500 persons were present during the evening.

ROYAL ASIATIC SOCIETY.—At the meeting of this society, held on Monday last, June 17, Sir H. C. Rawlinson, F.R.S., President, in the chair, Mr. R. N. Cust read a paper "On the Present State of Linguistic Research in India, and on the Chief Living Anglo-Indian Scholars," in which he reviewed at great length all that had been done recently, and was still doing, for the promotion of Oriental literature, mentioning for each district under his survey, beginning from Bombay on the south-west to Bengal and Assam on the extreme east, all the grammars, dictionaries, or vocabularies, with which he had become acquainted, representing, probably on the whole, not less than 180 dialects or languages. His object was to collect information as to the modern dialects and languages rather than as to the Sanskrit; and at the same time, to mention the names of every scholar of eminence in India and Europe, and the particular lines of study on which each one had been engaged, with the results thus obtained for the general history of Oriental languages. The Council nominated Messrs. Chenery and Brandreth as delegates from the Asiatic Society to the Oriental Congress at Florence.

PASSAGE OF INDIAN TROOPS.—According to the Alexandria correspondent of the Times, the only hitch in the smooth progress of the expedition was in the case of the Indian dhow, or, as her master called her, the Bagla Jabri. She was a strange-looking craft, built in the Persian Gulf, manned by natives, and had never before been out of Indian waters. She carried one gigantic mast with an enormous sail, which made her plunge about in a gale in a most marvellous fashion. She was only trusted with baggage horses and packing cases. Together with the sailing ship Seaforth, the Bagla was in tow of the steamer Trinacria, and the three encountered a strong gale in the Red Sea. After many breakings of the tow ropes and several small collisions, the captain of the Trinacria decided they must part company, a decision by no means to the liking of the Hindustani ship, though they were to the windward of Jeddah at no great distance. The captain of the dhow relates the incident somewhat graphically:—"The Seaforth was so close to me that three of the men in charge of my horses jumped on board her, being afraid of our sinking. The captain told us to go to Jeddah. I replied I would not. He wrote on a board in Hindustani, 'You must go to Jeddah.' I replied on a board in Hindustani, 'I will not. Wherever the steamer goes, I will go.'"
 At last when night came he was cut adrift, and on the evening of the next day he arrived at Jeddah with no loss either of cargo or cattle. Thence he was fetched by the Spartan gunboat, and got to Port Said on the 3rd of June, where his horses and baggage were transhipped to the steamship Goa, which had returned from Malta for the purpose. I should think it is the last time the Indian Government would engage a dhow.

CAMBRIDGE INFLUENCE ON INDIA.—The Board of Oriental Studies has issued a report recommending that natives of India be allowed to substitute at the previous examination one or more of the Sanskrit

or Arabic classes, or a selected portion of such classic or classics, instead of the Greek subjects required of ordinary undergraduates; and that, instead of the paper on Latin and Greek grammar, they have the choice of a paper on Latin and Sanskrit grammar. The Board states its reason for this recommendation, that they have taken into consideration the difficulties experienced by natives of the East in their preparation for the first part of the previous examination. Greek and Latin, the classical languages of Europe, are for the most part entirely unknown to natives of India when they come into residence at Cambridge; such students are, therefore, much more heavily burdened than those who have been habituated from their boyhood to the study of Greek and Latin. It should also be remembered that these languages are in this case acquired merely for the purpose of passing the previous examination, and are practically useless to natives of India after their return to their own country. It is quite possible that such students may improve their education by the study of Latin, which at least throws light upon the history of English, but no adequate educational gain is secured by the study of Greek. It appears to the Board that the education of such students might be better promoted by requiring them to take in for examination one of the classical languages of the East—Sanskrit or Arabic—in lieu of Greek. These languages are in general imperfectly known to the students in question, but by virtue of a cognate vocabulary they can acquire either of them more easily than they can Greek, and such an acquisition will be a clear gain to them after their return to India.—Times.

AFRICAN EXPLORATION.—A meeting of the Royal Geographical Society was held on the 14th inst., Sir Rutherford Alcock in the chair, at which a report from the African Exploration Committee was received, stating that Mr. Keith Johnston recommended the exploration of the country between Mombas and Victoria Nyanza, passing by Mount Kenai; Mr. Stanley, the examination of the valley of the Refigi; while a third proposition was that the country from the caravan road now constructing a few miles north of Zanzibar should be explored up to the northern end of Lake Nyassa. The committee continued: "Having carefully considered these several fields of exploratory labour, your committee recommend the last-mentioned as the best calculated to yield valuable results within the compass of the means at their disposal, which amount at present to £1,400; or, assuming that the council might be disposed to make a further grant of £500, to £1,900." It was suggested that means should be taken to induce the public to contribute more largely to the work of African exploration.—Mr. Holmwood, political agent at Zanzibar, in reply to a question, said that throughout Eastern Africa pastoral tribes were found to be fierce and treacherous, and agricultural tribes, on the other hand, were found to be peaceful, so that one might travel through them with merely a carpet-bag and an umbrella. The route now chosen by the society would be largely through agricultural districts.—Mr. Keith Johnston thanked the society for the honour they had done him in selecting him.—Sir Henry Rawlinson was of opinion that if this expedition was carried out successfully, the public would be induced to come forward and support them in more ambitious schemes.—Mr. Frewen, who has recently returned from an exploration in Southern Africa, suggested that this expedition should in some way be combined with the project for establishing an extended telegraphic system in Africa.—The report was adopted, and it was further resolved that, "In the opinion of the meeting, the route recommended by the Exploration Committee is, under all the circumstances, the best to be adopted." On the motion of Sir Harry Verney, a vote of thanks to the chairman was agreed to, and the meeting separated.

MADRAS RAILWAY COMPANY.—The annual general meeting of the shareholders was held on Tuesday last, at the Cannon-street Hotel—Col. J. T. Smith in the chair. In their report the directors stated the total receipts from goods and passenger traffic were much in excess of those of the corresponding period last year; but the net profits had only slightly improved in consequence of the very heavy expenses incurred, and were equivalent to a dividend at the rate of £3 1s. 3d. per cent. per annum. The Chairman alluded to the great benefits which had been conferred upon India during the famine by the extension of railways. As far as this railway was concerned, thirty new and powerful engines had been constructed, and were now doing valuable service. The efforts which had been made to relieve the misfortunes of the country had therefore been of some benefit to the company in their undertaking. One of the first obstacles met by Government in their efforts to grapple with the famine was the great difficulty of communicating with the interior of the country, and to meet this difficulty feeder roads were constructed. Those connected with the Madras Railway had since had the effect of permanently increasing their business, and Government seemed to have come to the conclusion that the best way of combating any future calamity was to open up all parts of the interior of India by means of railways. Three other great works likely to benefit this company were also in progress, namely, the extension of their Bellary branch, the junction with the Irrigation Company's canal, and the construction of a network of railways in the Mysore dominion in connection with their system. He then formally moved the adoption of the report, which, being seconded by Mr. W. H.

Crake, was after some discussion carried unanimously. A resolution enabling further capital to be raised was then passed, and the meeting terminated in the usual manner.

MUSLIM TEACHING.—The number last issued of the Transactions of the German Oriental Society contains an interesting essay, by Dr. A. Sprenger, on the instruction given in the high schools of the Mussulmans in all the countries they inhabit, and chiefly in India. Dr. Sprenger's essay is not only of literary importance, but contains information valuable to those who are interested in a definite, or at least a durable, settlement of the Eastern Question. He compares the Mussulman treatises of logic to those of Aldrich and Whately. The instruction amongst Mussulmans is everywhere the same, entirely scholastical and dialectical. Dr. Sprenger quotes the passage from his Report to the Government in 1852, when he proposed a scheme of study for the Kalkutta-Madrasa:—

"The sophistries of dialectics learned in a sacred language puff up the professors with conceit, render them hostile to everything practical or founded on experience, and extinguish in them the sense for art and beauty, and blunt the sentiment of equity and morality. . . . The schoolmen, not contented with proscribing the study of history, of nature, and of every science founded on facts, perverted other sciences which are useful in themselves, like grammar and natural philosophy; and this spirit pervades every branch of knowledge."

On the other hand, Dr. Sprenger continues to say that the relation between school and church in Islām is much more free and more solid than it has ever been in Christendom. Islām knows no confined hierarchy with a Pope at its head, and therefore there was always much more liberty of teaching than in Catholic countries, and in the school philosophemes are taught which are in contradiction to the Korān. Dr. Sprenger concludes his essay by portraying the following gloomy prospect for the civilised world:—

"Since the learned men in Islām, trained, uniformly, take the place of our clergy and magistrature, these being the salt of the earth, they communicate that uniform training to the nation. And from this fact it follows that all the Mussulmans, whether Semites, Arians, or Turanians by origin, whether living in hot India or in dreary Khiva, have the same character, a fact which was too little taken into consideration by ethnographers. Their most serious peculiarity is the contempt which they show for modern institutions. The irreconcilableness of a hundred millions of Mussulmans, who inhabit the most beautiful countries of the earth, and who are not capable of governing themselves, and yet are neither permitted nor willing to tolerate the domination of strangers, will give plenty of occupation not only to the English and Russians, but to all the civilised world."

India in Parliament.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, MONDAY, June 17.—THE JAWARI AFRIDIS.—Mr. E. STANHOPE, replying to Mr. HERSCHEL, said that despatches relating to military proceedings against the Jawari Afridis had been forwarded by the Viceroy of India to this country.

HOUSE OF COMMONS, TUESDAY, June 18.—THE PRESS LAW IN INDIA.—Mr. GLADSTONE said he had received a petition from a public meeting of inhabitants of Puna and certain members of a society there on the subject of the recent law relating to the vernacular press. The petition contained an elaborate and able argument against that law, and it closed with a prayer "that your Honourable House, as the only authority to whom her Majesty's subjects can appeal for redress and protection against arbitrary acts of authority in India, will not only condemn the measure which forms the subject of the present appeal, but it will also make the further continuance of the present policy impossible, and ensure the progressive freedom of her Majesty's Indian subjects, by enlarging the representative element in the Legislative Council of India, and by directing the adoption of such other measures as may seem fit to your Honourable House." The right hon. gentleman went on to say that in substance this was a regular petition, concluding with a prayer to the House; but there were two irregularities—namely, that it was called a memorial, and that between the petition and the first signature were the words, "We beg to remain, honourable sir, your most humble memorialists." But he considered that these were clerical errors.—THE CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER:—How is it headed?—Mr. GLADSTONE said the heading was "Memorial to the Honourable Commons of the United Kingdom in Parliament assembled, the humble memorial of inhabitants of Puna," &c. Being convinced that the irregularities were clerical errors, he proposed to strike them out if the Speaker were of opinion that the proceeding was proper, and to present the petition in the usual manner.—THE SPEAKER: I have examined the document, and, although it is termed a memorial, it is substantially a properly worded petition, concluding with a prayer. I am of opinion that, under the circumstances, the petition may be received if the House should think proper to receive it. The petition was then received, and ordered to lie on the table.

THE INDIAN ARMY.—Sir H. HAVELOCK stated that he should postpone the motion of which he had given notice regarding the Indian army, as he did not wish to discuss the question so long as affairs in Eastern Europe were in any way doubtful.

THE INDIAN TROOPS AT MALTA.—Mr. ASHBURY postponed a question of which he had given notice, asking the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether in the event of the Berlin Congress resulting in peace, her Majesty's Government would consider the advisability of asking Parliament for powers to bring to England the Indian troops now in Malta, in order to give her Majesty the Queen and the people an opportunity of seeing representatives of our Indian army. And, furthermore, whether if for any reason it was not thought desirable to bring over the entire body, representative detachments from each regiment might be selected for inspection in England.

NOTES ON MUHAMMADANISM

REV. T. P. HUGHES, M.R.A.S.,
 C. M. S., Missionary to the Afghans, Peshawar.

Opinions of the Press on the First Edition.

"Altogether an admirable little book. It combines two excellent qualities, abundance of facts and lack of the-dries. On every one of the numerous heads (over fifty) into which the book is divided Mr. Hughes furnishes a large amount of very valuable information, which it would be exceedingly difficult to collect from even a large library of works on the subject. The book might well be called a 'Dictionary of Muhammadan Theology,' for we know of no English work which combines a methodical arrangement (and consequently facility of reference), with fulness of information in so high a degree as the little volume before us."—The Academy.

"It contains multum in parvo, and is about the best outlines of the tenets of the Muslim faith which we have seen. It has, moreover, the rare merit of being accurate; and although it contains a few passages which we would gladly see expunged, it cannot fail to be useful to all Government employés who have to deal with Muhammadans, whilst to Missionaries it will be invaluable."—The Times of India.

"This small book is the most luminous, most convenient, and, we think, the most accurate, outline of the tenets and practices of Islamism that we have met with. It seems exactly the sort of comprehensive and trustworthy book in small compass, on this subject, that we and many more have often looked for in vain. The author has evidently studied his subject in a faithful, laborious, and scholarly manner, and has not only studied but mastered it. The work is of great value for general students, and for men whose work lies among the Muhammadan population, such as Civil Servants and Missionaries, it seems to be the very work that is wanted."—The Friend of India.

"In brief compass it contains a large amount of reliable information. Instead of theories and fancies, facts are placed before us. Muhammadanism is represented as it really is, not as it is supposed that it might possibly be. Instead of retailing the speculations current in literary society at home, Mr. Hughes furnishes us with brief but incisive statements, which, so far as they go, leave nothing to be desired."—The Church Missionary Intelligencer.

"It is manifest throughout the work that we have before us the opinions of one thoroughly conversant with the subject, and who is uttering no random notions. We strongly recommend 'Notes on Muhammadanism.' Our Clergy especially, even though they are not Missionaries, and have no intention of labouring amongst Muhammadans or consorting with them, ought to have at least as much knowledge of the system as can be most readily acquired, with a very little careful study, from this useful treatise."—The Record.

"Its value as a means of correcting the common impressions about Islam will reveal itself to the most cursory reader, while the author's evident scholarship and intimate knowledge of his subject bespeak for him a patient hearing on points the most open to controversy."—Allen's Indian Mail.

PYRETIC SALINE.

USE NO SUBSTITUTE.—See perpetual injunction against imitators: also the unanimous judgment before the Lords Justices Bramwell, Brett, and Cotton, Jan. 22, 1878, in H. Lamplough's favour.

Important to all, more especially English Ministers, British Consuls, and Europeans seeking to reside in safety in Tropical and Foreign Climates.

Her Majesty's Representative, the Governor of Sierra Leone, in a letter of request for an additional supply of PYRETIC SALINE, states:—"It is of great value, and I shall rejoice to hear it is in the hands of all Europeans visiting the tropics."

SICKNESS, HEADACHE, and NAUSEA are in most cases immediately relieved by taking a teaspoonful of PYRETIC SALINE. This can be repeated once or twice in two hours, if needful.

SEA VOYAGES.—It is a very valuable accompaniment, and should on no account be omitted. It instantly allays the sea or bilious sickness.

For BILIOUS CONSTITUTIONS, giving rise to vitiated secretions, Indigestion, and Eruptions on the Skin, a teaspoonful should be taken daily with the dinner in a tumbler of water, and the same quantity on going to bed. May be obtained of the Proprietor,

H. LAMPLOUGH, Consulting Chemist, 113, HOLBORN, E.C.,

GRATEFUL-COMFORTING. EPPS'S COCOA. BREAKFAST.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—See Article in the Civil Service Gazette.
